PREFACE.

Among other matters of special interest contained in the present issue of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book mention may be made of the following:

The new postal savings bank law of the United States. This is regarded as one of the most important pieces of legislation in recent years, for which reason the text of the act is given in full.

The amendments to the interstate-commerce law, including provisions for a commerce court to supplement the work of the commission.

Details of the old-age and industrial pension systems of various countries of the world. In view of proposed state and national legislation on this subject it is believed that the information given is timely and suggestive.

Results of the thirteenth decennial census of the United States, showing the growth of population in the various states and territories and in the principal cities. The county population will be found in the election tables.

State, congressional and local elections in 1910, showing a marked reversal of political sentiment in many parts of the country.

These are but a few of the many new and old features which should make The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1911 a reference work of exceptional value. It may also be noted that in the effort to add to the general usefulness and comprehensiveness of the book it has been found necessary to increase its size by thirty-two pages, making the total in this issue 640.

INDEX—1911.

ERAS OF TIME.

The Gregorian year 1911 corresponds to the following eras.

From July 4 the 136th year of the independence of the United States.	The year 7419-20 of the Byzantine era; year 7420 begins Sept. 1.
The year 8020 of the Greek church beginning Jan. 14.	The first day of January, 1911, is the 2,419,038th day since the beginning of the Julian period.
The year 2571 (nearly) of the Japanese era beginning Jan. 30.

CHRONOLOGICAL CYCLES.

Dominical or Sunday letter..	A	Solar cycle.....	16	Dionysian period.....	240
Golden number.....	12	Roman indiction.....	9	Jewish lunar cycle.....	9
Epact (moon's age, Jan. 1)..	30	Julian period.....	6624

EXPLANATORY NOTE—The Dominical letter or letters (two for leap year), or Sunday letters, indicate the day of the year on which the first Sunday occurs, the first seven letters of the alphabet being used. Thus, for 1910, the Dominical letter is B, the second letter of the alphabet, and hence the second day of the year will be the first Sunday of the year. In leap years two letters are used, the first being for January and February, and the latter, being the preceding letter, answers for the last ten months, in order to maintain the cycle. The rule for obtaining the Dominical letter for any year is somewhat complicated and for that reason is omitted here. The Golden Number is that number of a cycle of nineteen years which shows how many years have elapsed since the new moon fell on Jan. 1, for in nearly nineteen years the solar and lunar years nearly come together. The chief use of this cycle is in fixing the date of Easter, and in this same connection is used the Epact. The Solar Cycle is the number of years that have elapsed since the days of the week fell on the same days of the year, or when there will, therefore, be a recurrence of the Dominical or Sunday Letter. This would be the case every seven years but for leap year, hence four times seven is the cycle, or twenty-eight years. It is the remainder found by adding nine to the year and dividing the sum by twenty-eight. The Roman Indiction is a cycle of fifteen years and is of no utility except to chronologers. It is the remainder found by adding three to the year and dividing by fifteen. The Julian Period is a cycle of 7,980 years and is the product of the three cycles, Golden Number (10), Solar Cycle (28) and Roman Indiction (15), and hence shows the time when these cycles will coincide, or begin at the same time. The first of this cycle will be completed in the year 2267; it is the year + 4713. The Dionysian Period is a cycle of 532 years and is called the great Paschal cycle, being the product of a completed solar and lunar cycle (28×19). It is the remainder found by adding 457 to the year and dividing by 532, and with the Julian Period is chiefly used by chronologers. The Jewish Lunar Cycle is always three less than the Golden Number and is used by the Jews in fixing the time of their festivals.

NOTE.—To ascertain any day of the week first look in the table for the year required and under the months are figures which refer to the corresponding figures at the head of the columns of days below. For example: To know on what day of the week July 4 was in the year 1895, in the table of years look for 1895, and in a parallel line, under July, is figure 1, which directs to column 1, in which it will be seen that July 4 falls on Thursday.

*1752 same as 1772 from Jan. 1 to Sept. 2. From Sept. 14 to Dec. 31 same as 1780 (Sept. 3-13 were omitted).—This Calendar is from Whitaker's London Almanac, with some revisions.

THE PLANETS.

MERCURY (♿) will be brightest:

(a) As an evening star April 1-10 and Dec. 4-10—setting about 1h. 15m. after the sun, being at greatest angular distance east of the sun April 14 (19°) and Dec. 7 (21°). At the April date he will be in \times directly south of Alpha Arctis and the line of stars in the horn of the Ram, and in December in \times near the end of the handle of the milkmaid's dipper. On April 10 he will be 4° south of ν and on Sept. 24 ν will be 6° north of ν .

(b) As a morning star Feb. 1-5 and Sept. 23-30, rising about 1h. 15m. before the sun, being at greatest angular distance west of the sun Feb. 2 (25°) and Sept. 25 (18°). When brightest in February the milkmaid's dipper in \times will be about 10° west of him, and in September the Sickle in α will be about 15° degrees west of him. The absence of the moon on the February and September periods will render those dates still more favorable.

VENUS (♀), the "queen of beauty," and whose sign is a looking glass, will be a most attractive celestial object nearly all of the year. Twice she will be at her very brightest—first, Aug. 8-12, as an evening star, and again after passing between the earth and sun (inferior conjunction) as a morning star, Oct. 21-25. (See Table of the Planets and Chart of Visibility of the Planets.) Venus not only attains a greater degree of brilliancy than any of the other planets, but at such times, and for about a month before and after, she will show a large crescent phase like the moon between new and the quarters. At the October date she will shine with unusual splendor in the absence of the moon, and will cast a distinct shadow. While the unneved figure shows all the various phases through which the planet passes, the telescope shows the boundaries away from the sun to be irregular. The light will blend off and the margins will be more or less jagged, owing to the refraction of the sunlight in the planet's atmosphere and the irregularities of her surface, mountains, etc. The discovery of these phases was the work of the first telescope in the hands of Galileo, though their existence was believed earlier.

As seen in the morning west of sun.

As seen in the evening east of sun.

Explanation:

- A—Fifteen days before superior conjunction or June 20, 1912.
- B—At greatest elongation (angular distance) west of the sun, Nov. 26, 1911.
- C—When brightest as a morning star, Oct. 21-25, 1911.
- D—Just after inferior conjunction, Sept. 20, 1911.
- E—Fifteen days after superior conjunction, or July 20, 1912.
- F—At greatest elongation east of the sun, July 7, 1911.
- G—When brightest as an evening star, Aug. 8-12, 1911.
- H—Just before inferior conjunction, Sept. 10, 1911.

In following the course of the planets the reader will do well to use the other aids in this almanac—"Chart of the Heavens," "Table of the Rising, Setting and Setting of the Planets," etc. Locate the planets in the zodiac on the chart and then follow them in their course past the stars, noting when they are in conjunction with the moon, stars or other planets.

ITINERARY OF THE PRINCIPAL PLANETS.

At the beginning of the year ν will be found 5° north of milkmaid's dipper in \times ; Jan. 11 just south of the brightest star in δ and on the boundary between \times and δ ; σ δ Feb. 1, ν 3° 37' north; Feb. 8 in α 10° south of the λ on the equator of the heavens; Feb. 26 on the prime meridian of the heavens 15° south of the square of Pegasus; σ δ March 2, ν 2° 3' north; enters \times March 26-29; April 1, σ δ , ν 14° north and occulted; April 15 5° south of the Pleiades; April 26, 7° north of Aldebaran, the lucida of the Hyades; May 1, σ δ , ν 1° 29' south; May 7, in eastern ν and due north of Orion's belt 24°; May 15 in line northward with the bright stars in the feet of the twins (α) with the brightest star of the heavens (Sirius) due south of her about 40°. Note that an immense diamond is formed by Venus on the north, Sirius on the south, Betelgeuse on the west and Procyon on the east—a most striking figure in the evening skies west of the meridian. May 29-30 between Castor and Pollux in \times on the north and Procyon on the south, but nearest the former and 3° north of ν ; June 12-13 in σ on northern edge of the group of dim stars called Praesepe; June 29 σ δ , ν 3° 40'; July 5-6 less than 1° north of Regulus in the end of the handle of the Sickle; brightest Aug. 8-12 when about 15° east of Regulus near the middle of where she soon becomes stationary with respect to the stars and then begins to move back westward, or retrogrades. She may be seen in the daytime in July and August by knowing just where to look for her. Becomes invisible early in September, being at inferior conjunction Sept. 15. When next seen she will appear in the east in the morning, west of the sun; σ ν , Sept. 24, being 10° south of ν ; stationary again early in October in eastern δ ; occulted by δ Nov. 16; advances past the stars of ν , passing about 4° north of Spica the last of November and through the square of α the last of December.

MARS (♂) will be brightest as an evening star Nov. 24-25, being a morning star until Aug. 8 and afterward an evening star to the end of the year. At the beginning of the year he will be in α , low in the east at dawn and about 5° north of Antares; σ δ Jan. 26; Feb. 1, 3° north of the milkmaid's dipper in \times ; σ δ Feb. 24, σ ν March 11; March 15 in α about 5° south of the bright stars in the head of the goat; σ δ March 25; last of April in α 10° south of the λ ; σ δ April 23 and May 22; June 1 on first meridian of the heavens; σ δ 20th. On the 15th of July he will be about 10° south of the bright stars in τ ; Aug. 8 at western δ and σ δ Aug. 16; last of August 8° south of Pleiades; last of September close to and north of the Hyades. Stationary middle of October in ν ; retrogrades very slowly back to the Pleiades Dec. 1, being at σ Nov. 26, when he will rise at sunset, pass the meridian at midnight and set at sunrise, being then and for some time before and after that date an all-night star.

Several new canals were discovered on Mars in 1902, evidently the works of the Martians within the past few years; snow storms were also observed on Mars by Prof. Lowell of Flagstaff, Ariz.

JUPITER (♃) will be at σ April 30, when he will be brightest as an evening and all-night star. Inasmuch as α requires twelve of our years in which to make a revolution about the sun and pass all the stars of the zodiac his movement from time to time will be very slight as compared to that of the planets whose orbits are interior to his, as he traverses only one sign in a year. He is still in α and during the first days of February he will be very close (1° north) to the brightest star in that constellation—Alpha Librae, situated on the ecliptic and being the southwest star of the square of Libra. The last of November he will pass out of and east of the square and at the close of the year be about 8° east of its easternmost star. (See Tables of Occultations, Conjunctions tions, etc.) Of the seven satellites known to belong to Jupiter only four can be easily seen by the aid of small glasses. These satellites do not undergo the same changes in brilliancy that our moon does owing to the fact that α is a semi-sun and his moons are supplied in part by himself, while our moon borrows her entire supply of light from the sun. (See the following tables.)

SATURN (δ), will be brightest Nov. 9 as an evening and all-night star, and will be very bright for a considerable time before and after that time. Inasmuch as two and one-half years are required for him to pass through one sign or constellation it is evident we can scarcely detect any change in position with respect to the stars from month to month. He is in τ . Of his large family of satellites—ten in all—only one (Titan), is ordinarily visible with a three-inch telescope, but the wonderful ring system is always visible in such an instrument except when the earth is crossing their plane, every fifteen years. Each year, however, the earth attains a maximum elevation above their plane and at such times the ring system is best observed. This occurs in August, about the time of the western quadrature of δ . From August on he will be only a few degrees west of the Pleiades and Hyades.

URANUS (ϵ) will be brightest July 20 and will not be near any bright or conspicuous star. Perhaps the best time for an amateur to locate this planet will be at its close conjunction with σ March 11, when ϵ will be seen for several days only one-third of a degree (or about one-half the moon's apparent diameter) north of σ . To see this planet with the unaided eye is a test of good eyesight.

NEPTUNE (ψ), the outermost known of our planetary family, will be brightest Jan. 11, in α , a few degrees south of Castor and Pollux. It is stated that a good opera or field glass will show ψ at the time of σ or when brightest, provided one knows just where to look. Look for it on a line from Castor to Procyon and nearly midway between those stars with a fine cluster of dim stars just to the west.

NUMBER OF THE STARS.

According to the best astronomers the number of stars that can be seen by a person of average eyesight is only about 7,000. The number visible through the telescope has been estimated by J. E. Gore at 70,000,000 and by Profs. Newcomb and Young at 100,000,000.

CHART OF THE HEAVENS.

EXPLANATION—The chart of the heavens shows all the bright stars and groups visible in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba and Hawaii. Stars of the third magnitude are sometimes shown in order to complete a figure.

If a bright uncharted body be seen near the "ecliptic circle" it must be a planet. To locate the planets or moon, refer to the tables "position of planets" and "moon's place" in the almanac pages, find the proper signs on the chart on the "ecliptic circle" and an inspection of that part of the heavens, comparing with the chart, will serve to identify the planet and all the surrounding objects.

Because of the earth's motion from west to east (opposite to the direction of the arrow in the chart), the stars rise 4m. earlier each day or 30m. per week, or 2h. a month. The chart shows the position at 9 p. m. Then if the position for any other hour be desired, as for 7 p. m., count back one month, or ahead one month for 11 p. m., and so on for any hour of the night.

A circle described from the zenith on the "zenith circle" for the desired latitude with a radius of 90° (see graduated meridian) will show what stars are above the horizon. Thus Capella is near the overhead (zenith) point on latitude 40° north Jan. 15, 9 p. m., as will be Algenib in the handle of the Big Dipper at 3 a. m. Then from Capella or Algenib all the surrounding visible groups can be identified. The "pointers" being 5° apart and always in sight may be used as a convenient unit of measure; also when visible the Belt of Orion, 3°, or the sides of the square of Pegasus. The observer is always supposed to stand under the overhead point and to face south and north alternately.

EXAMPLES—Venus will be east of the sun, an evening star, and increasing her angular distance from the sun until July 7, and will be brightest Aug. 10, when much nearer the sun. After this she approaches the sun and decreases in brightness to invisibility Sept. 15, when at inferior conjunction, or exactly between the earth and sun. She reappears, shortly after her conjunction, west of the sun as a morning star and again widens her distance from the sun until Nov. 26, being brightest Oct. 22. Thus it will be seen that she may be at her brightest twice in one year, but never when farthest from the sun as in the case of the superior planets.

Mars starts in the year as a morning star and gradually grows in brightness as he recedes from the sun until Nov. 25, when he will be at opposition, or 180° from the sun, rising at sunset and shining all night. He will begin to be seen in the evening hours Aug. 9, and by about Dec. 1 he may very properly be called an "all-night star," appearing equally in the evening and morning hours.

FACTS ABOUT THE SUN AND PLANETS.

The sun's surface is 12,000 and its volume 1,300,000 times that of the earth, but the mass is only 332,000 times as great and its density about one-quarter that of the earth. The force of gravity at the surface of the sun is twenty-seven times greater than that at the surface of the earth. The sun rotates on its axis once in 25.3 days at the equator, but the time is longer at the higher latitudes, from which fact it is presumed that the sun is not solid, at least as to its surface.

THE EARTH AND THE MOON.

Earth—The equatorial diameter of the earth is 7,926.5 miles and the polar diameter 7,899.5 miles; equatorial circumference, 25,000. The linear velocity of the rotation of the earth on its axis at the equator is 24,840 miles a day, or 1,440 feet a second; its velocity in its orbit around the sun is approximately nineteen miles per second, the length of the orbit being about 560,000,000 miles. The superficial area of the earth according to Encke, the astronomer, is 197,108,580 square miles, of which two-thirds is water and one-third land. The planetary mass is about 256,000,000 cubic miles.

Moon—The moon has a diameter of 2,162 miles, a circumference of about 6,800 miles and a surface area of 14,685,000 square miles. Her mean distance from the earth is 238,840 miles. The volume of the moon is about 1-49th that of the earth and the density about 3-25 that of water. The time from new moon to new moon is 29 days 12 hours 44.05 minutes. The moon has no atmosphere and no water and is a dead world.

VELOCITY OF LIGHT.

Light travels at the rate of 186,300 miles per second. It requires 8 minutes and 8 seconds for light to come from the sun to the earth.

NOTE—The distance apart is between centers as seen from center of earth. It should be borne in mind that the bodies are not always nearest when in ♄, but the above data will enable the absolute identification of these planets on or near these dates and when the ♄ occurs in the daytime. The planets ♄, ♀ and ♃ are ignored in this connection as usually the ♃'s light will render the last two invisible and generally ♃ will be too near the sun to be seen.

Explanation of signs: ♄ Aries. ♉ Taurus. ♊ Gemini. ♋ Cancer. ♌ Leo. ♍ Virgo. ♎ Libra. ♏ Scorpio. ♐ Sagittarius. ♑ Capricornus. ♒ Aquarius. ♓ Pisces. The place indicated for the planets is for the 1st, 2d, 4th and 5th Sundays of each month, in the order of the planets.

NOTE—The moon will run "high" from "lowest" to "highest," and run "low" from "highest" to "lowest." The full moon will be highest of the year at meridian passage Dec. 16 and lowest June 22. She will begin to run lower March 21 and decrease in altitude until June 22 and then increase (run higher) until Dec. 21, after which she will gradually get lower until June 22. This is because the full moon must always be on the opposite side of the earth from the sun, and hence when the sun is lowest in declination the moon must be highest and when the sun is highest the moon must be lowest. The inclination of the earth's axis to the plane of the ecliptic (sun's apparent path) being 23½° and that of the moon being 5° to the ecliptic it follows that the total swing from highest to lowest must be (23½+5) × 2=57°.

Explanation—By the absolute scale of magnitudes stars brighter than Aldebaran and Altair are indicated by fractional or negative quantities, thus Vega 0.2 and Sirius -1.4. As the magnitudes increase the brilliancy decreases, each increase of a unit being equal to a decrease of about two and one-half in brilliancy.

To ascertain when any star or constellation will be on the upper meridian add the number opposite in the column "For Meridian Passage" to the figures in the following table "Sideral Noon," taking note whether such figures be "Morn.," or "Eve." If Morn. and the sum is more than 12h. the result will be Eve. of same day; if Eve. and the sum is more than 12h. the result will be Morn. of the next day. Having found the time of meridian passage, for the rising subtract and for the setting add the numbers opposite the star in the column headed "For Rising and Setting" and observe the direction as to Morn. and Eve. given for the meridian passage. Those marked (.....) in the last column are circumpolar and do not rise or set in the latitude of New York city. Stars having an asterisk (*) in the last column are only to be seen in the far south and then when near the meridian, as the vapors of the horizon will prevent seeing them when they rise or set. To tell how high from the nearest point of the horizon a star will be at its meridian passage, subtract the star's declination from 90° and if the result is less than the latitude of the place of the observer that star will neither rise nor set, but is circumpolar, and the difference between that result and the latitude shows the star's altitude above the north point of the horizon or below the southern horizon. Or (90°-Dec.)-lat., = alt. or elevation of the star above the nearest point of the horizon at meridian passage for stars of south. dec. Examples:

Fomalhaut dec., 30° s. 90°—30°, = 60°—40°, = 20°. Altitude of Fomalhaut in latitude 40° at its meridian passage. To measure celestial distances with the eye keep in mind that one-third of the distance from the zenith to the horizon is 30°. For smaller measurements use the "pointers" in the big dipper, which are nearly 5° apart—a convenient celestial yardstick because always to be seen. In the case of a star whose decl. is such as to bring it nearer to the zenith than to a horizon at meridian passage, it will be more convenient to use its zenith distance as a means of locating it. The difference between the latitude and dec. is this zenith distance. If the dec. is greater than the latitude then such difference is to be counted northward, otherwise southward from the zenith.

THE SIGNS AND CONSTELLATIONS OF THE ZODIAC.

Until recently it was taken for granted that the present relationship between signs and constellations of the zodiac was generally understood, as all astronomical textbooks mention their disagreement and explain the cause. The numerous letters of inquiry concerning differences between this data in this almanac and certain others show the necessity for this note of explanation.

Thousands of years ago when the zodiac, that belt of the heavens about 16° in width within which move the moon and planets, was formed and divided into twelve parts or seasons called signs, each containing certain star groups called constellations, each was given the name of an object or animal which never did bear any relationship to the configuration of the stars in that group or division, but which did or is supposed to have reference to certain astronomical or other facts. Thus Libra, ♎, the scales or balance, comes at the autumnal equinox when there is an equilibrium or balance between the length of day and night the world over. Aquarius, ♒, the water-bearer, and whose sign is the Egyptian sign for running water, comes at the season of greatest rains in Egypt, and so on.

Since the time when these divisions were made and named, owing to the precession of the equinoxes, resulting from the differing polar and equatorial diameters of the earth, the signs have moved back west nearly a whole division or constellation and where ♈ was the first, ♋ now is. Hence, though the sun now enters the sign ♈ March 20, it is a month later when he enters the constellation ♈. It must be apparent, therefore, that any supposed influence or relationship which early astrologers attributed to the position of the sun, moon or planets when in certain of these divisions, can no longer exist, as the sign now only represents that space or division of the zodiac where the controlling constellation was 2,000 or more years ago, but is not now. Nevertheless some almanacs still give the signs for the moon's place, which is very misleading to those who attempt to follow her in her course among the stars. Hence, this almanac gives the constellation and discards the ancient picture of the disemboweled man as relics of the age of superstition. The sign is retained for sun's place in connection with the seasons and sun's path through the zodiac each month because of its relationship to the equinoxes and solstices.

ECLIPSES IN 1911.

There will be two eclipses this year and both of the sun, as must always be the case where but two occur. They are as follows:

1. Total April 28, partially visible in the United States as a small eclipse upon the sun's southern limb. The total phase will only be visible in the southern Pacific ocean and islands. The sun will set more or less eclipsed throughout Central America, southern Mexico and in eastern United States east of a line from near Pittsburg, Pa., to near Matagorda Bay, Texas. Washington, D. C., is on the northern Atlantic boundary of the area of visibility. No part of the eclipse will be visible north of a line from Portland, Ore., through Milwaukee and Pittsburg to Washington, D. C. Therefore the eclipse will be very small in the western and middle states, west of the above mentioned line from Pittsburg to Matagorda Bay, being largest in the extreme southwest. More particularly visible as follows:

The figure shows 1, 2, 3 and 4 digits eclipsed on the southern limb of the sun.

TIME AND STANDARDS OF TIME.

Various kinds of time are in use in this country:

1. Astronomical Time or Mean Solar Time—This is reckoned from noon through the twenty-four hours of the day and is used mainly by astronomical observatories and in official astronomical publications. It is the legal time of the Dominion of Canada, though "standard" and "mean" time are in general use there as in this country.

2. Mean Local Time—This is the kind that was in almost universal use prior to the introduction of standard time. This time is based upon the time when the mean sun* crosses the meridian and the day begins at midnight. When divided into civil divisions—years, months, weeks, days, etc.—it is sometimes called civil time.

3. Standard Time—For the convenience of the railroads and business in general a standard of time was established by mutual agreement in 1883 and by this calculation trains are now run and local time is regulated. By this system the United States, extending from 65° to 125° west longitude, is divided into four time sections, each of 15° of longitude, exactly equivalent to one hour (7½° or 30m. on each side of a meridian), commencing with the 75th meridian. The first or eastern section includes all territory between the Atlantic coast and an irregular line drawn from Buffalo to Charleston, S. C., the latter city being its southernmost point. The second or central section includes all the territory between this eastern line and another irregular line extending from Bismarck, N. D., to the mouth of the Rio Grande. The third or mountain section includes all the territory between the last-named line and nearly the western borders of Idaho, Nevada and Arizona. The fourth or Pacific section includes all the territory of the United States between the boundary of the mountain section and the Pacific coast. Inside of each of these sections standard time is uniform and the time of each section differs from that next to it by exactly one hour, as shown on the map.

*Owing to the eccentricity of the earth's orbit and the inclination of the equator to the ecliptic, the apparent motion of the sun is retarded or accelerated according to the earth's place in its orbit. Hence, to take the actual sun as a guide would necessitate years, days and their subdivisions of unequal length. Therefore an imaginary or "mean sun" was invented. The difference between apparent and mean time is called the "equation of time" and may amount to a quarter of an hour in twenty-four hours. It is the difference between the figures in "Sun at noon mark" column in calendar and twelve hours. The figures on a correct sun dial give the apparent time.

STANDARDS OF TIME.

The following is the table of times, based upon the meridians used by the United States and Canada:

NAME OF TIME.	Degrees.	Central meridian from Greenwich.	Nearest place.*
Intercolonial or Atlantic.....	60	4 hours west.....	About 3½ degrees east of Halifax, N.S.
Eastern.....	75	5 hours west.....	Between New York and Philadelphia
Central.....	90	6 hours west.....	St. Louis and New Orleans.
Mountain.....	105	7 hours west.....	Denver, Col.
Pacific.....	120	8 hours west.....	1½ degrees east of Sacramento, Cal.
Sitka.....	135	9 hours west.....	¼ degree east of Sitka, Alaska.
Tahiti.....	150	10 hours west.....	¼ degree west of the island of Tahiti.
Hawaiian.....	157½	10 hrs. 31 min. west.	Near center of Molokai.

It is obvious that to express the time of rising and setting of the sun and moon in standard time would limit the usefulness of such data to the single point or place for which it was computed, while in mean time it is practically correct for places as widely separated as the width of the continent (see note at bottom of February calendar), and persons having obtained the mean time by the rising or setting of the sun or moon may easily ascertain the correct standard time of any event by making use of the following table and map:

HALLEY'S COMET.

Halley's comet, which was first seen on its recent approach to the earth by Prof. Max Wolff of Heidelberg, Germany, Sept. 11, 1909, and was successfully photographed by Prof. S. W. Burnham of the Yerkes observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., Sept. 15, 1909, could be seen with ordinary opera glasses in March, 1910. It was not, however, until the latter part of April that it could be seen with the naked eye. From that time until May 18 it continued to increase in brilliancy and was a striking object in the heavens during the hours immediately preceding sunrise. It was seen a lit-parts of the country. Some astronomers were inclined to think that the comet had diminished in size and brilliancy since its appearance seventy-five years before, but others were of a contrary opinion.

Much speculation was indulged in as to what would happen when the earth passed through the comet's tail about May 18 and stories about deadly cyanogen gas and showers of meteors caused some terror among the uninformed. Newspapers printed columns of interviews with astronomers and other scientists on the subject and the public generally was deeply interested in the matter. Great preparations were made at the various observatories for the event, but the results, from a scientific as well as popular point of view, were disappointing. Nothing of a startling nature happened. An auroral display and a few meteors were reported, but these were not out of the ordinary. Experts differed in their opinions as to just when the earth passed through the comet's tail, and some of them held that owing to an unexpected curvature of the tail the earth missed coming in contact with the gaseous substance altogether. At the Yerkes observatory the astronomers were quoted as saying that the tail was much spread out, causing the earth to occupy about thirty hours to make the passage through it instead of four or five hours as originally calculated. At the Lick observatory the tail of the comet was seen in the east on the morning of the 18th and the same fact was reported from other points. This was explained by some on the theory that the length of the tail and its curvature caused it to extend around the globe, making the end visible in the eastern sky while the head and other end were in the west.

For some days after the transit the tail seemed to have disappeared partly if not wholly, but it soon reappeared and in the latter days of May and the first part of June the comet and its appendage were clearly visible in the western sky just after sunset. In some localities where the atmosphere was clear the spectacle was even more striking than that presented when the comet was seen in the eastern sky. The orbit of the celestial visitor caused it to recede rapidly and by the end of June it was no longer visible without the use of telescopes.

COMET A OF 1910.

On the morning of Jan. 17, 1910, a new comet was discovered by an observer named Drake at Johannesburg, South Africa. It was five or ten degrees south, southwest of the sun, which it was rapidly approaching, and was visible to the naked eye. Other observers in various parts of the world found it easily on the following nights, those at Williams Bay, Wis., seeing it Jan. 19. It was photographed readily, as it was sufficiently bright to be seen without the use of magnifying glasses. Astronomers at Flagstaff, Ariz., reported that the comet showed light hydrocarbon bands with a pair of intensely bright sodium lines. The tail appeared to be about forty-three degrees in length. The comet was visible in the western sky until the first part of February, when it swiftly disappeared. It was not identified as having been seen before 1910.

Meteorites were reported Feb. 4 to have fallen near Florence, Italy. A large meteor also fell near Quincy, Ill.

Jan. 28 the observatory at Manila, P. I., discovered a new comet near Venus. Feb. 23 Prof. Pldoux of the Geneva observatory in Switzerland claimed to have found a new comet near Halley's and travelling much faster. Aug. 8, the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf of Taunton, Mass., discovered a comet of the eighth magnitude.

Act reorganizing lighthouse service and providing for a bureau of lighthouses in the department of commerce and labor; passed by house May 2; by senate May 12; approved June 17.

MESSAGE ON INTERSTATE LAW.

Jan. 7, 1910, President Taft sent to congress a special message recommending certain amendments to the interstate-commerce law and suggesting the general incorporation of industrial companies in order to make effective the laws against trusts and monopolies. To bring about a systematic and scientific enforcement of the commerce law he recommended the establishment of a court of the United States, composed of five judges designated for such purpose from among the Circuit judges, to be known as the "United States Court of Commerce," such court to be clothed with exclusive original jurisdiction over the following classes of cases:

1. All cases for the enforcement, otherwise than by adjudication and collection of a forfeiture or penalty, or by infliction of criminal punishment, of an order of the interstate-commerce commission other than for the payment of money.

2. All cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul or suspend any order or requirement of the interstate-commerce commission.

3. All such cases as under section 3 of the act of Feb. 19, 1903, known as the "Elkins act," are authorized to be maintained in a Circuit court of the United States.

4. All such mandamus proceedings as under the provisions of section 20 or section 23 of the interstate-commerce law are authorized to be maintained in a Circuit court of the United States.

The president further recommended that the interstate-commerce law be so amended as to authorize the commission to act on its own initiative as well as upon the complaint of an individual in investigating the fairness of any existing rate or practice and also to give it the power to pass upon the classification of commodities for the purpose of fixing rates. It should also be empowered, whenever any proposed increase of rates is filed, at once to enter upon an investigation into the reasonableness of such change, and, if necessary, to postpone the effective date of such increase for a period not exceeding thirty days; if the increase is found to be unreasonable, the commission may then forbid it or fix the maximum beyond which it shall not be made.

Legislation to prevent the overissue of stocks and bonds by interstate carriers and the further acquisition by railroad companies of the stock of competing lines was recommended. The president also suggested the passage of laws for additional safety appliances on freight trains and to facilitate the bringing of suits by employees against interstate-commerce employers.

In order to secure the compliance of the trusts and business combinations with the antitrust statute and to offer them a means of changing the character, organization and extent of their business so as to bring it within the lines of the law, under federal control and supervision, without creating great financial disturbance, the president recommended the enactment by congress of a general law for the formation of corporations to engage in trade and commerce between the states. Such law, he suggested, should be drawn so as to protect the corporations from undue interference by the states and regulate their activities in such manner as to prevent the recurrence, under national auspices, of those abuses which had arisen under state control.

CONTEST OVER HOUSE RULES.

Wednesday, March 16, 1910, Representative Crumpacker of Indiana called up in the house a joint resolution enlarging the scope of inquiry of the schedules relating to the thirteenth decennial census so as to secure information respecting the nationality and mother tongue of all persons born in foreign countries or of foreign parentage. Objection to the consideration of the resolution was made on the ground that it was not in order on calendar Wednesday, when no other business than the call of the committees could be considered. Mr. Crumpacker maintained that the resolution was privileged under the constitution and that therefore it was in order on any day. In this position he was sustained by Speaker Cannon, who, however, was overruled by the house by a vote of 163 to 111.

On the following day, March 17, Mr. Crumpacker again called the resolution up for consideration and the same point of order was made against it. The speaker instead of ruling submitted to the house the question: Is the joint resolution called up by the gentleman from Indiana in order as a question of privilege, the rule prescribing the order of business to the contrary notwithstanding? On this a demand for the previous question was made, but the house by a vote of yeas 137 and nays 142 refused to order it. The house then by a vote of 202 yeas to 72 nays declared that the resolution was in order and it was passed.

On the same day Representative George W. Norris of Nebraska presented a resolution, "privileged by the constitution," to amend the rules of the house so as to make the committee on rules consist of fifteen members, nine to be chosen by the majority party and six by the minority party, and excluding the speaker from membership on the committee. This proposition, which was supported by the so-called "insurgent" republicans and the democrats, caused a heated controversy, lasting from Thursday until Saturday afternoon. It was maintained by the advocates of the resolution that under the old system the speaker, through a committee on rules appointed and dominated by himself, exercised "inordinate and tyrannical power" in shaping or preventing legislation, and that the real question at issue was whether that power should be limited or continued. It was further argued that a committee on rules elected in the manner proposed would be more truly representative of all the congressional districts and more amenable to the will of the majority. The "regular" republicans, on the other hand, insisted that the old rules had been evolved in the course of time, because they had been found necessary in order to transact business in the house; that they were not and could not be enforced except by the will of the majority; that they had been adopted and used by democratic as well as republican congresses, and that they had been fairly and impartially enforced by Speaker Cannon.

The point of order having been made that the resolution was not a privileged one under the constitution, the speaker, basing his decision upon a ruling made by Samuel J. Randall in 1878, sustained the point of order. Mr. Norris appealed from the decision and moved the previous question. After a motion to lay the appeal on the table had been voted down (yeas 164, nays 182) the previous question was ordered by a vote of yeas 182, nays 161, and the house refused to concur in the decision of the speaker by a vote of 160 yeas to 182 nays. The question then recurring to the adoption of the resolution, Mr. Norris offered the following substitute:

"Resolved, That the rules of the house of representatives be amended as follows:

"1. In rule X, paragraph 5, strike out the words 'on rules' to consist of five members."

"2. Add new paragraph to rule X, as follows:

"Paragraph 5. There shall be a committee on rules, elected by the house, consisting of ten members, six of whom shall be members of the majority party and four of whom shall be members of the minority party. The speaker shall not be a member of the committee and the committee shall elect its own chairman from its own members."

"Resolved, further, That within ten days after the adoption of this resolution there shall be an election of this committee, and immediately upon its election the present committee on rules shall be dissolved."

The resolution as amended by the substitute was adopted, yeas 190, nays 157. The following republicans voted for the resolution, the remainder of the affirmative vote consisting of democrats:

Ames (Mass.).
Barnard (Iowa).
Cary (Wis.).
Cooper (Wis.).
Davidson (Wis.).

crats and insurgents to choose a speaker in harmony with its aims and purposes. The other was for that combination to declare a vacancy in the office of speaker and proceed to the election of a new speaker. The first course he declined to pursue, because it might endanger the final passage of all legislation necessary to redeem republican pledges and because he was not conscious of having done any political wrong.

There has been much talk on the part of the minority and the insurgents," said Mr. Cannon in conclusion, "of the 'czarism' of the speaker, culminating in the action taken to-day. The real truth is that there is no coherent republican majority in the house of representatives. Therefore, the real majority ought to have the courage of its convictions and logically meet the situation that confronts it.

"The speaker does now believe, and has always believed, that this is a government through parties, and that parties can act only through majorities. The speaker has always believed in and bowed to the will of the majority in convention, in caucus and in the legislative hall, and to-day profoundly believes that to act otherwise is to disorganize parties, is to prevent coherent action in any legislative body, is to make impossible the reflection of the wishes of the people in statutes and in laws.

"The speaker has always said that, under the constitution, it is a question of the highest privilege for an actual majority of the house at any time to choose a new speaker, and again notifies the house that the speaker will at this moment or at any other time while he remains speaker entertain, in conformity with the highest constitutional privilege, a motion by any member to vacate the office of the speakership and choose a new speaker; and, under existing conditions, would welcome such action upon the part of the actual majority of the house, so that power and responsibility may rest with the democratic and insurgent members, who, by the last vote, evidently constitute a majority of this house. The chair is now ready to entertain such motion."

Mr. Burleson (dem.) of Texas offered a resolution that the office of speaker of the house of representatives be declared vacant and that the house proceed at once to the election of a new speaker. The motion was voted down, yeas 192, yeas 155. Of those voting yea the following were republicans: Cary (Wis.), Cooper (Wis.), Davis (Minn.), Gronna (N. D.), Lenroot (Wis.), Lindbergh (Minn.), Murdoch (Kas.), Nelson (Wis.), Poindexter (Wash.).

Acting under the Norris resolution a caucus of the republican members of the house was held March 23, and the following were chosen to represent the majority on the new committee on rules:

Walter I. Smith, Iowa.
John Dazell, Pennsylvania.
Sylvester C. Smith, California.
George P. Lawrence, Massachusetts.
J. Sloat Fassett, New York.
Henry S. Routell, Illinois.

At a caucus of the democratic members held March 24 the following were chosen to represent the minority:

Champ Clark, Missouri.
Oscar W. Underwood, Alabama.
Lincoln Dixon, Indiana.
John J. Fitzgerald, New York.

By a resolution unanimously adopted March 25 the men named at the party caucuses were made the committee on rules of the house.

COMMERCE COURT AND RAILROAD-RATE LAW.

An act to create a commerce court and to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved Feb. 4, 1887, as heretofore amended, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., that a court of the United States is hereby created which shall be known as the Commerce court and shall have the jurisdiction now possessed by the Circuit courts of the United States and the judges thereof over all cases of the following kinds:

1. All cases for the enforcement, otherwise than by adjudication and collection of a forfeiture or

After announcing the vote the speaker made a brief statement in which he said that there were two courses open for him to pursue—one was to resign and permit the new combination of demopenalty or by infliction of criminal punishment, of any order of the interstate commerce commission other than for the payment of money.

2. Cases brought to enjoin, set aside, annul or suspend in whole or in part any order of the interstate commerce commission.

3. Such cases as by section 3 of the act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the states," approved Feb. 19, 1903, are authorized to be maintained in a Circuit court of the United States.

4. All such additional proceedings as under the provisions of section 20 or section 23 of the act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved Feb. 4, 1887, as amended, are authorized to be maintained in a Circuit court of the United States.

Nothing contained in this act shall be construed as enlarging the jurisdiction now possessed by the Circuit courts of the United States or the judges thereof that is hereby transferred to and vested in the Commerce court.

The jurisdiction of the Commerce court over cases of the foregoing classes shall be exclusive, but this act shall not affect the jurisdiction now possessed by any Circuit or District court of the United States over cases or proceedings of a kind not within the above enumerated classes.

COMPOSITION OF COURT.

The Commerce court shall be a court of record and shall have a seal of such form and style as the court may prescribe. The said court shall be composed of five judges, to be from time to time designated and assigned thereto by the chief justice of the United States, from among the Circuit judges of the United States, for the period of five years, except that in the first instance the court shall be composed of the five additional Circuit judges to be appointed as hereinafter provided, who shall be designated by the president to serve for one, two, three, four and five years, respectively, in order that the period of designation of one of said judges shall expire in each year thereafter. In case of the death, resignation or termination of assignment of any judge so designated the chief justice shall designate a Circuit judge to fill the vacancy so caused to serve during the unexpired period for which the original designation was made. After a year 1914 no Circuit judge shall be redesignated to serve in the Commerce court until the expiration of at least one year after the expiration of the period of his last previous designation. The judge first designated for the five-year period shall be the presiding judge of said court, and thereafter the judge senior in designation shall be the presiding judge.

Each of the judges during the period of his service in the Commerce court shall, on account of the regular sessions of the court being held in the city of Washington, receive in addition to his salary as Circuit judge an expense allowance at the rate of $1,500 per annum.

The president shall, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, appoint five additional Circuit judges, no two of whom shall be from the same judicial circuit, who shall hold office during good behavior and who shall be from time to time designated and assigned by the chief justice of the United States for service in the Circuit court of any district or the Circuit court of appeals for any circuit or in the Commerce court.

The associate judges shall have precedence and shall succeed to the place and powers of the presiding judge whenever he may be absent or incapable of acting, in the order of the date of their designations. Four of said judges shall constitute a quorum, and at least a majority of the court shall concur in all decisions.

The court shall also have a clerk and a marshal, with the same duties and powers, so far as they may be appropriate and are not altered by rule of the court, as are now possessed by the clerk and marshal, respectively, of the Supreme court of the United States. The offices of the clerk and marshal of the court shall be in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia. The judges of the court shall appoint the clerk and marshal, and may also appoint, if they find it necessary, a deputy clerk and deputy marshal, and such clerk, marshal, deputy clerk and deputy marshal shall hold office during the pleasure of the court. The salary of the clerk shall be $4,000 per annum; the salary of the marshal $2,000 per annum; the salary of the deputy clerk $2,500, and the salary of the deputy marshal $2,500 per annum. The said clerk and marshal may, with the approval of the court, employ all requisite assistance.

The costs and fees in said court shall be established by the court in a table thereof, approved by the Supreme court of the United States, within four months after the organization of the court, but such costs and fees shall in no case exceed those charged in the Supreme court of the United States and shall be accounted for and paid into the treasury of the United States.

The Commerce court shall be always open for the transaction of business. Its regular sessions shall be held in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, but the powers of the court or of any judge thereof, or of the clerk, marshal, deputy clerk or deputy marshal, may be exercised anywhere in the United States, and for expedition of the work of the court and the avoidance of undue expense or inconvenience to suitors the court shall hold sessions in different parts of the United States as may be found desirable. The actual and necessary expenses of the judges, clerk, marshal, deputy clerk and deputy marshal of the court incurred for travel and attendance elsewhere than in the city of Washington shall be paid upon the written and itemized certificate of such judge, clerk, marshal, deputy clerk or deputy marshal by the marshal of the court, and shall be allowed to him in the statement of his accounts with the United States.

The United States marshals of the several districts outside of the city of Washington in which the Commerce court may hold its sessions shall provide, under the direction and with the approval of the attorney-general of the United States, such rooms in the public buildings of the United States as may be necessary, but in case proper rooms cannot be provided in such public buildings, said marshals, with the approval of the attorney-general of the United States, may then lease from time to time other necessary rooms for the court.

If, at any time, the business of the Commerce court does not require the services of all the judges, the chief justice of the United States may, by writing, signed by him and filed in the department of justice, terminate the assignment of any of the judges or temporarily assign him for service in any Circuit court or Circuit Court of Appeals. In case of illness or other disability of any judge assigned to the Commerce court the chief justice of the United States may assign any other Circuit judge of the United States to act in his place, and may terminate such assignment when the exigence therefor shall cease, and any Circuit judge so assigned to act in place of such judge shall, during his assignment, exercise all the powers and perform all the functions of such judge.

JURISDICTION.

In all cases within its jurisdiction the Commerce court and each of the judges assigned thereto shall, respectively, have and may exercise any and all of the powers of a Circuit court of the United States and of the judges of said court, respectively, so far as the same may be appropriate to the effective exercise of the jurisdiction hereby conferred. The Commerce court may issue all writs and process appropriate to the full exercise of its jurisdiction and powers and may prescribe the form thereof. It may also, from time to time, establish such rules and regulations concerning pleading, practice or procedure in cases and matters within its jurisdiction as to the court shall seem wise and proper. Its orders, writs and process may run, be served and be returnable anywhere in the United States, and the marshal and deputy marshal of said court and also the United States marshals and deputy marshals in the several districts of the United States shall have like powers and be under like duties to act for and in behalf of said court as pertain to United States marshals and deputy marshals generally when acting under like conditions concerning suits or matters in the circuits of the United States.

The jurisdiction of the Commerce court shall be invoked by filing in the office of the clerk of the court a written petition, setting forth briefly and succinctly the facts constituting the petitioner's cause of action and specifying the relief sought. A copy of such petition shall forthwith be served by the marshal or a deputy marshal of the Commerce court or by the proper United States marshal or deputy marshal upon every defendant therein named, and when the United States is a party defendant the service shall be made by filing a copy of said petition in the office of the secretary of the interstate commerce commission and in the department of justice. Within thirty days after the petition is served, unless that time is extended by order of the court or a judge thereof, an answer to the petition shall be filed in the clerk's office and a copy thereof mailed to the petitioner's attorney, which answer shall briefly and categorically respond to the allegations of the petition. No replication need be filed to the answer, and objections to the sufficiency of the petition or answer as not setting forth a cause of action or defense must be taken at the final hearing or by motion to dismiss the petition based on said grounds, which motion may be made at any time before answer is filed. In case no answer shall be filed as provided herein the petitioner may apply to the court on notice for such relief as may be proper upon the facts alleged in the petition. The court may, by rule, prescribe the method of taking evidence in cases pending in said court, and may prescribe that the evidence be taken before a single judge of the court, with power to rule upon the admission of evidence. Except as may be otherwise provided in this act or by rule of the court the practice and procedure in the Commerce court shall conform as nearly as may be to that in like cases in a Circuit court of the United States.

The Commerce court shall be opened for the transaction of business at a date to be fixed by order of the said court, which shall be not later than thirty days after the judges thereof shall have been designated.

APPEALS.

Sec. 2. That a final judgment or decree of the Commerce court may be reviewed by the Supreme court of the United States if appeal to the Supreme court be taken by an aggrieved party within sixty days after the entry of said final judgment or decree. Such appeal may be taken in like manner as appeals from a Circuit court of the United States to the Supreme court, and the Commerce court may direct the original record to be transmitted on appeal instead of a transcript thereof. The Supreme court may affirm, reverse or modify the final judgment or decree of the Commerce court as the case may require.

Appeal to the Supreme court, however, shall in no case supersede or stay the judgment or decree of the Commerce court appealed from, unless the Supreme court or a justice thereof shall so direct, and appellant shall give bond in such form and of such amount as the Supreme court or the justice of that court allowing the stay may require.

An appeal may also be taken to the Supreme court of the United States from an interlocutory order or decree of the Commerce court granting or continuing an injunction restraining the enforcement of an order of the interstate commerce commission, provided such appeal be taken within thirty days from the entry of such order or decree.

Appeals to the Supreme court under this section shall have priority in hearing and determination over all other causes except criminal causes in that court.

Sec. 3. That suits to enjoin, set aside, annul or suspend any order of the interstate commerce commission shall be brought in the Commerce court against the United States. The pendency of such suit shall not of itself stay or suspend the operation of the order of the interstate commerce commission, but the Commerce court, in its discretion, may restrain or suspend, in whole or in part, the operation of the commission's order pending the final hearing and determination of the suit. No order or injunction so restraining or suspending an order of the interstate commerce commission shall be made by the Commerce court otherwise than upon notice and after hearing, except that, in cases where irreparable damage would otherwise ensue to the petitioner, said court or a judge thereof may, on hearing after not less than three days' notice to the interstate commerce commission and the attorney-general, allow a temporary stay or suspension in whole or in part of the operation of the order of the interstate commerce commission for not more than sixty days from the date of the order of such court or judge, pending application to the court for its order or injunction in which case the said order shall contain a specific finding, based upon the evidence submitted to the judge, making the order and identified by reference thereto, that such irreparable damage would result to the petitioner and specifying the nature of the damage. The court may, at the time of hearing such application, upon a like finding, continue the temporary stay or suspension in whole or in part until its decision upon the application.

Sec. 4. That all cases and proceedings in the Commerce court which but for this act would be brought by or against the interstate commerce commission shall be brought by or against the United States, and the United States may intervene in any case or proceeding in the Commerce court whenever, though it has not been made a party, public interests are involved.

Sec. 5. That the attorney-general shall have charge and control of the interests of the government in all cases and proceedings in the Commerce court and in the Supreme court of the United States upon appeal from the Commerce court, and if in his opinion the public interest requires it he may retain and employ in the name of the United States, within the appropriations from time to time made by the congress for such purposes, such special attorneys and counselors at law as he may think necessary to assist in the discharge of any of the duties incumbent upon him and his subordinate attorneys, and the attorney-general shall stipulate with such special attorneys and counsel the amount of their compensation, which shall not be in excess of the sums appropriated therefor by congress for such purposes, and shall have the supervision of their action, provided that the interstate commerce commission and any party or parties in interest to the proceedings before the commission, in which an order or requirement is made, may appear as parties thereto of their own motion and as of right, and be represented by their counsel, in any suit wherein is involved the validity of such order or requirement or any part thereof, and the interest of such party, and the court wherein is pending such suit may make all such rules and orders as to such appearances and representations, the number of counsel and all matters of procedure and otherwise as to subserve the ends of justice and speed the determination of such suits; provided further, that communities, associations, corporations, firms and individuals who are interested in the controversy or question before the interstate commerce commission or in any suit which may be brought by any one under the terms of this act or the acts of which it is amendatory or which are amendatory of it, relating to action of the interstate commerce commission, may intervene in said suit or proceedings at any time after the institution thereof, and the attorney-general shall not dispose of or discontinue said suit or proceeding over the objection of such party or intervenor aforesaid, but said intervenor or intervenors may prosecute, defend or continue said suit or proceeding unaffected by the action or nonaction of the attorney-general of the United States thereon.

Complainants before the interstate commerce commission interested in a case shall have the right to appear and be made parties to the case and be represented before the courts by counsel under such regulations as are now permitted in similar circumstances under the rules and practice of equity courts of the United States.

Sec. 6. That until the opening of the Commerce court, as in section 1 hereof provided, all cases and proceedings of which from that time the Commerce court is hereby given exclusive jurisdiction may be brought in the same courts and conducted in like manner and with like effect as is now provided by law, and if any such case or proceeding shall have gone to final judgment or decree before the opening of the Commerce court, appeal may be taken from such final judgment or decree in like manner and with like effect as is now provided by law. Any such case or proceeding within the jurisdiction of the Commerce court which may have been begun in any other court as hereby allowed before the said date shall be forthwith transferred to the Commerce court, if it has not yet proceeded to final judgment or decree in such other court, unless it has been finally submitted for the decision of such court, in which case the cause shall proceed in such court to final judgment or decree and further proceeding thereafter, and appeal may be taken direct to the Supreme court, and if remanded such cause may be sent back to the court from which the appeal was taken or to the Commerce court for further proceeding, as the Supreme court shall direct, and all previous proceedings in such transferred case shall stand and operate notwithstanding the transfer, subject to the same control over them by the Commerce court and to the same right of subsequent action in the case or proceeding as if the transferred case or proceeding had been originally begun in the Commerce court. The clerk of the court from which any case or proceeding is so transferred to the Commerce court shall transmit to and file in the Commerce court the originals of all papers filed in such case or proceeding and a certified transcript of all record entries in the case or proceeding up to the time of transfer.

It shall be the duty of every common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, within sixty days after the taking effect of this act, to designate in writing an agent in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, upon whom service of all notices and processes may be made for and on behalf of said common carrier in any proceeding or suit pending before the interstate commerce commission or before said Commerce court, and to file such designation in the office of the secretary of the interstate commerce commission, which designation may from time to time be changed by like writing, similar filed, and thereupon service of all notices and processes may be made upon such common carrier by leaving a copy thereof with such designated agent at his office or usual place of residence in the city of Washington, with like effect as if made personally upon such common carrier, and in default of such designation of such agent, service of any notice or other process in any proceeding before said interstate commerce commission or Commerce court may be made by posting such notice or process in the office of the secretary of the interstate commerce commission.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE LINES.

Sec. 7. Section 1 of the act to regulate commerce, approved Feb. 4, 1887, as heretofore amended, is amended so as to make the provisions of the law applicable to telegraph, telephone and cable companies (whether wire or wireless) engaged in sending messages from one state, territory or district of the United States to any other state, territory or district of the United States or to any foreign country, who shall be considered and held to be common carriers within the meaning and purpose of this act.

"All charges made for any service rendered or to be rendered in the transportation of passengers or property and for the transmission of messages by telegraph, telephone or cable shall be just and reasonable, and every unjust and unreasonable charge for such service or any part thereof is prohibited and declared to be unlawful. Provided, that messages by telegraph, telephone or cable, subject to the provisions of this act, may be classified into day night, repeated, letter, commercial, press, government and such other classes as are just and reasonable, and different rates may be charged for the different classes of messages; and, provided further, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent telephone, telegraph and cable companies from entering into contracts with common carriers for the exchange of services."

Sec. 8. Section 4 of the act is amended so as to make it unlawful for any common carrier to charge any greater compensation as a through route than the aggregate of the intermediate rates subject to the provisions of this act. No rates or charges lawfully existing at the time of the passage of this amendatory act shall be required to be changed by reason of the provisions of this section prior to the expiration of six months after the passage of this act, nor in any case where application shall have been filed before the commission, in accordance with the provisions of this section, until a determination of such application by the commission.

Whenever a carrier by railroad shall in competition with a water route or routes reduce rates on the carriage of any species of freight to and from competitive points it shall not be permitted to increase such rates unless after a hearing by the interstate commerce commission it shall be found that such proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition.

Sec. 9. Four new paragraphs are added to section 6 of this act: The commission may reject any schedule which does not give lawful notice of its effective date. In case of failure on the part of any carrier to comply with any order or regulation made by the commission, such carrier shall be liable to a fine of $500 for each offense and $25 for each day of the continuance of the offense. If any common carrier, after a written request by any person or company for a written statement of the rate or charge applicable to a described shipment between stated places under the tariffs at which such carrier is party, shall refuse or omit to make such statement within a reasonable time or shall misstate in writing the applicable rate, and if the person or company making such request suffers damages by reason of such refusal or omission or in consequence of the misstatement made, the carrier shall be liable to a penalty of $250. It shall be the duty of every carrier by railroad to keep posted in every station where freight is received the name of an agent resident in the place where the station is located, to whom application may be made for the information by this section required to be furnished on written request.

Sec. 10. Section 10 of the act, as heretofore amended, is amended so as to make the third paragraph read:

"Any person, corporation or company or any agent or officer thereof, who shall deliver property for transportation to any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act, or for whom, as consignor or consignee, any such carrier shall transport property, who shall knowingly and willfully, directly or indirectly, himself or by employee, agent, officer or otherwise, by false billing, false classification, false weighing, false representation of the contents of the package or the substance of the property, false report of weight, false statement or by any other device or means, whether with or without the consent or connivance of the carrier, its agent or officer, obtain or attempt to obtain transportation for such property at less than the regular rates then established and in force on the line of transportation, or who shall knowingly and willfully, directly or indirectly, himself or by employee, agent, officer or otherwise, by false statement or representation as to cost, value, nature or extent of injury or by the use of any false bill, bill of lading, receipt, voucher, roll, account, claim, certificate, affidavit or deposition, knowing the same to be false, fictitious or fraudulent, or to contain any false, fictitious or fraudulent statement or entry, obtain or attempt to obtain any allowance, refund or payment for damage or otherwise in connection with or growing out of the transportation of or agreement to transport such property whether with or without the consent or connivance of the carrier, whereby the compensation of such carrier for such transportation, either before or after payment, shall in fact be made less than the regular rates then established and in force on the line of transportation, shall be deemed guilty of fraud, which is hereby declared a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction within the district in which such offense was wholly or in part committed, be subject to a fine of not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of not exceeding two years or both, in the discretion of the court; provided, that the penalty of imprisonment shall not apply to artificial persons."

Sec. 11. Section 13 of the act is amended so as to provide that the interstate commerce commission shall have the same powers and authority to proceed with any inquiry instituted on its own motion as though it had been appealed to by complaint or petition under any of the provisions of the act, including the power to make and enforce any order or orders in the case, or relating to the matter or thing concerning which inquiry is had excepting orders for the payment of money.

RATE REGULATIONS.

Sec. 12. Section 15 of the act, as heretofore amended, is further amended so as to read as follows:

"That whenever, after full hearing upon a complaint made as provided in section 13 of this act or after a full hearing under an order for investigation and hearing made by the commission on its own initiative (either in extension of any pending complaint or without any complaint whatever), the commission shall be of opinion that any individual or joint rates or charges whatsoever demanded, charged or collected by any common carrier or carriers subject to the provisions of this act for the transportation of persons or property or for the transmission of messages by telegraph or telephone as defined in the first section of this act, or that any individual or joint classifications, regulations or practices whatsoever of such carrier or carriers subject to the provisions of this act are unjust or unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial or otherwise in violation of any of the provisions of this act, the commission is hereby authorized and empowered to determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable individual or joint rate or rates, charge or charges, to be hereafter observed in such case as the maximum to be charged and what individual or joint classification, regulation or practice is just, fair and reasonable to be thereafter followed, and to make an order that the carrier or carriers shall cease and desist from such violation to the extent to which the commission finds the same to exist, and shall not thereafter publish, demand or collect any rate or charge for such transportation or transmission in excess of the maximum rate or charge so prescribed and shall adopt the classification and shall conform to and observe the regulation or practice so prescribed. All orders of the commission, except orders for the payment of money, shall take effect within such reasonable time, not less than thirty days, and shall continue in force for such period of time not exceeding two years, as shall be prescribed in the order of the commission, unless the same shall be suspended or modified or set aside by the commission, or be suspended or set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction. Whenever the carrier or carriers, in obedience to such order of the commission or otherwise, in respect to joint rates, fares or charges, shall fail to agree among themselves upon the apportionment or division thereof the commission may, after hearing, make a supplemental order prescribing the just and reasonable proportion of such joint rate to be received by each carrier party thereto, which order shall take effect as a part of the original order.

"Whenever there shall be filed with the commission any schedule stating a new individual or joint rate, fare or charge or any new individual or joint classification, or any new individual or joint regulation or practice affecting rate, fare or charge, the commission shall have, and it is hereby given, authority, either upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, at once, and if so orders without answer or other formal pleading by the interested carrier or carriers, but upon reasonable notice, to enter upon a hearing concerning the propriety of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation or practice, and pending such hearing and the decision thereon the commission upon filing with such schedule and delivering to the carrier or carriers affected thereby a statement in writing of its reasons for such suspension may suspend the operation of such schedule and defer the use of such rate, fare, classification, regulation or practice, but not for a longer period than 120 days beyond the time when such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation or practice would otherwise go into effect, and after full hearing, whether completed before or after the rate, charge, classification, regulation or practice goes into effect, the commission may make such order in reference to such rate, charge, classification, regulation or practice as would be proper in a proceeding initiated after the rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation or practice had become effective; provided, that if any such hearing cannot be concluded within the period of suspension, as above stated, the interstate commerce commission may, in its discretion, extend the time of suspension for a further period not exceeding six months. At any hearing involving a rate increased after Jan. 1, 1910, or of a rate sought to be increased after the passage of this act, the burden of proof to show that the proposed increased rate is just and reasonable shall be upon the common carrier, and the commission shall give to the hearing and decision of such questions preference over all other questions pending before it and decide the same as speedily is possible.

THROUGH ROUTES.

"The commission may also, after hearing, on a complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, establish through routes and joint classifications and may establish joint rates as the maximum to be charged and may prescribe the division of such rates as hereinbefore provided and the terms and conditions under which such through routes shall be operated, whenever the carriers themselves shall have refused or neglected to establish voluntarily such through routes or joint classifications or joint rates, and this provision shall apply when one of the connecting carriers is a water line. The commission shall not, however, establish any through route, classification or rate between street electric passenger railways not engaged in the general business of transporting freight in addition to their passenger and express business and railroads of a different character, nor shall the commission have the right to establish any through route classification rate, fare or charge when the transportation is wholly by water, and any transportation by water affected by this act shall be subject to the laws and regulations applicable to transportation by water.

"And in establishing such through route the commission shall not require any company, without its consent, to embrace in such route substantially less than the entire length of its railroad and of any intermediate railroad operated in conjunction and under a common management or control therewith which lies between the termini of such proposed through route, unless to do so would make such through route unreasonably long as compared with another practicable through route which could otherwise be established.

"In all cases where at the time of delivery of property to any railroad corporation being a common carrier, for transportation subject to the provisions of this act to any point of destination, between which and the point of such delivery for shipment two or more through routes and through rates shall have been established as in this act provided, to which through routes and through rates such carrier is a party, the person, firm or corporation making such shipment, subject to such reasonable exceptions and regulations as the interstate commerce commission shall from time to time prescribe, shall have the right to designate in writing by which of such through routes such property shall be transported to destination, and it shall thereupon be the duty of the initial carrier to route said property and issue a through bill of lading therefor as so directed, and to transport said property over its own line or lines and deliver the same to a connecting line or lines according to such through route, and it shall be the duty of each of said connecting carriers to receive said property and transport it over the said line or lines and deliver the same to the next succeeding carrier or consignee according to the routing instructions in said bill of lading; provided, however, that the shipper shall in all instances have the right to determine, where competing lines of railroad constitute portions of a through line or route, over which of said competing lines so constituting a portion of said through line or route his freight shall be transported.

"It shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act or any officer, agent or employee of such common carrier, or for any other person or corporation lawfully authorized by such common carrier to receive information therefrom, knowingly to disclose to or permit to be acquired by any person or corporation other than the shipper or consignee, without the consent of such shipper or consignee, any information concerning the nature, kind, quantity, destination, consignee or routing of any property tendered or delivered to such common carrier for interstate transportation, which information may be used to the detriment or prejudice of such shipper or consignee or which may improperly disclose his business transactions to a competitor; and it shall also be unlawful for any person or corporation to solicit or knowingly receive any such information which may be so used; provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the giving of such information in response to any legal process issued under the authority of any state or federal court, or to any officer or agent of the government of the United States or of any state or territory, in the exercise of his powers, or to any officer or other duly authorized person seeking such information for the prosecution of persons charged with or suspected of crime; or information given by a common carrier to another carrier or its duly authorized agent, for the purpose of adjusting mutual traffic accounts in the ordinary course of business of such carriers.

"Any person, corporation or association violating any of the provisions of the next preceding paragraph of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and for each offense, on conviction, shall pay to the United States a penalty of not more than $1,000.

"If the owner of the property transported under this act directly or indirectly renders any service connected with such transportation or furnishes any instrumentality used therein, the charge and allowance therefor shall not be more than is just and reasonable, and the commission may, after a hearing on complaint or on its own initiative, determine what is a reasonable charge as the maximum to be paid by the carrier or carriers for the services so rendered or for the use of the instrumentality so furnished, and fix the same by appropriate order, which order shall have the same force and effect and be enforced in like manner as the orders above provided for under this section.

"The foregoing enumeration of powers shall not exclude any power which the commission would otherwise have in the making of an order under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 13. Section 16 of the act, as heretofore amended, is further amended so as to permit the filing of petitions for damages in state courts of general jurisdiction, as well as in the Circuit courts of the United States. Every order of the commission shall be served upon the designated agent of the carrier in the city of Washington or in such other manner as may be provided by law.

If any carrier fails or neglects to obey any order of the commission other than for the payment of money, while the same is in effect, the interstate commerce commission or any party injured thereby, or the United States, by its attorney-general, may apply to the Commerce court for the enforcement of such order. If, after hearing, that court determines that the order was regularly made and duly served and that the carrier is in disobedience of the same, the court shall enforce obedience to such order by a writ of injunction or other proper process, mandatory or otherwise, to restrain such carrier, its officers, agents or representatives from further disobedience of such order or to enjoin upon it or them obedience to the same.

Sec. 14. Section 20 of the act, as heretofore amended, is further amended by providing that the detailed reports required from the carriers subject to the act shall contain statistics for the twelve months ending June 30 in each year or Dec. 31, if the commission by order substitute that period for the year ending June 30.

Sec. 15. Nothing in the act shall undo or impair any proceedings heretofore taken by or before the interstate commission.

STOCK AND BOND COMMISSION.

Sec. 16. That the president is hereby authorized to appoint a commission to investigate questions pertaining to the issuance of stocks and bonds by railroad corporations, subject to the provisions of the act to regulate commerce, and the power of congress to regulate or affect the same and to fix the compensation of the members of such commission. Said commission shall be and is hereby authorized to employ experts to aid in the work of inquiry and examination, and such clerks, stenographers and other assistants as may be necessary, which employees shall be paid such compensation as the commission may deem just and reasonable upon a certificate to be issued by the chairman of the commission. The several departments and bureaus of the government shall detail from time to time such officials and employees and furnish such information to the commission as may be directed by the president. For the purposes of its investigations the commission shall be authorized to incur and have paid upon the certificate of its chairman such expenses as the commission shall deem necessary; provided, however, that the total expenses authorized or incurred under the provisions of this section for compensation, employees or otherwise shall not exceed the sum of $25,000.

[The following were appointed Sept. 3, 1910, as members of the stock and bond commission authorized by this section: Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, president of Yale university, chairman; Frederick N. Judson, St. Louis, Mo.; Frederick Strauss, New York, N. Y.; Walter L. Fisher, Chicago, Ill.; Prof. H. B. Meyer, Madison, Wis.]

Sec. 17. That no interlocutory injunction suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation or execution of any statute of a state by restraining the action of any officer of such state in the enforcement or execution of such statute shall be issued or granted by any justice of the Supreme court or by any Circuit court of the United States or by any judge thereof, or by any district judge acting as circuit judge, upon the ground of the unconstitutionality of such statute unless the application for the same shall be presented to a justice of the Supreme court of the United States or to a circuit judge or to a district judge acting as circuit judge, and shall be heard and determined by three judges, of whom at least one shall be a justice of the Supreme court of the United States or a circuit judge, and the other two may be either circuit or district judges, and unless a majority of said three judges shall concur in granting such application. Whenever such application as aforesaid is presented to a justice of the Supreme court of the United States or to a judge he shall immediately call to his assistance one or more judges to determine the application two other judges; provided, however, that one of such three judges shall be a justice of the Supreme court of the United States or a circuit judge. Said application shall not be heard or determined before at least five days' notice of the hearing has been given to the governor and to the attorney-general of the state and to such other persons as may be defendants in the suit; provided, that if of opinion that irreparable loss or damage would result to the complainant unless a temporary restraining order is granted, any justice of the Supreme court of the United States or any circuit or district judge may grant such temporary restraining order at any time before such hearing and determination of the application for an interlocutory injunction, but such temporary restraining order shall only remain in effect until the hearing and determination of the application for an interlocutory injunction upon notice as aforesaid. The hearing upon such application for an interlocutory injunction shall be given precedence and shall be in every way expedited and be assigned for a hearing at the earliest practicable day after the expiration of the notice hereinbefore provided for. An appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme court of the United States from the order granting or denying, after notice and hearing, an interlocutory injunction in such case.

Sec. 18. That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after the expiration of sixty days after its passage, except as to sections 12 and 16, which sections shall take effect and be in force immediately. (Approved June 18, 1910.)

POSTAL SAVINGS BANK LAW.

(Text in full.)

An act to establish postal savings depositories for depositing savings at interest with the security of the government for repayment thereof and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that there be and is hereby created a board of trustees for the control, supervision and administration of the postal savings depository offices designated and established under the provisions of this act, and of the funds received as deposits at such postal savings depository offices by virtue thereof. Said board shall consist of the postmaster-general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney-general, severally, acting ex officio, and shall have power to make all necessary and proper regulations for the receipt, transmittal, custody, deposit, investment and repayment of the funds deposited at postal savings depository offices.

The board of trustees shall submit a report to congress at the beginning of each regular session showing by states and territories (for the preceding fiscal year) the number and names of post-offices receiving deposits, the aggregate amount of deposits made therein, the aggregate amount of withdrawals therefrom, the number of depositors in each, the total amount standing to the credit of all depositors at the conclusion of the year, the amount of such deposits at interest, the amount of interest received thereon, the amount of interest paid thereon, the amount of deposits surrendered by depositors for bonds issued by authority of this act and the number and amount of unclaimed deposits. Also the amount invested in government securities by the trustees, the amount of extra expense of the postoffice department and the postal service incident to the operation of the postal savings depository system, the amount of work done for the savings depository system by the postoffice department and postal service in the transportation of free mail and all other facts which it may deem pertinent and proper to present.

Sec. 2. That the postmaster-general is hereby directed to prepare and issue special stamps of the necessary denominations for use, in lieu of penalty or franked envelopes, in the transmittal of free mail resulting from the administration of this act.

Sec. 3. That said board of trustees is hereby authorized and empowered to designate such post-offices as it may select to be postal savings depository offices, and each and every postoffice so designated by order of said board is hereby declared to be a postal savings depository office within the meaning of this act and to be authorized and required to receive deposits of funds from the public and to account for and dispose of the same, according to the provisions of this act and the regulations made in pursuance thereof. Each postal savings depository office shall be kept open for the transaction of business during such hours as the postmaster-general, with the approval of the board of trustees, shall direct.

ACCOUNTS AND PASS BOOKS.

Sec. 4. That accounts may be opened and deposits made in any postal savings depository established under this act by any person of the age of 10 years or over, in his or her own name, or by a married woman in her own name and free from any control or interference by her husband, but no person shall at the same time have more than one postal savings account in his or her own right.

Sec. 5. That the postmaster at a postal savings depository office shall, upon the making of an application to open an account under this act and the submission of an initial deposit, deliver to the depositor a pass book free of cost, upon which shall be written the name and signature or mark of the depositor and such other memoranda as may be necessary for purposes of identification, in which pass book entries of all deposits and withdrawals shall be made in both figures and writing; provided, that the postmaster-general may, with the approval of the board of trustees, adopt some other device or devices in lieu of a pass book as a means of making and preserving evidence of deposits and withdrawals.

Sec. 6. That at least $1 or a larger amount in multiples thereof must be deposited before an account is opened with the person depositing the same, and $1 or multiples thereof may be deposited after such account has been opened, but no one shall be permitted to deposit more than $100 in any one calendar month; provided that in order that smaller amounts may be accumulated for deposit any person may purchase for 10 cents from any depository office a postal savings card to which may be attached specially prepared adhesive stamps, to be known as "postal savings stamps," and when the stamps so attached amount to $1 or a larger sum in multiples thereof, including the 10-cent postal savings card, the same may be presented as a deposit for opening an account, and additions may be made to any account by means of such card and stamps in amounts of $1 or multiples thereof, and when a card and stamps thereto attached are accepted as a deposit the postmaster shall immediately cancel the same. It is hereby made the duty of the postmaster-general to prepare such postal savings cards and postal savings stamps of denominations of 10 cents and to keep them on sale at every postal savings depository office, and to prescribe all necessary rules and regulations for the issue, sale and cancellation thereof.

Sec. 7. That interest at the rate of 2 per centum per annum shall be allowed and entered to the credit of each depositor once in each year, the same to be computed on such basis and under such rules and regulations as the board of trustees may prescribe, but interest shall not be computed or allowed on fractions of a dollar. Provided, that the balance to the credit of any one person shall never be allowed to exceed $500, exclusive of accumulated interest.

Sec. 8. That any depositor may withdraw the whole or any part of the funds deposited to his or her credit, with the accrued interest, upon demand and under such regulations as the board of trustees may prescribe. Withdrawals shall be paid from the deposits in the state or territory, so far as the postal funds on deposit in such state or territory may be sufficient for the purpose, and, so far as practicable, from the deposits in the community in which the deposit was made. No bank in which postal savings funds shall be deposited shall receive any exchange or other fees or compensation on account of the issuing or collection of any checks or the performance of any other service in connection with the postal savings depository system.

DISPOSAL OF FUNDS.

Sec. 9. That postal savings funds received under the provisions of this act shall be deposited in solvent banks, whether organized under national or state laws, being subject to national or state supervision and examination, and the sums deposited shall bear interest at the rate of not less than 2½ per centum per annum, which rate shall be uniform throughout the United States and territories thereof, but 5 per centum of such funds shall be withdrawn by the board of trustees and kept with the treasurer of the United States, who shall be treasurer of the board of trustees, in lawful money as a reserve. The board of trustees shall take from such banks such security in public bonds or other securities, supported by the taxing power, as the board may prescribe, approve and deem sufficient and necessary to insure the safety and prompt payment of such deposits on demand. The funds received at the postal savings depository offices in each city, town, village and other locality shall be deposited in banks located therein (substantially in proportion to the capital and surplus of each such bank) willing to receive such deposits under the terms of this act and the regulations made by authority thereof, but the amount deposited in any one bank shall at no time exceed the amount of the paid-in capital and one-half the surplus of such bank. If no such bank exists in any city, town, village or locality, or if none where such deposits are made will receive such deposit on the terms prescribed, then such funds shall be deposited under the terms of this act in the bank most convenient to such locality. If no such bank in any state or territory is willing to receive such deposits on the terms prescribed, then the same shall be deposited with the treasurer of the board of trustees, and shall be counted in making up the reserve of 5 per centum. Such funds may be withdrawn from the treasurer of said board of trustees and all other postal savings funds or any part of such funds may be at any time withdrawn from banks and savings depository offices for the repayment of postal savings depositors when required for that purpose. Not exceeding 30 per centum of the amount of such funds may at any time be withdrawn by the trustees for investment in bonds or other securities of the United States, it being the intent of this act that the residue of such funds, amounting to 65 per centum thereof, shall remain on deposit in the banks in each state and territory willing to receive the same under the terms of this act, and shall be a working balance and also a fund which may be withdrawn for investment in bonds or other securities of the United States, but only by direction of the president, and only when in his judgment, the general welfare and the interests of the United States so require. Interest and profit accruing from the deposits or investment of postal savings funds shall be applied to the payment of interest due to postal savings depositors as hereinbefore provided, and the excess thereof, if any, shall be covered into the treasury of the United States as a part of the postal revenue; provided, that postal savings funds in the treasury of said board shall be subject to disposition as provided in this act, and not otherwise; and provided further, that the board of trustees may at any time dispose of bonds held as postal savings investments and use the proceeds to meet withdrawals of deposits by depositors. For the purposes of this act, the word "territory" as used herein shall be held to include the District of Columbia, the District of Alaska and Porto Rico, and the word "bank" shall be held to include savings banks and trust companies doing a banking business.

UNITED STATES BONDS.

Sec. 10. That any depositor in a postal savings depository may surrender his deposit or any part thereof, in sums of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100 and multiples of $100 and $500, and receive in lieu of such surrendered deposits, under such regulations as may be established by the board of trustees, the amount of the surrendered deposits in United States coupon or registered bonds of the denominations of $20, $40, $60, $80, $100 and $500, which bonds shall bear interest at the rate 2½ per centum per annum, payable semiannually and be redeemable at the pleasure of the United States Treasury one year from the date of their issue and payable twenty years from such date, and both principal and interest shall be payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of value; provided, that the bonds herein authorized shall be issued only (first) when there are outstanding bonds of the United States subject to call, in which case the proceeds of the bonds shall be applied to the redemption at par of outstanding bonds of the United States subject to call, and (second) at times when under authority of law other than that contained in this act the government desires to issue bonds for the purpose of replenishing the treasury, in which case the issue of bonds under authority of this act shall be in lieu of the issue of a like amount of bonds issuable under authority of law other than that contained in this act; provided further, that the bonds authorized by this act shall be issued by the secretary of the treasury under such regulations as he may prescribe; and provided further, that the authority contained in section nine of this act for the investment of postal savings funds in United States bonds shall include the authority to invest in the bonds herein authorized whenever such bonds may be lawfully issued; and provided further, that the bonds herein authorized shall be exempt from all taxes or duties of the United States, as well as from taxation in any form by or under state, municipal or local authority; and provided further, that no bonds authorized by this act shall be receivable by the treasurer of the United States as security for the issue of circulating notes by national banking associations.

Sec. 11. That whenever the trustees of the postal savings fund have in their possession funds available for investment in United States bonds they may notify the secretary of the treasury of the amount of such funds in their hands which they desire to invest in bonds of the United States subject to call, whereupon, if there are United States bonds subject to call, the secretary of the treasury shall call for redemption an amount of such bonds equal to the amount of the funds in the hands of the trustees which the trustees desire to thus invest, and the bonds so called shall be redeemed at par with accrued interest at the treasury of the United States on and after three months from the date of such call, and interest on the said bonds shall thereupon cease: Provided, that the said bonds when redeemed shall be reissued at par to the trustees without change in their terms as to rate of interest and date of maturity; and provided further, that the bonds so reissued may, in the discretion of the secretary of the treasury, be called for redemption from the trustees in like manner as they were originally called for redemption from their former owners whenever there are funds in the treasury of the United States available for such redemption.

Sec. 12. That postal savings depository funds shall be kept separate from other funds by postmasters and other officers and employees of the postal service, who shall be held to the same accountability under their bonds for such funds as for public moneys, and no person connected with the postoffice department shall disclose to any person other than the depositor the amount of any deposit, unless directed so to do by the postmaster-general. All statutes relating to the safekeeping of and proper accounting for postal receipts are made applicable to postal savings funds and the postmaster-general may require postmasters, assistant postmasters and clerks at postal savings depositories to give any additional bond he may deem necessary.

COMPENSATION OF POSTMASTERS.

Sec. 13. That additional compensation shall be allowed postmasters at postoffices of the fourth class for the transaction of postal savings depository business. Such compensation shall not exceed ¼ of 1 per centum on the average sum upon which interest is paid each calendar year on receipts at such postoffice, and shall be paid from the postal revenues, but postmasters, assistant postmasters, clerks or other employees at postoffices of the presidential grade shall not receive any additional compensation for such service.

Sec. 14. That the sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to enable the postmaster-general and the board of trustees to establish postal savings depositories in accordance with the provisions of this act, including the reimbursement of the secretary of the treasury for expenses incident to the preparation, issue and registration of the bonds authorized in this act, and the postmaster-general is authorized to require postmasters and other postal officers and employees to transact, in connection with their other duties, such postal savings depository business as may be necessary, and he is also authorized to make and with the approval of the board of trustees promulgate and from time to time to modify or revoke, subject to the approval of said board, such rules and regulations not in conflict with law as he may deem necessary to carry the provisions of this act into effect.

Sec. 15. That all the safeguards provided by law for the protection of public moneys and all statutes relating to the embezzlement, conversion, improper handling, retention, use or disposal of postal and money-order funds and the punishments provided for such offenses are hereby extended and made applicable to postal savings depository funds and all statutes relating to false returns of postal and money-order business, the forgery, counterfeiting, alteration, improper use or handling of postal and money-order blanks, forms, vouchers, accounts and records, and the dies, plates and engravings therefor, with the penalties provided in such statutes, are hereby extended and made applicable to postal savings depository business, and the forgery, counterfeiting, alteration, improper use or handling of postal savings depository blanks, forms, vouchers, accounts and records and the dies, plates and engravings therefor.

Sec. 16. That the faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of the deposits made in postal savings depository offices, with accrued interest thereon as herein provided.

Sec. 17. That the final judgment, order or decree of any court of competent jurisdiction adjudicating any right or interest in the credit of any sums deposited by any person with a postal savings depository if the same shall not have been appealed from and the time for appeal has expired shall, upon submission to the postmaster-general of a copy of the same, duly authenticated in the manner provided by the laws of the United States for the authentication of the records and judicial proceedings of the courts of any state or territory or of any possession subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, when the same are proved or admitted within any other court within the United States, be accepted and pursued by the board of trustees as conclusive of the title, right, interest or possession so adjudicated and any payment of said sum in accordance with such order, judgment or decree shall operate as a full and complete discharge of the United States from the claim or demand of any person or persons to the same. [Approved, June 25, 1910.]

ADMISSION OF NEW MEXICO AND ARIZONA.

The qualified electors of the territory of New Mexico are authorized to vote for and choose delegates to form a constitutional convention for the purpose of framing a constitution for the proposed state of New Mexico. The convention shall consist of 100 delegates apportioned equitably among the several counties of the territory in accordance with the voting population, as shown by the vote for delegates in congress at the election of 1908.

Within thirty days after the approval of this act the governor of the territory shall order an election of such delegates on a day specified, not earlier than sixty nor later than ninety days after the approval of the act. The election shall be conducted under the same rules as obtain in other elections in the territory. The delegates elected shall meet in the hall of the house of representatives in the capital of New Mexico at noon on the fourth Monday after their election and they shall receive compensation for the period they are actually in session, but not for more than sixty days in all. After organization they shall declare on behalf of the people of the proposed state that they adopt the constitution of the United States, whereupon the convention shall form a constitution and provide for a state government. The constitution shall be republican in form and make no distinction in civil or political rights on account of race or color, and shall not be repugnant to the constitution of the United States and the principles of the declaration of independence.

And the convention shall provide by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the people of the United States and of the said state:

1. That perfect toleration of religious sentiment shall be secured, that polygamy and the sale of liquor to Indians shall be forever prohibited.

2. That the people of the proposed state do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the ungranted public lands lying within its boundaries and to Indian lands acquired from the United States; that lands and other property belonging to nonresident citizens shall never be taxed at a higher rate than the lands and property of residents; that no taxes shall be imposed upon lands or property of the United States.

3. That the debts of the territory and of the counties thereof shall be assumed and paid by the state.

4. That provision shall be made for the establishment and maintenance of a system of public schools, open to all the children of the state and free from sectarian control, and that they shall be conducted in English.

5. That the state shall never enact any law restricting the right of suffrage on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude, and that ability to read, write, speak and understand the English language sufficiently well to conduct the duties of the office of the aid of an interpreter shall be a necessary qualification for all state officers and members of the state legislature.

6. That the capital of the state shall, until changed by the electors of the state voting at an election provided by the legislature for that purpose, be in the city of Santa Fe, but no election shall be called prior to Dec. 31, 1925.

7. That there be and are reserved to the United States, with the full acquiescence of the state, all the rights and powers for carrying out the provisions of the act appropriating the receipts from the sale of public lands in certain states and territories to the construction of irrigation works.

8. That when Indian lands are allotted, sold or disposed of, they shall be subject for a period of twenty-five years to the laws of the United States prohibiting the introduction of liquor into the Indian country.

9. That the state and its people consent to all the provisions of this act concerning the lands granted or confirmed to the state, to the terms upon which they are made and the means of enforcing such terms, as in this act provided.

When the constitution shall be formed the convention shall provide for its submission to the people of New Mexico for ratification at an election to be held on a day not earlier than sixty nor later than ninety days after the convention adjourns. The returns shall be canvassed on the third Monday after the election. If the constitution is rejected the governor shall order the constitutional convention to reassemble at a date not later than twenty days after he receives the documents showing the rejection of the constitution and thereafter a new constitution shall be framed.

When the constitution and such provisions thereof as have been separately submitted shall have been ratified by the people of New Mexico, a certified copy of the same shall be submitted to the president of the United States and to congress for approval. If congress and the president approve the constitution and the separate provisions, or, if the president approves the same and congress fails to disapprove it during the next regular session thereof, then the president shall certify such facts to the governor of New Mexico, who shall within thirty days order an election for state and county officers, members of the legislature, members of congress and such other officers as are provided for in the state constitution.

When the election has been held the governor shall certify the result to the president of the United States, who thereupon shall issue his proclamation announcing the result of the election. Upon the issuance of this proclamation the proposed state of New Mexico shall be deemed admitted by congress into the union on an equal footing with the other states.

The usual provisions are made for setting aside certain lands for school and university purposes. The state, when admitted, shall constitute one judicial district, which shall be attached to the eighth judicial circuit. The Circuit and District courts shall be held at the capital of the state.

The sum of $100,000 is appropriated for defraying the expenses incident to the elections and convention provided for in the act.

ARIZONA.

The sections of the act relating to the admission of Arizona are similar in nearly all respects to those concerning New Mexico. The delegates to the constitutional convention shall number fifty-two. The capital shall be at Phoenix until changed

[Approved March 4, 1910.]

COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

The act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages" is amended by adding an article to be known as article XIII. It provides that all cities and villages of Illinois not exceeding 200,000 in population may adopt the municipal form of government by proceeding as required by the amended law. Whenever the electors of any city or village equal in number to one-tenth of the votes cast for all the candidates for mayor or president of the board of trustees at the last preceding city or village election shall petition the judge of the County court of the county in which the city or village, or the greater part of it, is located to submit to a vote the proposition for the commission form of government, it shall be the duty of the judge to submit such proposition to a special election to be held within sixty days, or to a general election if it occurs within that time. If a majority of the votes cast upon such proposition shall be in favor of its adoption, the provisions of the act shall thereby be adopted by such city or village and shall be in full force and effect.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

On the third Tuesday in April, 1911, and quadrennially thereafter, there shall be held a general municipal election at which there shall be elected a mayor and four commissioners without regard to wards. All divisions into wards of such municipalities as adopt the act shall be discontinued and the officers shall be nominated and elected at large. The mayor and commissioners elected under the provisions of this act shall be known as the council and shall hold their respective offices for the term of four years. Vacancies are to be filled by appointment by the remaining members of the council. All candidates to be voted for at elections at which a mayor and four commissioners are to be elected shall be nominated by a primary election from the city or village at large. Candidates for these offices are required to file prior to such primary election statements that they are duly qualified to hold such offices and petitions from at least twenty-five qualified voters requesting such candidacy. The ballots at the primary shall have no party, platform or principle designated, nor shall any circle be printed at the head. The two candidates receiving the highest number of votes for mayor shall be the candidates whose names shall be placed upon the ballot at the election and the eight candidates receiving the highest number of votes for commissioners, or all such candidates if less than eight, shall be placed upon the ballot for commissioners at such municipal election. Names of candidates may be written in the blanks provided for the purpose on the municipal election ballots. The ballots to be used at the election are to be similar to those at the primary and are to be without party designations and without a circle at the head. The names are to be arranged alphabetically with squares opposite each, the words "Vote for one" appearing above the list of candidates for mayor and "Vote for four" above the list of candidates for commissioners.

POWERS OF THE COUNCIL.

Every city or village adopting the commission form of government shall be governed by a council, consisting of the mayor and four commissioners, each of whom shall have the right to vote on all questions coming before the council. Three members shall constitute a quorum. The mayor shall preside at all meetings. All objections to such petition shall be filed and determined within ten days after the filing of the same. The petition being sufficient, the clerk shall immediately submit the same to the council and the council shall fix the date for holding an election to fill the vacancy caused by the recall or removal. If the officer sought to be recalled shall resign within five days after the petition is filed, the council shall appoint his successor and no election shall be held. Any proposed ordinance may be submitted to the council by petition signed by electors equal in number to 25 per cent of all the votes cast for the candidates for mayor at the last preceding general municipal election. The council shall either pass such ordinance within thirty days or, if so requested in the petition, submit the proposition to a general or special election. If a majority of the electors vote in favor of the ordinance it shall become a valid and binding ordinance, which cannot be repealed except by a vote of the people.

REFERENDUM.

No ordinance passed by the council, except when otherwise required by the general laws of the state or by the provisions of this act, except an ordinance for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, which contains a statement of its urgency, shall go into effect until thirty days from its final passage, and if within that time a petition signed by electors equal in number to at least 10 per cent of the entire vote cast for all the candidates for mayor at the last preceding general election, protesting against the passage of such ordinance, be presented to the council, the ordinance shall be suspended from going into operation, and it shall be the duty of the council to reconsider such ordinance, and if the same is not entirely repealed the council shall submit the ordinance to the voters for approval or rejection by a majority vote. Sec. 22. The officers whose duty it is to provide polling places for general elections shall provide in each such place properly equipped booths for the primary elections, enabling voters to prepare their ballots screened from observation. Ballot boxes are to be in plain view. The voting booths shall be not less than one for every seventy-five voters or fraction thereof. The vote upon candidates for United States senator, however, shall be for the sole purpose of ascertaining the sentiment of the voters of the respective parties in the state as a whole and not by senatorial districts.

Sec. 30. This prescribes the manner of filing all petitions for nominations. Where the nomination is for a state, congressional, judicial or Appellate court office or for any office in a district involving more than one county, the petition is to be filed with the secretary of state; in other cases it is to be filed with the county, city or village clerk, as the case may be.

Sec. 31. Not less than twenty days prior to the primary the secretary of state shall certify to the county clerk of each county the names of all candidates whose petitions have been filed with him and who are to be voted for in such county.

PRIMARY BALLOTS.

Sec. 32. The county clerk and the city, village and town clerk, as the case may be, shall prepare and have printed the primary ballot of each political party for each precinct in his respective county, city, village or town.

Sec. 33. It is made the duty of the county clerk of each county to have printed upon the primary ballot of each party for each precinct in his county the name of each candidate whose petition has been filed in his office or whose name has been certified to him by the secretary of state. It shall be the duty of the city, village or town clerk, as the case may be, to have printed upon the primary ballot the name of each candidate whose petition has been filed in his office.

Sec. 34. The primary ballot of each political party shall be printed upon paper of uniform quality and size, but the primary ballot of no two parties shall be of the same color.

Sec. 35. This prescribes the arrangement of names on the primary ballots, the manner in which they are to be printed and other details. The name of each office to be filled shall be printed in capital letters and in the order of its importance, beginning with that of United States senator. The names of candidates are to be arranged in the order in which their petitions were filed.

Sec. 36. This prescribes the designating words to be printed on the back of each primary ballot.

Sec. 37. Specimen ballots of each political party are to be delivered to primary judges not less than five days before the opening of the primary, which ballots shall be posted at the polling place. They are to be different in texture and color from the official ballots.

Sec. 38. The official primary ballots are to be delivered to the primary judges not less than twelve hours before the opening of the polls, 100 ballots being supplied for each 50 votes at the preceding election.

Sec. 39. The official ballots shall be put in separate sealed packages with marks on the outside showing for what precinct they are intended and the number of ballots inclosed. A receipt for the same shall be given by the primary judge to whom they are delivered.

Sec. 40. The officer charged with printing the primary ballots shall keep on hand an extra supply of ballots for each party and upon a written request by the judges shall furnish as many extra ballots as may be required.

METHOD OF VOTING.

Sec. 41. The opening of the polls shall be proclaimed by one of the primary judges. Half an hour before the closing of the polls proclamation shall be made in like manner that the polls will be closed in half an hour.

Sec. 42. Before the voting begins the ballot box shall be opened and shown to those present to be empty, after which it shall be locked and the key delivered to one of the primary judges.

Sec. 43. Every person having resided in the state one year, in the county ninety days and in the precinct thirty days next preceding the primary, who was an elector in this state on the first day of April, 1848, or obtained a certificate of naturalization in this state prior to Jan. 1, 1870, or who shall be a male citizen of the United States above the age of 21, shall be entitled to vote at such primary. The following regulations shall be applicable to such primaries:

No person shall be entitled to vote at a primary—

(a) Unless he declares his party affiliations as required by this act;

(b) Who shall have signed the petition for nomination of a candidate of any party with which he does not affiliate when such candidate is to be voted for at such primary; or

(d) If he shall have voted at a primary of another political party within a period of two years next preceding such primary. Participation in a primary of a political party which is such within a city only and is entitled to make nominations for city offices only shall not disqualify such elector from participating in other primaries of his party. In cities having a board of election commissioners only voters registered as herein provided shall be entitled to vote at such primary. The registration books prepared for and used at the election then next preceding shall be used for the primary, and any person therein registered shall be entitled to vote at the primary unless he shall have removed from the precinct or become otherwise disqualified. Any person whose name is not on the registry books who is or shall at or before the primary become a primary elector in the precinct in which he desires to vote, shall be entitled to vote by filing with the election commissioners, twenty days before the primary, an affidavit or affirmation specifying the facts. His name shall then be placed in the original registration books. Any primary elector may, on the eleventh and twelfth days immediately preceding the primary, file an application to have the name of any person entered on the registration books by affidavit erased therefrom on the ground that he is not a legal primary elector of the precinct. Rules for passing upon such applications by the election commissioners and by the County court upon the applications of persons whose names have been stricken from the registry lists are given. The section concludes:

"It is the intent and meaning of this section that all primary electors in any and all precincts, not already registered, in which they are or will be legally qualified to vote on the day of the primary, may be given an opportunity to have their names placed upon the registry books of the precinct in which they are, or will be, qualified to vote on the day of the primary, and this section shall be liberally construed to effectuate such intent."

[The primary law of 1908 was declared invalid by the state Supreme court in part because of its registration requirements, which, it was asserted, deprived constitutionally qualified voters of their right to vote at primaries.]

Sec. 44. Any person desiring to vote at a primary shall state his name, residence and party affiliations to the primary judges, one of whom shall announce the same in a distinct tone of voice. If the person is not challenged he shall be given a ballot of his party. If a person is challenged he shall not be given a ballot until he shall have established his right to vote.

Sec. 45. Whenever a person offering to vote at a primary is challenged he shall make an affidavit showing that he is qualified to vote. He must also present the affidavit of one householder in the precinct declaring that the person so challenged is duly qualified. The forms of these affidavits are given.

Sec. 46. Prescribes the manner in which a primary elector is to mark his ballot. This is done in the usual way by making a cross in the square in front of the name of each candidate of the voter's choice for each office to be filled.

Sec. 47. Before leaving the booth, the primary elector shall fold his ballot so as to conceal the marks thereon and hand it to the primary judge, who shall deposit it in the ballot box. The primary clerk shall then enter in the primary poll book the name of the primary elector, his residence and party affiliation.

Sec. 48. Any elector unable to read English or who is physically unable to mark his ballot shall, upon request, be assisted in the same manner as is provided for by the general election laws.

Sec. 49. After the opening of the polls no adjournment shall be taken until the canvass of all the votes is completed and the returns are sealed.

CANVASS OF VOTES.

Sec. 50. The returns shall be canvassed in the room where the primary is held and the primary judges shall not allow the ballot box, ballots, poll book or tally sheets to be removed until the canvass is completed.

Sec. 51. Relates to defective, unused and spoiled ballots and their disposition.

Sec. 52. This relates to the method of canvassing the primary votes.

Sec. 53. As soon as the ballots have been canvassed, the primary clerks shall foot up the tally sheets so as to show the total number of votes cast for each candidate and certify the same to be correct. Thereupon the primary judges shall enter the result in the poll books in a form which is specified.

Sec. 54. After the votes of a political party have been counted, the tally sheets footed and the entry made in the poll book the ballots shall be strung upon a strong thread, separately for each political party in the order read, and shall then be sealed in an envelope, properly indorsed.

Sec. 55. The poll books, tally sheets and ballots, enveloped, sealed and indorsed, shall be put into the hands of the primary judges, who shall, within forty-eight hours thereafter, deliver them to the clerk from whom the primary ballots were obtained and who shall keep the same for three months.

CERTIFICATES OF NOMINATION.

Sec. 56. As soon as the complete returns are delivered to the proper clerk they shall be canvassed by the proper authorities. Each of the canvassing boards shall make proclamation of the results of the primary for each political party and issue the necessary certificates, which shall be filed with the secretary of state or the proper clerk, as the case may be, who shall, within one day thereafter, issue a certificate of nomination to each of the candidates so proclaimed nominated except United States senator.

Sec. 57. The person receiving the highest number of votes at a primary as the candidate of a party for the nomination for an office shall be the candidate of that party for such office and his name shall be placed on the official ballot at the next election. Where there are two or more persons to be nominated for the same office or board the requisite number of persons receiving the highest number of votes shall be nominated and placed on the official ballot. In the case of nominations for members of the board of assessors, where five are to be elected, four of whom are to be elected from any one city and the city has the requisite number, then the candidate for nomination living outside such city having the largest number of votes of his party shall be nominated. The person receiving the highest number of votes of his party for state central committeeman of his congressional district shall be declared elected. In the case of a tie the canvassing board shall determine by lot who shall be nominated or elected.

Sec. 58. When the nomination is made for an office to be filled by the electors of an entire county and where it is the duty of the county clerk to prepare the official ballot for election, it shall be the duty of the county clerk to place upon the official ballot the names of all candidates nominated for office, as shown by the certificate of the canvassing board, and the names of all candidates certified to him by the secretary of state. When the nomination is made for an office to be filled by the electors of an entire city or village, including alderman, it shall be the duty of the city or village clerk to place upon the official ballot the names of all candidates nominated for office as shown by the certificate of the canvassing board. When the nomination is made for an office to be filled by the electors of an entire town it shall be the duty of the town clerk to place upon the official ballot the names of all candidates nominated for office as shown by the certificate of the canvassing board. Not less than fifteen days before an election to fill any office the secretary of state shall certify to the county clerk of each county within which any of the electors may, by law, vote for such candidates for such offices, the name and description of each person nominated for such office, as shown by the certificate of the canvassing board on file in his office.

SPECIAL ELECTION PRIMARIES.

Sec. 60. Whenever a special election shall be necessary the provisions of this act shall be applicable to the nomination of candidates to be voted for at such special election. The officer or board or commission whose duty it is, under the general election laws of the state, to call an election, shall fix a date for the primary for the nomination of candidates to be voted for at such special election. Fifteen days' notice must be given of such primary. In case a candidate nominated under the provisions of this act shall die before election or decline the nomination, or should the nomination become vacant for any other reason, the managing committees of the respective political parties for the territorial area in which such vacancy occurs shall fill the vacancy.

Sec. 61. In cities having a board of election commissioners the duties herein imposed upon the county, city or village clerk, as the case may be, shall be discharged by such board of election commissioners.

CONTESTS.

Sec. 62. Any candidate whose name appears upon the primary ballot of any political party may contest the election of the candidates nominated by his party, on the face of the returns, if he so desires, by filing a petition setting forth the grounds of the contest with the clerk of the County court or the clerk of the Circuit court, according to the office involved, which petition shall be verified by affidavit and filed within five days after the completion of the canvass. Notice must be given to the proper canvassing board of the pendency of the contest. Authority and jurisdiction are vested in the County court and the Circuit court and the judges thereof to hear and finally determine such contests.

Sec. 63. Nothing in the act shall be construed to prevent the nomination of independent candidates by petition, as is now or may hereafter be provided by law.

Sec. 64. No spirituous, malt, vinous or intoxicating liquor shall be sold or given away, nor shall any saloon or barroom be open on primary day.

Secs. 65 to 73 inclusive provide for the punishment of persons guilty of acts that are in violation of the primary law. In general the penalties are the same as those provided in the general election law.

Sec. 79. This repeals all acts or parts of acts in conflict with the present primary law.

Sec. 80. The invalidity of any portion of this act shall not affect the validity of any other portion thereof which can be given effect without such invalid part.

PRIMARY ELECTIONS—SENATORIAL DISTRICTS.

Section 1. The nomination of all candidates for members of the general assembly by all political parties and the election of senatorial committeemen shall be made in the manner provided in this act and not otherwise.

Sec. 2. The term "political party" as used in this act shall mean a political party which at the next preceding election for governor polled at least 2 per cent of the entire vote cast in the state.

Sec. 3. The words "senatorial office" or "senatorial officer" shall be construed as state senator and representatives in the general assembly.

Sec. 4. A primary shall be held, on the second Tuesday in April of every year in which officers are to be voted for on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, for the nomination of candidates for members of the general assembly and shall be known as the April primary.

SENATORIAL COMMITTEES.

Sec. 5. There shall be constituted a senatorial committee for each senatorial district, but this shall not prevent a political party from choosing any other committees in accordance with its practice. The senatorial committee of each political party shall be elected as follows:

(a) In senatorial districts comprising three or more counties the committee shall be composed of one member from each county, and at the primary each elector may vote for one candidate of his party residing in his county for member of the committee.

(b) In districts comprising two counties the committee shall be composed of three members, two of whom shall be elected from the county in which such political party at the general election for state and county officers polled the larger number of votes. Each primary elector residing in such county casting the highest vote may vote for two candidates of his party, residing in his county, for members of the committee; in the other county each elector may vote for one member.

(c) In districts composed of one county or a portion of one county or portions of two counties the committee shall be composed of three members, and each primary elector may vote for three candidates of his party. Within thirty days after its election the senatorial committee shall meet and organize.

PETITIONS.

Sec. 6. The various political party committees now in existence are recognized and shall perform the duties herein prescribed until committeemen are chosen in accordance with the provisions of this act. The name of no candidate for nomination for senatorial committeeman shall be printed upon the primary ballot unless a petition for nomination shall have been filed on his behalf, signed as follows:

(a) If for a senatorial office, by at least one-half of 1 per cent of the qualified primary electors in his district.

(b) If for a senatorial committeeman, by at least ten of the primary electors of his party of the county where the district is coextensive with one county or is composed of more than one county, but in case the district is wholly within one county or partly within two counties then such petition shall be signed by ten of the primary electors of his party of his senatorial district.

Sec. 7. All petitions for nomination shall be filed as follows:

(1) Where the petition is for a senatorial office, such petition shall be filed with the secretary of state not more than sixty nor less than thirty days prior to the primary.

(2) Petitions of candidates for senatorial committeemen shall be filed with the county clerk within the same limits of time as above.

(3) The secretary of state and the various clerks with whom such petitions are filed shall endorse thereon the day and hour on which each petition was filed.

(4) Petitions for nomination or for committeeman may be withdrawn from the files by written request filed with the secretary of state not less than twenty-five or with the proper clerk not less than twelve days prior to the primary.

CERTIFICATION OF CANDIDATES.

Sec. 8. Not less than twenty days prior to the primary the secretary of state shall certify to the county clerk of each county the names of all candidates for senatorial offices as specified in the petitions on file with him, which are to be voted for in such county, stating in such certificate the political affiliation of each candidate. The names of the candidates shall be certified in the order in which they shall appear on the primary ballot in accordance with the order in which the petitions shall have been filed.

Sec. 9. The county clerk of each county or the board of election commissioners, as the case may be, shall prepare and have printed the primary ballot of each political party for each precinct in his county, and the names of all candidates certified to the county clerk by the secretary of state and of all candidates for senatorial committeeman whose petitions have been filed in said office shall be placed on the same ballot as the candidates for other offices for nominations to be voted on at the same primary election, properly arranged, however, under the name of each office. Below the name of the office of representative in the general assembly shall be printed in small letters the directions to the voters, "Vote for one, two or three."

Sec. 10. The secretary of state shall, in his certificate to the county clerk, certify the position which the names of candidates for senatorial offices shall occupy upon the primary ballot with reference to the position of candidates for other offices. The names of the candidates for senatorial committeemen shall be placed on the primary ballot immediately after the names of the candidates for senatorial offices. In the order in which their petitions were filed with the county clerk.

CUMULATIVE VOTING.

Sec. 11. At least thirty-three days prior to the April primary the senatorial committee of each political party shall meet and fix the number of candidates to be nominated by their party at the primary for representative in the general assembly. A copy of such resolution shall within five days thereafter be filed with the secretary of state and with the county clerk of each county in the senatorial district. In all primaries for the nomination of candidates for representatives in the general assembly each elector may cast three votes for one candidate or may distribute the same or equal parts thereof among two candidates or three candidates, as he shall see fit. And the said candidate or candidates for nomination highest in votes shall be declared nominated for the office to be filled.

CANVASS OF VOTES.

Sec. 12. The votes for the nomination of candidates for representative in the general assembly shall be canvassed in the following manner:

(1) When a cross is placed in each of the squares preceding the names of three candidates and the ballot for representative is not otherwise marked it shall be counted as one vote for each candidate.

(2) When a cross is placed in each of the squares preceding the names of two candidates it shall be counted as one and one-half votes for each of such candidates.

(3) When a cross is placed in the square before the name of one candidate it shall be counted as three votes for such candidate.

(4) When the ballot has been marked so as to indicate an intention to cast more than three vote for the nomination of candidates for representatives such ballot shall not be counted. The requisite number of persons receiving the highest number of votes as candidates of their party in any county or senatorial district, as the case may be, shall be declared elected senatorial committee-men.

Sec. 13. Except as herein otherwise expressly provided, each and all of the provisions of any act relating to the holding of primary elections by political parties, passed by this extraordinary session of the general assembly, and acts hereafter passed amendatory thereof, shall, so far as the same may be applicable, apply to and govern primary elections held under the provisions of this act. The returns of such primary shall be made to the county clerk or the board of election commissioners, as the case may be, and shall be canvassed and certified as other returns made to the county clerk or board of election commissioners, as the case may be. The county canvassing board or the board of election commissioners, as the case may be, shall issue a certificate of election to the requisite number of persons of each political party shown by the returns to be elected members of the senatorial committee. Tabulated returns of the primary for the nomination of candidates for senatorial offices shall be made to the secretary of state, canvassed by the state primary canvassing board, and a proclamation of the result thereof made and certificates of nomination issued, as in case of other tabulated statements of returns made to the secretary of state, and the pains and penalties prescribed in the acts last referred to shall apply to all elections held under this act.

Sec. 14. Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to prevent the nomination of independent candidates by petition, as is now or may hereafter be provided by law.

FIRE FIGHTING EQUIPMENT IN COAL MINES.

The act specifies the fire fighting equipment and other means for the prevention and controlling of fires in coal mines. Among the things which must be provided by the owners or operators are water supplies, water pipes and hose, automatic sprinklers, chemical fire extinguishers, telephones and electric gong signals. [Approved March 8, 1910.]

FIELD MUSEUM SITE.

There is given and conveyed to the Field Museum of Natural History that portion of the submerged lands under Lake Michigan, in the city of Chicago, described as follows: Beginning at the center of Congress street extended 100 feet from the east line of Grant park, extending thence south 1,000 feet; thence east 950 feet; thence north 2,000 feet; thence west 950 feet; thence south 1,000 feet to the place of beginning. The same is conveyed to the Field Museum of Natural History, with authority to create an island in Lake Michigan on the submerged land described, to be used by it as a permanent site for its museum. It is provided that the museum shall be open free to the public on at least three days in the week. If the building is not erected before Jan. 1, 1925, then the title shall revert to the state of Illinois.

The museum is prohibited from selling or subletting any of the land. [Approved March 8, 1910.]

INCOME TAX.

(Senate joint resolution No. 7.)

Whereas, the congress of the United States has proposed to the several states (the following amendment to the federal constitution, viz.:

"Article XVI. The congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever sources derived, without apportionment among the several states and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Therefore, be it resolved by the senate, the house of representatives concurring therein, That the state of Illinois, by its legislature, ratifies and assents to this amendment.

Adopted by the senate Feb. 9, 1910.

Concurred in by the house March 1, 1910.

RUSSO-JAPANESE AGREEMENT.

Signed in St. Petersburg, July 4, 1910.

The imperial government of Japan and the imperial government of Russia, sincerely attached to the principles established by the convention concluded between them on the 17th of July, 1907, and desirous to develop the effects of that convention with a view to the consolidation of peace in the extreme east, have agreed to complete the said arrangement by the following provisions:

Article 1. With the object of facilitating communication and developing the commerce of nations, the two high contracting parties mutually engage to lend each other their friendly co-operation with a view to the amelioration of their respective railway lines in Manchuria and the improvement of the connecting service of the said railways and to abstain from all competition prejudicial to the realization of this object.

Art. 2. Each of the high contracting parties engages to maintain and respect the status quo in Manchuria resulting from the treaties, conventions and other arrangements concluded up to this day between Japan and Russia or between either of these two powers and China. Copies of the aforesaid arrangements have been exchanged between Japan and Russia.

Art. 3. In case that any event arises of a nature to menace the status quo heretofore mentioned the two high contracting parties shall in each case enter into communication with each other in order to arrive at an understanding as to the measures they may judge it necessary to take for the maintenance of the said status quo.

FIRE IN BRUSSELS EXPOSITION.

Through a fire which started in the Belgian section of the Brussels international exposition Sunday evening, Aug. 14, 1910, damage estimated at between $6,000,000 and $10,000,000 was caused. The principal losses were sustained in the British and Belgian sections, but the goods in other sections were also damaged by smoke and water. The grounds were crowded with people at the time, and a panic ensued, in which two lives were lost and many persons injured. A large number of valuable works of art were destroyed and the archives of the exposition were burned. The fire originated from crossed electric wires leading into the post-office in the Belgian building.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

The steady advance in the cost of many of the necessities of life led to much discussion in 1910 as to the cause or causes. Dissatisfaction on the part of the consuming public was expressed in a meat boycott and in various other ways. Responding to the general demand for congressional action of some kind, the United States senate in February appointed a select committee with instructions to make an exhaustive investigation into the cost of living and any increase in the same since 1900. This committee was composed of the following senators: Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts, chairman; Jacob H. Gallinger, New Hampshire; Porter J. McCumber, North Dakota; Reed Smoot, Utah; Coe I. Crawford, South Dakota; James P. Clarke, Arkansas; Joseph H. Johnston, Alabama; Ellison D. Smith, South Carolina. The last three are democrats and the others republicans. The committee heard a large number of witnesses engaged in the wholesale and retail grocery trade, the wholesale and retail meat trade, the raising of cattle and sheep and the production of grain, cotton and wool. It also heard representatives of many other industries and examined numerous consular and other reports.

The committee, which was officially known as the "select committee on wages and prices of commodities," presented majority and minority reports to the senate June 23. The members divided on political lines, the majority report being signed by the republican senators and the minority by the democratic senators. Following is a brief synopsis of the majority report:

WHOLESALE PRICES.

The advance in prices has been world-wide, although farm and food products have advanced much more rapidly than manufactured articles. Prices appear to have advanced more rapidly in the United States and Canada than in the united kingdom, France, Germany, Austria, Italy and Bulgaria. While the prices of manufactured articles have in many instances remained unchanged, the quality or grade has deteriorated. The price of furniture, for instance, has remained about the same, but the quality of cheap and medium-priced furniture has declined. The report quotes from the bulletin of the United States bureau of labor on wholesale prices, a summary of which is given in this issue of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book, and then proceeds:

"Among the many causes contributing to the advance in prices may be enumerated:

"Increased cost of production of farm products by reason of higher land values and higher wages.
"Increased demand for farm products and food.
"Shifting of population from food-producing to food-consuming occupations and localities.
"Immigration to food-consuming localities.

"Reduced fertility of land resulting in lower average production or increased expenditures for fertilization.

"Increased banking facilities in agricultural localities, which enable farmers to hold their crops and market to the best advantage. This results in steady prices, but also tends to advance prices.

"Reduced supply convenient to transportation of such commodities as timber.

"Cold-storage plants which result in preventing extreme fluctuations of prices of certain commodities with the seasons, but by enabling the wholesalers to buy and sell at the best possible advantage tend to advance prices.

"Increased cost of distribution.

"Industrial combinations.

"Organizations of producers or of dealers.

"Advertising.

"Increased money supply.

"Overcapitalization.

"Higher standard of living."

The general wholesale price level in the United States represented by 257 commodities advanced 14.6 per cent during the period from 1900 to 1909.

Commodities.	Per cent.
Farm products advanced.....	39.8
Food, etc., advanced.....	19.7
Lumber and building materials advanced.....	19.6
Miscellaneous commodities advanced.....	14.7

Cloths and clothing advanced.....	12.0
Fuel and lighting advanced.....	6.9
House-furnishing goods advanced.....	5.3
Metals and implements advanced.....	3.6
Drugs and chemicals declined.....	2.9

Products of the forest.....	40.3
Products of the farm, crude.....	36.1
Products of farm, manufactured.....	24.2
Products of mines and wells.....	13.5
Products of manufacture.....	6.7
Products of fisheries.....	6.1

The testimony of all witnesses familiar with farm conditions is to the effect that the cost of production of farm products has risen very rapidly in the last ten years; wages of farm hands have increased on an average about 60 per cent, and the original investment necessary to secure land has practically doubled in that period. In many localities the crop average can be maintained only by the use of expensive fertilizers, by rotation of crops or by allowing the ground to lie fallow. The supply of available government land for general farming has been materially reduced. The cost of producing live stock has increased with the disappearance of the range.

"The assumption seems fair that for the products of the forest and of the farm the available supply is not keeping pace with the demand, while for manufactured articles the supply has practically kept pace with the demand. So far as the products of the forests are concerned, the supply in the United States is diminishing and the cost of production and marketing has increased. The farm products are being produced on much more expensive land and farm wages have increased more rapidly than have those of any other group of workers."

RETAIL PRICES.

"Retail prices in the United States in the spring of 1910 were for many articles at the highest point reached in many years. As compared with the spring of 1900 prices for bacon were more than 70 per cent higher, ham was 33 per cent higher, flour was about 50 per cent higher, butter about 45 per cent higher and eggs 100 per cent higher.

"Furniture was about the same as in 1900. Earthenware was slightly lower. Shoes and clothing were considerably higher.

"The United States bureau of labor compilation of retail prices of food includes thirty of the most important articles for the years 1890 to 1907. This compilation has not been extended beyond 1907, but for that year the thirty articles, when given a weight according to consumption in a wage-earner's family, showed an advance in 1907 of 19.3 per cent over 1900."

Retail prices for a few important articles of food in typical stores in large eastern cities for April, 1903, and April, 1910, and the increase in prices during the period between those dates are shown in the table at top of next page.

WAGES AND HOURS OF LABOR.

"Wages have not advanced as rapidly as have prices and practically all the labor difficulties which have been the subject of mediation in the United States during the last two or three years have had as their basis the advanced cost of living. In the United States wages have advanced much more rapidly than they have in European countries. Wages in the United States advanced in about the same degree as did prices until 1907. Owing to the industrial depression of 1908, following the financial panic of 1907, wages dropped considerably, and in 1909 hardly more than regained the high point reached in 1907. Wages at the present time are not on as high a level as are food prices. Salaries have advanced but very little during the last ten years.

"Hours of labor in practically all wage occupations have been reduced. The United States bureau of labor compilation of wages and hours of labor has not been continued later than 1907. In 1907 prices per hour were 22.1 per cent above 1900.

Hours of labor during the same period were reduced 3.7 per cent. The decline in hours of course affected the weekly earnings of employes for the reason that the large majority of wage earners are employed either on the piece basis or at an hourly rate. From 1900 to 1907 full time weekly earnings advanced 17.6 per cent, while wholesale prices of commodities advanced 17.2 per cent, or in almost exactly the same proportion."

The following table, based upon figures supplied to the senate committee by D. M. Craig, secretary of the Building Contractors' council of Chicago, shows for the building trades the rate of wages per hour in Chicago, New York and San Francisco in 1902 and 1910 and the per cent of increase in rates of wages per hour during the period from 1902 to 1910:

THE TARIFF.

"The tariff seems to have been no material factor in causing the advance in prices during the last decade. The greatest advances have been made in commodities upon which the tariff has little or no effect, and the absolute removal of the tariff on many of these commodities could not have afforded relief at the present time, for the reason that prices of these commodities, with a few exceptions, were as high or higher in other countries than in the United States.

"The advance in prices during the last ten years appears to have no relation to tariff legislation. Beginning with January, 1900, wholesale prices in general declined slightly, and the decline continued through July, 1901. Beginning with August, 1901, prices advanced very slowly through March, 1903, and then remained steady through May, 1905. Beginning with June, 1905, there was a marked increase through October, 1907. Beginning with November, 1907, prices began to decline and the decline continued through August, 1908. Beginning with September, 1908, prices steadily advanced until the highest point during the ten years was reached in March, 1910.

"The groups of articles which have shown the greatest advance—the products of the forests and the products of the farm—are those for which there has been practically no change in the tariff for the last ten years. Neither have there been any changes during the last twenty years which could in any way account for the increase in price. The tariff acts of 1894, 1897 and 1909 have made no changes which to any appreciable degree measure the changes in price which have taken place.

"The tariff act of 1909 made no marked changes in 'farm products and foodstuffs,' the articles grouped by the tariff acts under schedule G, 'agricultural products and provisions,' and schedule E, 'sugar, molasses and manufactures of.'

"Where alterations were made in rates they were chiefly in the direction of reductions. Yet such changes as have been made in the tariff in these schedules have apparently had no effect on prices, as almost without a single exception the prices have advanced materially since the passage of the act without any distinction as to whether the tariff was increased or decreased.

"The fact that exports of products of the farm and of the forests continue in such large quantities indicates that the price movement is due not to the tariff but to a world-wide movement upward in the prices of such commodities.

"Lumber has steadily advanced since 1900, and the price in 1909 was 41.8 per cent above the price of 1900, yet with this advance other countries have been demanding our lumber in increasing quantities.

"Material decreases were made by the tariff of 1909 on articles grouped under schedule D, 'wood and manufactures of,' but they seem to have had no appreciable effect upon lumber prices, as they have continued upward, even though lumber is imported in large quantities."

COMBINATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.

"Under this subject are grouped industrial combinations, popularly referred to as trusts, trade agreements, producers' associations, wholesale dealers' associations and retail dealers' associations. The prices of many of the trust-produced commodities have not advanced as rapidly as have other commodities. In some cases where trust-produced commodities have advanced greatly the advance appears to be due largely to other causes, such as short supplies.

"While industrial combinations may result in economies of production and distribution the fact that competition is either wholly or partly removed leads to abuses. In some cases where no actual combination of producing establishments under one head has been made, trade agreements do exist which operate to fix prices in restraint of trade fully as much as an actual trust. The effect of all such organizations as the Elgin board of trade is to advance prices."

The western meat packers were not examined by the committees for the reason that they were under investigation at the time by grand juries.

THE GOLD SUPPLY.

"The proposition that the increase in the gold supply has affected prices rests of course on the second economic theory that a marked increase in the monetary standard of value cheapens the standard, and by cheapening it increases the amount which must be paid for a commodity. It is because the general trend of world prices has seemingly responded to the contraction or expansion of the world's supply of currency that the conclusion is reached that the present abnormal production of gold is a positive factor in forcing up the level of the world's prices and in preventing their decline. It is not contended that this increase is the dominant or even a principal cause of the rise of prices, but it undoubtedly has exerted a positive effect by cheapening the standard of price and at the same time enormously increasing the amount of credit based upon gold."

THE LABOR UNIONS.

"Labor unions have not been apparently a serious factor in contributing toward advancing prices. Of course, the general tendency of labor unions is to increase wages and reduce hours, and in this way they may have indirectly affected prices by securing for the wage earners higher pay and shorter hours and thus raising the standard of living and placing them in a position to secure better homes and better home surroundings, articles of necessity of a higher grade and in greater quantities, and more articles usually classed as luxuries." They may also have attracted an increasingly large number of persons from agriculture into industrial employment, thus increasing the cost of food production on the farm.

COST OF DISTRIBUTION.

"The expenses of distributing food products by wholesalers and retailers have increased by reason of the increase in rents, taxes, wages and cost of horses and horse feed." Putting up articles in fancy packages, the use of trading stamps and the rising of prices have also contributed to advance prices.

COLD STORAGE.

"Cold storage plants have tended to level prices, although they have enabled the dealers to take the best possible advantage of conditions both in purchasing when prices are low and selling when prices are high. Eggs have shown a greater advance since 1900 than has any other article of food. This probably is due largely to supply and demand, but also in part to the fact that the cold storage has artificially forced up the price. The committee has recommended to congress a bill limiting the time food products may be kept in cold storage."

SANITARY REGULATIONS.

"Many regulations looking toward improving the quality of food and protecting the health of consumers have been passed by United States, state and local authorities during the last ten years. These regulations have been beneficial, but the effect of all of them is to advance prices to a greater or less degree." Examples of such laws are the pure-food and meat and dairy inspection laws.

OVERCAPITALIZATION.

"Overcapitalization of transportation and industrial companies has the effect of advancing prices. Increase of capital usually results in a greater amount of dividends. Increased dividends must mean increased earnings and the increased earnings come from the consumer."

IMMIGRATION.

"The number of immigrants arriving in the United States from 1900 to the present time was 8,202,288. More than 50 per cent of the total were at the most productive period of life, but only a very small percentage of this enormous number of people have entered agricultural pursuits. Practically all have entered industrial pursuits and by reason of becoming consumers instead of producers of food have contributed in no small way toward advancing the prices of food products."

HIGHER STANDARD OF LIVING.

"The standard of living has steadily advanced and consumers are demanding a much higher grade of article than ten years ago. This advance in the standard of living has been a material factor in increasing prices. In clothing and shoes the effort to keep up with the changing styles adds materially to expenditures."

FREIGHT RATES ON COMMODITIES OF LIFE.

Tables furnished by the interstate commerce commission are given to show that there has been a substantial increase in the freight rates from St. Louis, Chicago, St. Paul and Duluth to New York, and from New York to western points.

MINORITY REPORT.

The minority report, signed by Senators Johnston, Clarke and Smith, after reviewing and criticizing the findings of the majority members of the committee, concludes as follows:

"We find the three substantial causes for the advance in prices are:

- (1) The tariff.
- (2) Trusts, combines and monopolies.
- (3) Increased money supply.

"We are without sufficient data to apportion the degree of responsibility among these three causes, but that the first two are the chief malefactors we have no doubt, and they are of our own creation."

Some of the points made by the minority members are these:

The high price of land is not a cause, but the effect of the high price of farm products.

There has been an increased demand for farm products, but the supply has also increased.

The migration of men to food-consuming localities should be attributed to the rapidly increasing demand for men in the city shops and to better social, school and church privileges in the cities.

As to the increased cost of distribution, "our investigations do not show that there has been any notable increase in railroad freights since 1900."

"We do not dissent from the conclusions of the majority on this subject (overcapitalization) if the public are permitted to be taxed to pay dividends on watered stocks."

"Perhaps less than 3 per cent of our people indulge in the use of luxuries to any appreciable extent. This small number could raise the general level of prices but little more than a man could raise himself by his boot straps. The great advances have been mainly in bacon, beef, mutton and cotton goods, and they have increased vastly more than in tea, silk goods, champagne, silverware, diamonds and jewelry."

"It is difficult to understand how any one can favor high rates of duty if he does not honestly believe that it will increase the prices to be realized by the manufacturers producing the article affected by diminishing or destroying competition and thus necessarily increasing the cost to the consumer."

"The cost of production is necessarily enhanced by the fact that the producer must, under this tariff scheme, pay higher prices for his clothing, household goods, implements, machinery and other highly protected articles of necessity."

"If the purpose of the Payne-Aldrich bill was not to increase the profit to the manufacturer and cost to the consumer, we are unable to comprehend why the tariff on certain sawed lumber should have been increased 50 per cent, on shingles 66 per cent, corrugated iron and steel 115 per cent, iron and steel wire (of a certain size) coated with zinc or tin 553 per cent, razors 67 per cent, buckwheat flour 25 per cent, biscuits 125 per cent, stockings from 20 to 30 per cent and on certain cheap cotton cloth 460 per cent."

MEAT BOYCOTT OF 1910.

In Cleveland, O., Jan. 16, 1910, some 460 superintendents and foremen employed by manufacturing concerns signed a pledge to abstain from meat for thirty days, or for sixty days if prices should not fall within a month. Many others joined in the movement and in a short time 25,000 persons had signed the pledge. As this meant that at least 100,000 residents of Cleveland had ceased eating meat the effect on the butchering industry was immediate. Several of the companies concerned discharged many of their employees, as they had no work for them. The price of meat went down a little, but as the cost of other commodities decreased to some extent at the same time the fall may not have been due entirely to the boycott. This spread to other cities, including Pittsburg, Baltimore, New Orleans, New York, Chicago, Milwaukee and Boston. The Anti-Food Trust league, formed in Washington some time before the boycott began, received a large number of applications for membership and by the end of January had more than 200,000 on its list. The movement came to its climax soon after and then collapsed, without having had any permanent effect on meat prices.

WHOLESALE PRICES, 1909-10.

Wholesale prices in 1909, as measured by the prices of 257 commodities included in the investigation, advanced 3 per cent over the wholesale prices in 1908, but with this advance they were still 2.3 per cent below the high average of 1907 prices. Wholesale prices in 1909 were 14.5 per cent higher than in 1900; 14 per cent higher than in 1897, the year of lowest prices in the twenty-year period from 1890 to 1909; 12 per cent higher than in 1890 and 26.5 per cent higher than the average price for the ten years, 1890 to 1899.

The highest point reached in 1907 was in the month of October, from which month there was a general decline until August, 1908. Beginning with September, 1908, there has been an increase without a break in any month up to March, 1910. Wholesale prices in March, 1910, were higher than at any time in the preceding twenty years, being 7.5 per cent higher than in March, 1909; 10.2 per cent higher than in August, 1908; 21.1 per cent higher than the average yearly price of 1900; 49.2 per cent higher than the average yearly price of 1897, and 33.8 per cent higher than the average price for the ten years, 1890 to 1899.

The other groups showing an increase were: Food, etc., 3.4 per cent; cloths and clothing, 2.3 per cent; lumber and building materials, 4 per cent; drugs and chemicals, 1.8 per cent; miscellaneous, 5 per cent. Groups showing a decrease were: Fuel and lighting, 1.1 per cent; metals and implements, 5 per cent; house-furnishing goods, 2 per cent.

Prof. Henry C. Emery, Yale university, New Haven, Conn.
James B. Reynolds, assistant secretary of the treasury, Washington, D. C.
Alvin H. Sanders, editor Breeders' Gazette, Chicago.
The appointment of the commission was authorized in the second section of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law of 1909, the last sentence in the section reading: "To secure the information necessary in carrying out the provisions of this section the president is authorized to employ such persons as may be required." The maximum compensation of each member of the commission is $7,500.

SYNOPSIS OF TARIFF LEGISLATION SINCE 1884.

Morrison Bills—First bill presented to 48th congress during Chester A. Arthur's administration; proposed a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent with free iron ore, coal and lumber; defeated in house April 15, 1884, by vote of 159 to 155; house heavily democratic and senate republican. Second bill presented to 49th congress during Grover Cleveland's first administration; similar to first bill, proposing free wool, salt and lumber; defeated in house June 17, 1886, by a vote of 157 to 140; house democratic, senate republican.
Mills Bill—Presented to 50th congress during Cleveland's first administration; provided for free lumber and wool, reduction on pig iron and abolition of specific duties on cotton; passed by house July 21, 1888, by vote of 162 to 149, but failed in senate; house democratic, senate republican.
McKinley Bill—Passed by 51st congress during Benjamin Harrison's administration; became law Oct. 6, 1890; high protective measure, though remitting duties on sugar and providing for reciprocity treaties; both houses of congress republican.
Wilson Bill—Passed by 53d congress during Cleveland's second administration; became law Aug. 17, 1894, without the president's signature; both houses democratic; measure reduced duties in some cases and made additions to free list, notably wool.

Dingley Bill—Passed by 54th congress during McKinley's administration; approved July 24, 1897; passed by house 205 yeas to 122 nays, 27 members not voting; passed by senate 38 yeas to 23 nays, 23 not voting; house contained 206 republicans and 134 democrats and senate 46 republicans and 34 democrats; measure raised rates to produce more revenue, but was similar in many respects to the McKinley act.
Payne-Aldrich bill passed at extra session of 61st congress in first year of President William H. Taft's administration; approved Aug. 5, 1909; passed the house by a vote of 217 to 161 and the senate by a vote of 45 to 34. The conference vote in the house was 195 yeas to 183 nays, twenty republicans voting in the negative and two democrats in the affirmative. In the senate the vote on the final conference report was 47 to 31, seven republicans voting against it. In general the revision of the Dingley act was in the direction of lower duties, but there were some increases. The law is given practically in full in The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1910.

THE SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION IN WASHINGTON.

The Smithsonian institution was established by statute in 1846, under the terms of the will of James Smithson, who bequeathed his fortune in 1826 to the United States for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." From the income of the fund a building, known as the Smithsonian building, was erected in Washington, D. C., on land given by the United States. The institution is legally an establishment having as its members the president and vice-president of the United States, the chief justice and the president's cabinet. It is governed by a board of regents consisting of the vice-president, the chief justice, three members of the United States senate, three members of the house of representatives and six citizens appointed by joint resolution of congress. It is under the immediate direction of the secretary of the Smithsonian institution, who is the executive officer of the board and the director of the institution's activities. The institution aids investigators by making grants for research and exploration, providing for lectures, initiating scientific projects and publishing scientific papers. It has administrative charge of the national museum, the national gallery of art, the international exchange service, the national zoological park, the astrophysical observatory and the regional bureau for the international catalogue of scientific literature. The institution's original endowment of $541,000 has been increased by gifts and accumulated interest to $987,000, yielding an annual income of $58,375. The secretary of the institution is Charles D. Walcott.

PLAN OF THE CANAL.

The entire length of the Panama canal from deep water in the Atlantic to deep water in the Pacific is 50.5 miles. Its length on land is 40.5 miles. In passing through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific, a vessel will enter a channel with a bottom width of 500 feet in Limon bay and follow this for about seven miles to Gatun, where it will enter a series of three locks in flight and be lifted eighty-five feet to the level of the Gatun lake. It will sail at full ocean speed through this lake, in a channel varying from 1,000 to 500 feet in width, for a distance of about twenty-four miles to Bas Obispo, where it will enter the Culebra cut. It will sail through the cut, a distance of about nine miles, in a channel with a bottom width of 300 feet, to Pedro Miguel.
 There it will enter a lock and be lowered 30½ feet, to a small lake at an elevation of 54½ feet above sea level, and will sail through this for about 1¼ miles to Miraflores. There it will enter two locks in series and be lowered to sea level, passing out into the Pacific through a channel 8½ miles in length, with a bottom width of 500 feet.
 The depth of the approach channel on the Atlantic side, where the tidal oscillation does not exceed 1½ feet, will be 41 feet at mean tide, and on the Pacific side, where the maximum oscillation is 23 feet, the depth will be 45 feet at mean tide.

GATUN DAM.

The Gatun dam, which will form Gatun lake by impounding the waters of the Chagres river and other streams, will be nearly 1½ miles long, measured on its crest, nearly half a mile wide at its base, about 400 feet wide at the water surface, about 100 feet wide at the top, and its crest, as planned, will be at an elevation of 115 feet above mean sea level, or 30 feet above the normal level of the lake. The interior of the dam will be formed of a natural mixture of sand and clay, dredged by hydraulic process from pits above and below the dam, and placed between two large masses of rock and miscellaneous material, obtained from steam-shovel excavation at various points along the canal. The top and up-stream slope will be rippedraped. The spillway is a concrete lined opening, 1,200 feet long and 300 feet wide, cut through a hill of rock nearly in the center of the dam, the bottom of the opening being ten feet above sea level. During the construction of the dam, all the waters discharged from the Chagres river and its tributaries will flow through this opening.
 When the lake is formed, the spillway will be closed with a concrete dam, fitted with gates and machinery for regulating the water level of the lake.

The water level of Gatun lake, extending through the Culebra cut, will be maintained at the south end by an earth dam connecting the locks at Pedro Miguel with the high ground to the westward, about 1,700 feet long, with its crest at an elevation of 105 feet above mean tide. A small lake between the locks at Pedro Miguel and Miraflores will be formed by dams connecting the walls of Miraflores locks with the high ground on either side. The dam to the westward will be of earth, about 2,700 feet long, having its crest about 15 feet above the water in Miraflores lake. The east dam will be of concrete, about 500 feet long, and will form a spillway for Miraflores lake, with crest gates similar to those at the spillway of the Gatun dam.

GATUN LAKE.

Gatun lake will cover an area of 164 square miles, with a depth in the ship channel varying from 85 to 45 feet. Throughout the first 16 miles from Gatun the width of the channel will be 1,000 feet; then for 4 miles it will be 800 feet and for 4 miles more, 500 feet, when the entrance to Culebra cut, at Bas Obispo, will be reached. The water level in the cut will be that of the lake and the bottom width of the channel will be 300 feet.

CANAL ZONE.

The canal zone contains about 443 square miles. It begins at a point three marine miles from mean low-water mark in each ocean and extends for five miles on each side of the center line of the route of the canal. It includes the group of islands in the Bay of Panama named Perico, Naos, Culebra and Flamenco. The cities of Panama and Colon are excluded from the zone, but the United States has the right to enforce sanitary ordinances and maintain public order there in case the republic of Panama should not be able to do so. Of the 443 square miles in the zone the United States owns 322 and private persons 126. The private property may, however, be acquired at any time by the United States by purchase or by the exercise of the right of eminent domain.

THE LOCKS.

There will be twelve locks in the canal, all in duplicate; three pairs in flight at Gatun, with a combined lift of 85 feet; one pair at Pedro Miguel, with a lift of 30½ feet, and two pairs at Miraflores, with a combined lift of 54½ feet at mean tide. The dimensions of all are the same—a usable length of 1,000 feet and a usable width of 110 feet. Each lock will be a chamber, with walls and floors of concrete and water-tight gates at each end.

The side walls will be 45 to 50 feet wide at the surface of floor; will be perpendicular on the face and will narrow from the point 24½ feet above the floor until they are 8 feet wide at the top. The middle wall will be 60 feet wide, approximately 81 feet high, and each face will be vertical. At a point 42½ feet above the surface of the floor and 15 feet above the top of the middle culvert, this wall will divide into two parts, leaving a space down the center much like the letter "U," which will be 19 feet wide at the bottom. In this center space, which will be 44 feet wide at the top, will be a tunnel divided into three stories or galleries. The lowest gallery will be for drainage; the middle for the wires that carry the electric current to operate the gate and valve machinery, which will be installed in the center wall, and the upper will be a passageway for the operators. The lock chambers will be filled and emptied through lateral culverts in the floors, connected with main culverts, 18 feet in diameter, in the walls, the water flowing in and out by gravity.

The lock gates will be steel structures, 7 feet thick, 65 feet long and from 47 to 82 feet high. They will weigh from 300 to 600 tons each. For the entire canal 92 leaves will be required, the total weighing 57,000 tons. Intermediate gates will be used in the locks to save water and time, if desired, in locking small vessels through, the gates being so fixed as to divide the locks into chambers 600 and 400 feet long, respectively. Of the vessels navigating the high seas, 95 per cent are less than 600 feet long. In the construction of the locks it is estimated that there will be used approximately 4,500,000 cubic yards of concrete.

No vessel will be permitted to enter or pass through the locks under its own power. Electricity will be used to tow all vessels into and through the locks, and to operate all gates and valves, power being generated by water turbines from the head created by Gatun lake. The time required to pass a vessel through all the locks is estimated at three hours, one hour and a half in the three locks at Gatun and about the same time in the three locks on the Pacific side. The time of the passage of a vessel through the entire canal is estimated as ranging from ten to twelve hours, according to the size of the ship and the rate of speed at which it can travel.

The gold force is made up of the officials, clerical force, construction men and skilled artisans of the Isthmian canal commission and the Panama railroad. Practically all are Americans. The silver force represents the unskilled laborers of the commission and the railroad. Of these about 5,000 are Europeans, mainly Spaniards, with a few Italians and other races. The remainder—some 20,000—are West Indians, about 4,000 of whom are employed as artisans receiving 16, 20 and 25 cents, and a small number 32 and 40 cents, an hour. The standard rate of the West Indian laborer is 10 cents an hour, but a few doing special work are paid 16 and 20 cents. The larger part of the Spaniards are paid 20 cents an hour.

There have been expended for pavements, water works, sewers, etc., in the cities of Panama and Colon about $2,500,000, and work under an additional appropriation of $800,000 was in progress in these cities in 1910, making $3,300,000 in all. This sum will be returned to the United States treasury by water rates collected by the United States for a period of fifty years.

$7,000,000 worth of business a year. It feeds, clothes and provides with necessities approximately 50,000 persons. The department is self-sustaining. It has thirteen general stores in as many canal-zone villages and three camps on the relocated line of the railroad. No goods are sold for cash, only coupons issued to employes being accepted in payment for purchases.

PART OF CANAL COMPLETED.

In August 5½ miles of the canal at the Atlantic entrance were opened to navigation for the land and rock fleet of the Atlantic division. This section, added to the five miles at the Pacific entrance open to vessels of all kinds, made the total of the canal in use 10½ miles.

PANAMA RAILROAD.

The Panama railroad and the steamships run in connection with it between New York and Colon are owned and operated by the United States government. When the canal was purchased from the new French canal company the railroad and steamship property was included among the assets. It practically parallels the route of the canal nearly the whole distance. Since it was acquired by the Americans the line has been almost completely relocated to correspond with changes in the route and plan of the canal. It is 46½ miles long and runs between the cities of Colon and Panama.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The "Monroe doctrine" was enunciated by President Monroe in his message to congress Dec. 2, 1823. Referring to steps taken to arrange the respective rights of Russia, Great Britain and the United States on the northwest coast of this continent, the president went on to say:

"In the discussions to which this interest has given rise, and in the arrangements by which they may terminate, the occasion has been deemed proper for asserting, as a principle in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power. * * * We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintain it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States."

DEATH OF EDWARD VII. AND ACCESSION OF GEORGE V.

Edward VII., king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India, died in Buckingham palace, London, at 11:45 p. m., Friday, May 6, 1910. The immediate cause of his death was heart failure following an attack of bronchitis. He had for some years suffered from emphysema, with an attendant bronchial catarrh and with digestive disturbances, which undermined his naturally strong constitution. The political crisis in the kingdom brought on by the dispute between the house of commons and the house of lords over the budget also gave him much anxiety and probably affected his health to some degree. To obtain relief he went to Biarritz early in March, but while there had a severe bronchitic attack. Recovering from this he returned to London April 27 and resumed his regular duties.

Saturday, April 30, he felt a little unwell and went to Sandringham. Sunday he attended church, but in the afternoon spent some time in the open air and contracted a slight chill. Monday he returned to London, and though feeling out of sorts kept at dinner engagement. Tuesday and Wednesday he continued at work in spite of the admonitions of his medical advisers, receiving official visitors and giving audiences. He suffered from coughing and difficulty in breathing, especially at night. The physicians, Drs. Francis Henry Laking, James Reid and R. Douglas Powell, recognized the gravity of his condition and Queen Alexandra, who was on the continent, was sent for. She arrived on the afternoon of Thursday, and the fact that the king did not meet her at the railway station as usual was the first indication to the public that his illness was serious. Even on that day his majesty continued to transact public business, though he was confined to his room. Thursday evening the physicians with his consent issued the following bulletin:

"The king is suffering from an attack of bronchitis and has been confined to his room for two days. His majesty's condition causes some anxiety."

In the early hours of Friday morning, May 6, the king had several severe attacks of dyspnea, and when the physicians visited him they found that the gravity of the symptoms had increased. They issued a bulletin at 11 a. m., stating, "The king has passed a comparatively quiet night, but the symptoms have not improved and his majesty's condition gives rise to grave anxiety." The king rose in the morning and dressed, but spent most of the time seated in his chair. At noon his condition grew worse and he had several fainting spells. He had retained full control of his senses until then, and in reply to some suggestion said: "No, I shall not give in; I shall go on; I shall work to the end." These were his last conscious words.

Oxygen was freely administered, but without avail. His periods of unconsciousness became more prolonged, and at 6 p. m. the physicians issued the following bulletin:

"The king's symptoms have become worse during the day and his majesty's condition is now critical."

Late in the evening he was put to bed, having been permitted to remain seated in his chair to ease his breathing. He did not regain consciousness, and at 11:45 p. m. the end came after a prolonged period of perfect calm. The news of the king's death was told to the world in the following bulletin, signed by the physicians already named and also by Dr. Bertrand Dawson:

"His majesty the king breathed his last at 11:45 to-night in the presence of her majesty Queen Alexandra, the prince and princess of Wales, the princess royal (duchess of Fife), the Princess Victoria and the Princess Louise (duchess of Argyll)."

Mourning for the king was heartfelt and general, not only throughout the great empire over which he had reigned for nearly a decade, but in all parts of the civilized world, where it was felt that in his death the cause of international peace had lost one of its most powerful and earnest advocates. Messages of sympathy and condolence were received by Queen Alexandra and the royal family from the rulers and presidents of all nations, including one from President Taft of the United States. The latter appointed Former President Roosevelt, then in Europe, to attend the funeral as the special representative of the United States.

Wednesday, May 18, the body of King Edward was removed with simple but impressive ceremonies from Buckingham palace to Westminster hall, where it lay in state. It was viewed by hundreds of thousands, who passed the coffin in an unbroken stream until the doors were finally closed. Friday, May 20, the body was taken to Paddington station and thence conveyed to Windsor, where the funeral services were conducted by the archbishop of Canterbury in St. George's chapel. Later the royal remains were entombed in the Albert Memorial chapel.

The tribute paid to the dead king on the day of the funeral in London was perhaps the most remarkable in the history of England. In the procession from Westminster hall to the railway station the rulers of nine European nations, members of all the leading royal families, diplomats, military and naval leaders and many other distinguished persons followed the gun carriage on which the coffin rested. The three miles of streets through which the cortege moved, between solid lines of red-coated soldiers, standing with rifles reversed and the regimental colors dipped to the ground, were thronged with such a mass of silent, somberly clad people as had seldom if ever before been seen in London.

ACCESSION OF GEORGE V.

George Frederick, prince of Wales, succeeded to the throne immediately upon the death of his father, Edward VII. He assumed the title of George V. In accordance with an old custom his first official act was to send to the lord mayor of London a telegram announcing King Edward's death.

Saturday, May 7, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, George V. took the oath and was formally declared king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India, the ceremony taking place in the throne room of St. James' palace in the presence of the privy council, under the presidency of the earl of Creve. Following custom, the members of the council were first formally notified of the death of King Edward VII. and of the accession of George V. A committee then informed his majesty of what had been done, whereupon he entered the council chamber and made an address, in which he spoke of the death of his father and declared that to endeavor to follow in King Edward's footsteps and at the same time to uphold the constitutional government of the realm would be the earnest object of his life. The proclamation of his majesty's accession was signed by Prince Christian and all the other privy councilors present and by the lord mayor and the representatives of the city. His majesty took the usual oath for the security of the church of Scotland, and the councilors were all sworn. The king then received the councilors, who kissed hands on being presented, and the ceremony came to an end.

Monday, May 9, the medieval ceremony of proclaiming the accession of the new king by heralds and pursuivants in the various centers of London took place. The first proclamation was made in Friary court at St. James' palace at 9 o'clock in the morning and was witnessed from one of the windows by the new king and queen and also by their children. In the quadrangle of the court were a guard of honor of the 1st life guards, members of the army headquarters staff in full uniform and a large concourse of spectators. At the appointed time the officials of the College of Arms stepped through an open window on to the terrace on the western side of the court. The duke of Norfolk was earl marshal; Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, garter king of arms; W. H. Weldon, norroy king of arms; W. A. Lindsay, Windsor herald, and H. F. Burke, Somerset herald. The four pursuivants, Rouge Dragon, Portcullis, Rouge Croix and Blue Mantle, were E. Green, Joseph Watkin, A. Cochrane and G. W. Wollaston. As they took their places on the center of the balcony the two mace bearers and the royal trumpeters stood to the right and left. After the trumpeters had sounded a fanfare the earl marshal and the garter king of arms advanced and the latter read the proclamation:

"That the high and mighty prince, George Frederick Ernest Albert, is now, by the death of our late sovereign of happy memory, become our only lawful and rightful liege lord George V., by the grace of God king of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas, defender of the faith, emperor of India, to whom we do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience, with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom kings and queens do reign, to bless the royal Prince George V. with long and happy years to reign over us."

As Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty finished the reading he and the earl marshal raised their hats and the former called out loudly, "God save the king!" A royal salute was fired, the royal standard was raised above Marlborough house and the band played the national anthem, the spectators joining in and singing the words. Similar ceremonies, though less elaborate, took place at Charing Cross, Temple Bar and the Royal exchange. The proclamation was read on the same day in various places throughout the whole empire.

DEATH OF BJORNSTJERNE BJORNSON.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the Norwegian novelist, poet, dramatist, orator and advocate of universal peace, died in Paris, France, April 26, 1910, after an illness extending over more than a year. He was brought to Paris in November, 1909, to be treated for arterio-sclerosis, from which he was suffering, but failed to receive any permanent benefit. In February, 1910, he seemed to be at death's door, but rallied and passed the crisis for the time being. His body was brought to Norway on the cruiser Norge and the funeral took place in Christiania May 3. Bjornson was 77 years old at the time of his death.

THE DRAGO DOCTRINE.

When in the winter of 1902-03 Germany, Britain and Italy blockaded the ports of Venezuela in attempt to make the latter country settle up its debts Dr. L. F. Drago, a noted jurist of Argentina, maintained that force cannot be used by one power to collect money owing to its citizens by another power. Prominence was given to the contention by the fact that it was officially upheld by Argentina and favored by other South American republics. The principle embodied has become generally known as the "Drago doctrine."

ARBITRATION OF FISHERIES DISPUTE.

The historic Atlantic fisheries controversy, which for 130 years had been a source of annoyance to the United States and Great Britain, was submitted to the international court of arbitration at The Hague, June 1, 1910, and the decision announced Sept. 7 following. The dispute arose chiefly over the interpretation of the treaty between the two countries in 1818, but its earliest origins dated back to conditions created by the treaty of 1783. The clause in the treaty of 1818, which caused the greater part of the trouble, was as follows:

"That the inhabitants of the United States shall have forever, in common with the subjects of his Britannic majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind on that part of the southern coast of Newfoundland extending from Cape Ray to the Ramea Islands, on the western and northern coast from Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, on the shores of the Magdalen Islands and also on the coasts, bays, harbors and creeks from Mount Joli on the southern coast of Labrador to and through the straits of Belleisle, and thence northwardly indefinitely along the coast, without prejudice, however, to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson's Bay company."

In return for these privileges the United States renounced forever the right to fish within three marine miles of the coasts of British North America not included within the above. The main source of trouble was the difference of opinion as to the right of Americans to obtain supplies of the bait fishes—herring, capelin and squid—in the coast waters of Newfoundland, where alone they are to be had. This right was denied by Newfoundland, Great Britain and Canada became involved in the dispute and it was finally decided in January, 1909, to submit the whole matter to the court of arbitration at The Hague, in accordance with the principles of the convention for the settlement of international disputes, signed by many of the powers Oct. 13, 1907.

The cause was considered by the following arbitrators: Prof. H. Lammasch of Austria, president; Dr. Luis Drago of Argentina, Jhr. M. A. F. de Savornin Lohman of Holland, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick of Great Britain and Judge George Gray of the United States.

The counsel on behalf of the United States were Chandler P. Anderson of New York, agent; Elihu Root, senator from New York; George Turner of Spokane, Wash.; Samuel J. Elder of Boston, Mass.; Dr. James Brown Scott, solicitor of the state department; Charles B. Warren of Detroit, Mich., and Robert Lansing of Watertown, N. Y.

The counsel on behalf of Great Britain were A. B. Aylesworth, minister of justice of Canada, agent; Sir William Robinson, K. C., attorney-general for England; Sir Robert Finlay, K. C., former attorney-general for England; Sir H. Erle Richards, K. C. of England; John S. Ewart, K. C. of Canada; George W. Shepley, K. C. of Canada; W. N. Tilley of Canada; Sir Edward Morris, K. C. premier of Newfoundland; Sir James Wither, K. C. former attorney-general of Newfoundland, and D. Morison, K. C., attorney-general of Newfoundland.

Seven main questions were submitted for the decision of the arbitrators. The questions and findings were as follows:

1. Must any reasonable regulations made by Great Britain, Canada and Newfoundland in the form of municipal laws, ordinances or rules, necessary for the preservation of the fisheries and the maintenance of public order and morals and equitable as between local fishermen and inhabitants of the United States, be subject to the consent of the United States?

The right of Great Britain to make regulations for the preservation of the fisheries without the consent of the United States is affirmed and is declared to be inherent to the sovereign rights of Great Britain. Both parties agree that the reasonableness of the existing regulations should be submitted to an impartial commission of experts. If the United States object to any new regulation it shall not come into operation with respect to the inhabitants of the United States until a permanent mixed fishery commission has decided upon its reasonableness.

2. Have the inhabitants of the United States, while exercising the liberty to take fish on the treaty coasts, referred to in the first article of the treaty of 1818, a right to employ, as members of the fishing crews of their vessels, persons not inhabitants of the United States?

The tribunal is of opinion that the inhabitants of the United States while exercising the liberties referred to in the said article have the right to employ, as members of the fishing crews of their vessels, persons not inhabitants of the United States. But, in view of preceding considerations, the tribunal, to prevent any misunderstanding as to the effect of its award, expresses the opinion that noninhabitants employed as members of the fishing crews of United States vessels derive no benefit or immunity from the treaty.

3. Can the liberties to "take fish" and to "dry and cure fish" in the places referred to in the treaties be subjected, without the consent of the United States, to the requirement of entry or report at custom houses or the payment of light, harbor or other dues, or to any similar condition?

The tribunal decides and awards as follows: The requirement that an American fishing vessel should report, if proper conveniences for doing so are at hand, is not unreasonable. But the exercise of the fishing liberty by the inhabitants of the United States should not be subjected to the purely commercial formalities of report, entry and clearance at a custom house, nor to light, harbor or other dues not imposed upon Newfoundland fishermen.

4. Can restrictions be imposed upon American fishermen making the exercise of the privileges granted them by the treaty to enter certain bays or harbors for shelter, repairs, wood and water conditional upon the payment of light, harbor, or other dues, or entering or reporting at custom houses, or any similar conditions?

It is decided and awarded that such restrictions are not permissible. It seems reasonable, however, in order that these privileges accorded by Great Britain on these grounds of hospitality and humanity should not be abused, that the American fishermen entering such bays for any of the four purposes aforesaid and remaining more than forty-eight hours therein should be required, if thought necessary by Great Britain or the colonial government, to report either in person or by telegraph at a custom house or to a customs official, if reasonably convenient opportunity therefor is afforded.

5. What is a "bay" within the meaning of the treaty?

The tribunal decides and awards: In case of bays three marine miles are to be measured from a straight line drawn across the body of water at the place where it ceases to have the configuration and characteristics of a bay. At all other places the three marine miles are to be measured following the sinuosities of the coast. Considering that the tribunal cannot overlook that this answer to question five, although correct in principle and the only one possible in view of the want of a sufficient basis for a more concrete answer, is not entirely satisfactory as to its practical applicability and that it leaves room for doubts and differences in practice; therefore, the tribunal considers it its duty to render the decision more practicable and to remove the danger of future differences by adjoining to it a recommendation in virtue of the responsibilities imposed by article IV. of the special agreement. Considering, moreover, that in treaties with France, with the North German confederation and the German empire and likewise in the North sea convention, Great Britain has adopted for similar cases the rule that only bays of ten miles width should be considered as those wherein the fishing is reserved to nationals, and that in the course of negotiations between Great Britain and the United States a similar rule has been on various occasions proposed and adopted by Great Britain in instructions to the naval officers stationed on these coasts, and that though these circumstances are not sufficient to constitute this a principle of law, it seems reasonable to propose this rule with certain exceptions, all the more that this rule with such exceptions has already formed the basis of an agreement between the two powers.

6. Does the treaty give the inhabitants of the United States the same liberty to take fish in the bays, harbors and creeks of Newfoundland as it does in the bays, harbors and creeks of Labrador?

The tribunal is of opinion that American inhabitants are entitled to fish in the bays, creeks and harbors of the treaty coasts of Newfoundland and the Magdalen islands, and it is so decided and awarded.

7. Are the inhabitants of the United States, whose vessels resort to the treaty coasts for the purpose of exercising the liberties referred to in article I. of the treaty, entitled to have for those vessels, when duly authorized by the United States in that behalf, the commercial privileges on the treaty coasts accorded by agreement or otherwise to United States trading vessels generally?

The tribunal is of opinion that the inhabitants of the United States are so entitled in so far as concerns this treaty, there being nothing in its provisions to disentitle them, provided the treaty liberty of fishing and the commercial privileges are not exercised concurrently, and it is so decided and awarded.

The document is signed by the five arbitrators, Dr. Drago, however, stating his dissent from the majority in respect to the findings in reply to the fifth question.

FOUNDATION FOR THE PROMOTION OF INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

Established in 1907.

In 1906 President Theodore Roosevelt was awarded the Alfred B. Nobel peace prize and at his suggestion an act was passed by congress March 2, 1907, establishing the Foundation for the Promotion of Industrial Peace. To this organization he turned over the money received from the Nobel committee to be used as the nucleus of a fund the income of which is to be used in promoting an annual conference in Washington between representatives of capital and of labor with a view to bringing about a better understanding between employers and employees, thus promoting industrial peace. The chief justice of the United States, the secretary of agriculture and the secretary of commerce and labor, and their successors in office, and four persons appointed by the president of the United States to represent capital, labor and the general public, are the trustees. The trustees are authorized to pay over the funds from time to time to a committee of nine members, known as "the industrial peace committee," whose duty it is to make arrangements for the conferences.

THE SAGE FOUNDATION.

March 12, 1907, Mrs. Russell Sage of New York announced that she had set aside the sum of $10,000,000 to be known as the Sage foundation and to be devoted to the improvement of the social and living conditions in the United States. As trustees she appointed Robert W. DeForest, Cleveland H. Dodge, Daniel C. Gilman, John M. Glenn, Miss Helen Gould, Mrs. William B. Rice and Miss Louise L. Schnyder.

Following is a part of the statement given out by Mrs. Sage as to the object of the gift: "I have set aside $10,000,000 for the endowment of this foundation. Its object is the improvement of social and living conditions in the United States. The means to that end will include research, publication, education, the establishment and maintenance of charitable and beneficial activities, agencies and institutions and the aid of any such activities, agencies and institutions already established."

THE GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD.

Organized Feb. 27, 1902.

Chairman—Frederick T. Gates.
 Treasurer—George Foster Peabody.

 Other members—Robert C. Ogden, Walter H. Page, J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Albert Shaw, Starr J. Murphy, Hugh H. Hanna, E. Benjamin Andrews, Edwin A. Alderman, Hollis B. Frissell, Harry Pratt Judson, Charles W. Elliot, Andrew Carnegie.
 Offices—2 Rector street, New York city.

The general education board was informally organized Feb. 27, 1902, at the suggestion of John D. Rockefeller's committee on benevolence and was given a charter by congress and formally organized in January, 1903. The plan was designed and adapted to assist Mr. Rockefeller in distributing his gifts to education and to afford a medium through which other men of means might contribute to the same end. The board, a few days after its initial meeting, received from Mr. Rockefeller the sum of $1,000,000, the use of which was to be confined to the study and promotion of education in the southern states. An office was opened in New York city April 1, 1902, and work was begun. The board in co-operation with the department of agriculture took steps to educate the farmers of the south in scientific farming and up to the summer of 1903 had established about 15,000 demonstration farms under the supervision of eighty-nine agents in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia and Florida. The board also, in co-operation with the state universities of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Florida and the department of education in Louisiana has established more than 500 high schools. About $700,000 of the original sum given by Mr. Rockefeller has been expended in this way, about half being for schools for colored people.

June 30, 1905, the board was notified that Mr. Rockefeller would donate $10,000,000, the principal of which was to be held in perpetuity as a foundation for education, the income to be used for the benefit of institutions of learning in such manner as might be deemed best adapted to promote a comprehensive system of higher education in the United States. This sum was paid in cash Oct.

1, 1905, and the board in accepting it designated it as "The John D. Rockefeller Foundation for Higher Education." After due consideration the board adopted the following principles as defining its general policy: "To co-operate sympathetically and helpfully with the religious denominations; to choose the centers of wealth and population as the permanent pivots of an educational system; to mass its funds on endowments, securing in this work the largest possible local co-operation."

Feb. 7, 1907, the following letter was received from John D. Rockefeller, Jr.:

"Gentlemen: My father authorizes me to say that on or before April 1, 1907, he will give to the general education board income-bearing securities, the present market value of which is about $32,000,000, one-third to be added to the permanent endowment of the board; two-thirds to be applied to such specific objects within the corporate purposes of the board as either he or I may from time to time direct, any remainder not so designated at the death of the survivor to be added also to the permanent endowment of the board."

July 7, 1909, Mr. Rockefeller, through his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., notified the board that he had decided to give $10,000,000 additional to the permanent fund, the income to be devoted to present needs of great importance. The board was also authorized to distribute the principal of the fund, and all other endowment funds hitherto contributed by Mr. Rockefeller, whenever in the discretion of the members or their successors it should be deemed advisable to do so.

In the northern states the board devotes itself exclusively to the promotion of higher education, having always in view the desirability of aiding such institutions as, taken together, will constitute an adequate system of higher education for each of the several states, thus seeking to correct and prevent duplication and waste and securing the highest efficiency. In the southern states its work for the colleges is similar to that in the north, but in addition it seeks to promote public high schools, to promote elementary education by increasing the productive efficiency of rural life and to aid in developing schools for the training of leaders among the colored people.

NINTH ZIONIST CONGRESS.

The ninth Zionist congress was held in Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 28-31, 1909, with 350 delegates from all parts of the world in attendance. It was decided by resolution to gradually transfer all Zionist capital to Palestine, and to make Palestine the only center for its financial and industrial operations. It was announced by Dr. Max Nordau that the executive committee adhered to the original or Basle plan, making the return of the Jewish people to the holy land conditional upon the consent of the Turkish government that they be allowed to form a nationality within the Ottoman empire like the other nationalities there and to be recognized as such. The recent changes in Turkey, it was asserted, had not made it necessary to alter the terms of the old programme—"a publicly recognized, legally assured home for the Jewish people in Palestine." Encouraging reports were received as to the progress of Jerusalem school for trades and art, established some years ago, and as to the prospects of the proposed technical institute at Haifa and the laboratory for scientific agricultural research at Zikhron Jacob, Palestine.

Of the previous Zionist congresses six were held in Basle, Switzerland, one in London, England, and one in The Hague, Holland.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S RETURN FROM AFRICA.

Theodore Roosevelt, former president of the United States, terminated his hunting trip in the wilder part of Africa when he arrived at Khartum March 14, 1910. He and his son Kermit were extremely successful in getting specimens of game for the Smithsonian and other institutions, and among the animals secured were some that were new to science or very rare. Following is a list of the larger game killed by Mr. Roosevelt:

Lions	7	Buffaloes	7
Rhinoceroses	16	Elands	3
Giraffes	7	Topi	4
Wildbeests	8	Elephants	9
Thompson's gazelle	1	Zebra	1
Hippopotami	6	Oryx	1
Python	1	Bushbuck	1
Ostrich	3	Oribi	1
Leopards	2	Kob	1
Hartebeest	1	Sitatunga	3
Bobo	1	Sitatunga	1
Impalla	1	Bongos	2
Waterbuck	1

Animals killed by Kermit Roosevelt:

Lions	10	Buffaloes	3
Cheetah	7	Monkeys	2
Giraffes	2	Topi	3
Wildbeest	1	Rhinoceroses	3
Leopard	1	Elephants	2
Hippopotami	3

The Roosevelt party arrived at Gondokoro, Sudan, on the upper Nile, Feb. 17, and after a hunting expedition in the neighborhood, departed on the government steamer Dal for Khartum, which city was reached March 14. Here the former president and his son were met by Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel Roosevelt and were welcomed by the Sudan government officials. After a brief stay the party proceeded by steamer and train down the valley of the Nile, stopping at various points along the route to visit ancient temples and monuments, and arrived at Cairo March 24. Great crowds had assembled near the railroad station and in the streets through which Mr. Roosevelt was conducted, and he was made the subject of one of the greatest popular demonstrations ever witnessed in the Egyptian capital. Upon the invitation of the University of Cairo he made an address to the students there March 28, and in the course of his remarks denounced the assassination Feb. 20 of Butros Pasha, prime minister of Egypt, by a nationalist party fanatic named Wardant. This aroused the nationalists to a frenzy and caused a demonstration against Mr. Roosevelt in front of the hotel in which he was stopping. The speech also created a stir in Great Britain, where opinion as to its judiciousness was divided.

ARRIVAL IN EUROPE.

Mr. Roosevelt sailed from Alexandria, Egypt, March 20, for Naples, Italy, where he arrived Saturday morning, April 2. The following day he went to Rome, where it was announced that arrangements for an audience with the pope had fallen through because Mr. Roosevelt did not desire to comply with conditions limiting his freedom of conduct. Monday, April 4, the former president was cordially received by King Victor Emmanuel in the Quirinal.

After spending some time at Porto Maurizio with relatives, Mr. Roosevelt and family proceeded to Venice, where he met the duke of the Abruzzi and many others. Then he went on to Vienna, where he was received with royal honors by Emperor Francis Joseph. The latter gave a dinner, April 16, at the Schoenbrunn palace in Mr. Roosevelt's honor, at which many members of the cabinet and court officials were present. April 18 and 19 Mr. Roosevelt spent at Budapest, Hungary, where he was the guest of Count Apponyi and others. His welcome here was as hearty as he experienced on his whole trip, the Magyars doing all in their power to honor and please him.

On the morning of April 21 Mr. Roosevelt reached Paris and was heartily received by President Fallieres, the press and the people. The event of his stay in the French metropolis was his lecture at the Sorbonne on the subject, "The Duties of Citizenship." It was delivered before the French Academy April 23, in the presence of 3,000 auditors. On Monday, the 25th, he was received by the municipality of Paris, and the following two days were spent by him in sightseeing and in attending a military review and an aviation meet. Thursday, April 28, he reached Brussels, Belgium, where he dined at the palace with King Albert and attended a reception by the burgomaster.

IN SCANDINAVIA.

From Belgium Mr. Roosevelt and his party went to Holland, visiting Amsterdam, The Hague and Haarlem. Queen Wilhelmina and the prince consort, as well as all the people of the Netherlands, showed the former president, who is partly of Dutch descent, every honor in their power. Continuing his journey Mr. Roosevelt arrived in Copenhagen, Denmark, May 2, and was cordially greeted by Crown Prince Christian in the absence of King Haakon. After receiving many courtesies, official and private, and a visit to Elsinore, he proceeded to Christiania, Norway, arriving there May 4. King Haakon and Queen Maud gave him an especially warm welcome, as did the Norwegian people generally, though they were in mourning for the recent death of Bjornstjerne Bjornson. Thursday, May 5, he delivered his Nobel peace prize lecture on "International Peace" before an audience of 1,800 persons, including the king and queen, in the state theater. The following day the University of Norway bestowed upon him the honorary degree of doctor of philosophy. In spite of the death of King Edward in London on the night of May 6, Mr. Roosevelt received a popular welcome in Stockholm, where he arrived on the morning of the 7th. Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf did the royal honors in the absence of the king, who was in France.

IN GERMANY AND ENGLAND.

Great preparations had been made by Emperor William to welcome and entertain Mr. Roosevelt in Berlin, where the former president arrived on the morning of May 10, but the plans had to be modified on account of the death of the kaiser's uncle, King Edward. However, much of the programme was carried through, the main features being a sham battle at Doberitz and a lecture by the visitor at the University of Berlin, which conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of philosophy. The emperor showed Mr. Roosevelt many unusual courtesies, accompanying him personally at the maneuvers, attending his lecture on "The World Movement" and honoring him in other ways.

Before leaving Berlin, May 15, Mr. Roosevelt was appointed a special envoy of the United States to attend the funeral of King Edward. On his arrival in London, May 16, he was cordially but, of course, very quietly received. He was the subject of much private hospitality and was received by King George V. and by Alexandra, the queen mother. He attended the funeral of Edward VII. May 20, and passed the time quietly until May 31, when he was presented with the freedom of the city of London at the Guildhall. On this occasion he made a speech with reference to the British policy in Egypt, which caused much comment by its frankness. He intimated that while Great Britain had given Egypt the best government the country had had in 2,000 years, it had erred in the direction of timidity and sentimentality.

June 7 Mr. Roosevelt delivered the Romanes lecture at Oxford university, taking as his subject "Biological Analogies in History." The degree of doctor of civil law was conferred upon him by the university.

DEATH OF FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

Florence Nightingale, widely known for her work as a nurse in the Crimean war, died in London, England, Aug. 14, 1910. She was named after the city of Florence, Italy, where she was born May 12, 1820. Her father, a wealthy Englishman, gave her a classical education, and following a natural inclination she made a study of nursing in England and Germany. She proceeded to the Crimea in 1854 and worked so energetically in nursing and caring for the wounded and sick British soldiers that her health was broken and she became an invalid for the rest of her life. Subsequently a testimonial offering in the shape of $250,000 was given her, and she used the money in establishing the Nightingale home for the training of nurses. In 1908 the freedom of the city of London was conferred upon her.

UNITED STATES ARSENALS.

The largest of the United States arsenals are located at Rock Island, Ill., and Springfield, Mass. Others are at Pittsburg, Pa.; Augusta, Ga.; Benicia, Cal.; Columbia, Tenn.; Fort Monroe, Va.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Governors' island, N. Y.; Jefferson barracks, Mo.; Sandy Hook, N. J.; San Antonio, Tex.; Dover, N. J.; Watertown, Mass., and Watervliet, N. Y. Some of the above are merely powder depots, the principal manufacturing plants being at Rock Island, Springfield and Watervliet. The navy yards are also arsenals.

WHAT TRAVELERS MAY TAKE TO AMERICA.

[Treasury department's "Notice to Passengers," Feb. 4, 1910.]

Paragraph 709, appearing in the free list of the present tariff act, governing passengers' baggage, is as follows:

"Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles and similar personal effects of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall only include such articles as actually accompany and are in the use of, and as are necessary and appropriate for the wear and use of such persons, for the immediate purposes of the journey and present comfort and convenience, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale; provided, that in case of residents of the United States, returning from abroad, all wearing apparel and other personal effects taken by them out of the United States to foreign countries shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, upon their identity being established, under appropriate rules and regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of the treasury, but no more than $100 in value of articles purchased abroad by such residents of the United States shall be admitted free of duty upon their return."

Foreigners are entitled to bring in free of duty such articles as in the nature of wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles and similar personal effects accompanying the passenger and necessary and appropriate for his or her wear and use for the purposes of the journey and present comfort and convenience, and are not intended for other persons nor for sale, without regard to the $100 limitation.

Citizens of the United States may have this privilege provided it is shown to the collector's representative on the pier, subject to the collector's approval, that they are bona-fide residents of a foreign country.

BAGGAGE DECLARATION.

Passengers should observe that on the sheet there are two forms of declaration: the one printed in black is for returning residents of the United States; the one in red, for all persons other than residents of the United States.

The senior member of a family, if a passenger, may make declaration for the entire family.

Ladies traveling alone should state the fact in their declaration in order that an expeditionary examination of their baggage may be made.

The exact number of pieces of baggage, including all trunks, boxes, packages and hand bags of all descriptions accompanying the passenger, must be stated in the declaration.

The forms above mentioned will be distributed to passengers during the early part of the voyage by an officer of the ship. When a passenger has prepared and signed the declaration he must detach and retain the coupon at the bottom of the form and return the form to the officer of the ship designated to receive the same. Declarations spoiled in the preparation must not be destroyed, but turned over to the purser, who will furnish a new blank to the passenger.

After all the baggage and effects of the passenger are landed upon the pier the coupon which has been retained by the passenger must be presented at the inspector's desk, whereupon an inspector will be detailed to examine the baggage. Passengers must acknowledge in person on the pier their signatures to their declarations.

Passengers who for any reason desire the examination of their baggage postponed may have all or any part thereof sent to the appraisers' store by making a request therefor to the officer taking their declaration.

RESIDENTS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Residents of the United States must declare all wearing apparel, jewelry and other articles, whether used or unused, on their persons, in their clothing or in their baggage, which have been obtained abroad by purchase or otherwise, with the foreign cost or value of the same. They shall state, as well, all wearing apparel, jewelry or other articles taken out of the United States which have been remodeled or improved while abroad so as to increase their value, the said statement to include the cost of such improvement. By stating the value of all declared articles in United States money, and packing the same so as to be easily produced for examination (and in one trunk if practicable), passengers will expedite the appraisement and passing of the same upon the pier. Whenever practicable, passengers should present the original receipted bills for foreign purchases.

Residents of the United States are allowed $100 worth of articles in the nature of personal effects at their present foreign value, free of duty, provided they are not intended for other persons or for sale or to be used in business and are properly declared.

Use does not exempt from duty wearing apparel or other articles obtained abroad, but such articles will be appraised at their present value.

Residents of the United States may also bring with them free of duty all wearing apparel and other personal effects taken by them out of the United States which have not been remodeled or improved abroad so as to increase their value.

Residents of the United States must not deduct the $100 exemption from the value of other articles obtained abroad by purchase or their wearing apparel or otherwise. Such deduction will be made by customs officers on the pier.

OTHER GOODS.

Household effects of persons or families from foreign countries will be admitted free of duty if actually used abroad by them not less than one year and not intended for any other person nor for sale. Such effects should be declared whether the passenger be a foreigner or resident of the United States.

Articles intended for other persons, for use in business, theatrical apparel, properties and scenery must also be declared by passengers, whether foreigners or residents.

CIGARS AND CIGARETTES.

All cigars and cigarettes must be declared, and are not included within the $100 exemption. Each passenger over 18 years of age is entitled to bring in free of duty and internal-revenue tax either fifty cigars or 300 cigarettes for his or her bona-fide individual personal consumption.

Passengers dissatisfied with values placed upon dutiable articles by the customs officers on the piers may demand a re-examination, but application therefor should be immediately made to the officers there in charge. If, for any reason, this course is impracticable, the packages containing the articles should be left in customs custody and application for reappraisal made to the collector of customs, in writing, within two days after the original appraisement. No request for reappraisal can be entertained after the articles have been removed from customs custody.

Government officers are forbidden by law to accept anything but currency in payment of duties, but, if requested, will retain baggage on the piers for twenty-four hours to enable the owner to secure the currency.

Passengers are advised that to offer or give gratuities or bribes to customs officers is a violation of law, and customs officers who accept gratuities or bribes will be dismissed from the service, and all parties guilty of such offense are liable to criminal prosecution.

Any discourtesy or incivility on the part of customs officers should be reported to the collector at the custom house, to the deputy collector or the deputy surveyor at the pier or to the secretary of the treasury.

BAGGAGE IN BOND.

Upon application to the customs officer in charge on the pier, baggage intended for delivery at ports in the United States other than the port of arrival or in transit through the United States to a foreign country may be forwarded thereto without the assessment of duty at the arrival, by the various railroads and express companies, whose representatives will be found on the pier. Passengers desiring to have their baggage forwarded in bond should indicate such intention before the examination of their baggage and state the value thereof in their declarations.

SEALSKIN GARMENTS.

An act of congress expressly forbids the importation of garments made in whole or in part of the skins of seals taken in the north Pacific ocean, and unless the owner is able to establish by competent evidence that the garments are not prohibited they cannot be admitted.

Articles obtained abroad and not declared are subject to seizure, and the passenger is liable to criminal prosecution.

IMMIGRATION LAW OF THE UNITED STATES.

The immigration law provides for a poll tax of $4 for every alien entering the United States. This tax is not levied upon aliens who shall enter the United States after an uninterrupted residence of at least one year, immediately preceding such entrance, in Canada, Newfoundland, Cuba or Mexico, nor upon aliens in transit through the United States, nor upon aliens arriving in Guam, Porto Rico or Hawaii.

Whenever the president shall be satisfied that passports issued by any foreign government to its citizens to go to any country other than the United States or to any insular possession of the United States, or to the canal zone, are being used for the purpose of enabling the holders to come to the continental territory of the United States to the detriment of labor conditions therein, the president may refuse to permit such citizens of the country issuing such passports to enter the continental territory of the United States from such other country or from such insular possessions or from the canal zone.

The following classes are excluded from admission into the United States: All idiots, imbeciles, feeble-minded persons, epileptics, insane persons and persons who have been insane within five years; persons who have had two or more attacks of insanity at any time previously; paupers; persons likely to become a public charge; professional beggars; persons afflicted with tuberculosis or with a loathsome or dangerous contagious disease; persons who have committed a felony or other crime involving moral turpitude; polygamists or persons who believe in the practice of polygamy; anarchists or persons who believe in or advocate the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the United States, or of all governments, or of all forms of law, or the assassination of public officials; prostitutes, or women and girls coming into the United States for any immoral purpose; contract laborers who have been induced to migrate to this country by offers of employment or in consequence of agreements of any kind, verbal or written, express or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled; any person whose ticket or passage is paid for with the money of another, or who is assisted by others to come, unless it is satisfactorily shown that such person does not belong to one of the foregoing excluded classes and that said ticket or passage was not paid for by any corporation, society, municipality or foreign government, directly or indirectly; all children under 16 years of age unaccompanied by one or both of their parents, at the discretion of the secretary of commerce and labor. Nothing in the act shall exclude, if otherwise admissible, persons convicted of an offense purely political, not involving moral turpitude. Skilled labor may be imported if labor of like kind unemployed cannot be found in this country. The provisions of the law applicable to contract labor shall not be held to exclude professional actors, artists, lecturers, singers, clergymen, professors for colleges or seminaries, persons belonging to any recognized learned profession or persons employed strictly as personal or domestic servants.

It is unlawful to assist or encourage the importation or migration of any alien by promise of employment through advertisements printed in any foreign country. This, however, does not apply to states or territories advertising the inducements they offer to immigration thereto.

All aliens brought to this country in violation of law shall be immediately sent back by the owners of the vessels bringing them. Any alien entering the United States in violation of law and such as become public charges from causes existing prior to their landing shall be deported at any time within three years after their arrival.

No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to all organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such belief in or opposition to all organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers, either of specific individuals or of officers generally, of the government of the United States, or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, shall be permitted to enter the United States.

DEATH OF CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER.

Melville Weston Fuller, chief justice of the United States Supreme court, died at his summer home at Sorrento, Me., July 4, 1910. Though 77 years of age he was in excellent health up to the hour of his death, which was caused by a sudden attack of heart disease. He was born in Augusta, Me., Feb. 11, 1833, and came to Chicago in 1856. His education was obtained in the public schools, Bowdoin college and the Harvard law school. Admitted to the bar in 1855 he practiced his profession with success until April, 1888, when President Grover Cleveland appointed him chief justice of the United States Supreme court. In politics he was a democrat. He was buried in Grace-land cemetery, Chicago.

STATES AND TERRITORIES IN THE UNION.

There are forty-six states in the union and five territories, the latter including Arizona, New Mexico, Hawaii, the District of Columbia and Alaska. The first three are regularly organized territories, each with a governor and legislative assembly. The District of Columbia is governed by three commissioners appointed by the president of the United States under laws passed directly by congress. Alaska has a governor appointed by the president, but has no legislature. It is under the direct control of congress. Porto Rico, the Philippines and other island possessions of the United States are not technically territories, each having a special form of government.

COPYRIGHT LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Approved March 4, 1909.

The act to amend and consolidate the acts respecting copyright, in force July 1, 1909, provides that any person entitled thereto, upon complying with the provisions of the law, shall have the exclusive right (a) to print, reprint, publish, copy and vend the copyrighted work; (b) to translate the copyrighted work or make any other version of it if it be a literary work; to dramatize it if it be a nondramatic work; to convert it into a novel or other nondramatic work if it be a drama; to arrange or adapt it if it be a musical work; to finish it if it be a model or design for a work of art; (c) to deliver or authorize the delivery of the copyrighted work if it be a lecture, sermon, address or similar production; (d) to perform the copyrighted work publicly if it be a drama or, if it be a dramatic work and not reproduced in copies for sale, to vend the manuscript or any record thereof; to make or to procure the making of any transcription or record thereof by which it may in any manner be exhibited, performed or produced, and to exhibit, perform or produce it in any manner whatsoever; (e) to perform the copyrighted work publicly for profit if it be a musical composition and for the purpose of public performance for profit and to make any arrangement or setting of it in any system of notation or any form of record in which the thought of an author may be read or reproduced.

So far as they secure copyright controlling the parts of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work the law includes only compositions published after the act went into effect; it does not include the works of a foreign author or composer unless the country of which he is a citizen or subject grants similar rights to American citizens. Whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted the use of the copyrighted work upon the part of instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work, any other person may make a similar use of the work upon the payment to the owner of a royalty of 2 cents on each such part manufactured. The reproduction or rendition of a musical composition by or upon coin-operated machines shall not be deemed a public performance for profit unless a fee is charged for admission to the place where the reproduction occurs.

The works for which copyright may be secured include all the writings of an author.

The application for registration shall specify to which of the following classes the work in which copyright is claimed belongs:

- (a) Books, including composite and cyclopedic works, directories, gazetteers and other compilations.
- (b) Periodicals, including newspapers.
- (c) Lectures, sermons, addresses, prepared for oral delivery.
- (d) Dramatic or dramatic-musical compositions.
- (e) Musical compositions.
- (f) Maps.
- (g) Works of art; models or designs for works of art.

- (h) Reproductions of a work of art.
- (i) Drawings or plastic works of a scientific or technical character.
- (j) Photographs.
- (k) Print and pictorial illustrations.

These specifications do not, however, limit the subject matter of copyright as defined in the law nor does any error in classification invalidate the copyright protection secured.

Copyright extends to the work of a foreign author or proprietor only in case he is domiciled in the United States at the time of the first publication of his work or if the country of which he is a citizen grants similar copyright protection to citizens of the United States.

Any person entitled thereto by the law may secure copyright for his work by publication thereof with the notice of copyright required by the act, and such notice shall be affixed to each copy published or offered for sale in the United States. Such person may obtain registration of his claim to copyright by complying with the provisions of the act, including the deposit of copies, whereupon the register of copyrights shall issue to him a certificate as provided for in the law. Copyright may also be had of the works of an author of which copies are not reproduced for sale by the deposit with claim of copyright of one complete copy, if it be a lecture or similar production, or a dramatic or musical composition; of a photographic print if it be a photograph, or of a photograph or other identifying reproduction thereof if it be a work of art or a plastic work or drawing.

After copyright has been secured there must be deposited in the copyright office in Washington, D. C., two complete copies of the best edition thereof, which copies, if the work be a book or periodical, shall have been produced in accordance with the manufacturing provisions of the act, or if such work be a contribution to a periodical for which contribution special registration is requested one copy of the issue or issues containing such contribution. Failure to deposit the copies within a certain time after notice from the register of copyrights makes the proprietor of the copyright liable to a fine of $100 and twice the retail price of the work and the copyright becomes void.

The text of all books and periodicals specified in paragraphs (a) and (b) above, except the original text of a book of foreign origin in a language other than English, must in order to secure protection be printed from type set within the limits of the United States, either by hand, machinery or other process, and the printing of the text and the binding of the books must also be done within the United States. An affidavit of such manufacture is required.

The notice of copyright required consists either of the word "copyright" or the abbreviation "copr.," accompanied by the name of the copyright proprietor; and if the work be a printed literary, musical or dramatic work the notice must also include the year in which the copyright was secured by publication. In the case, however, of copies of works specified in paragraphs (f) to (k) inclusive (given above) the notice may consist of the letter C inclosed within a circle, accompanied by the initials, monogram, mark or symbol of the copyright proprietor, provided his name appears elsewhere on the copies. In the case of a book or other printed publication the notice shall be applied on the title page or on the page immediately following, or if a periodical either upon the title page or upon the first page of text of each separate number or under the title heading; or if a musical work upon its title page or the first page of music.

Where the copyright proprietor has sought to comply with the law with respect to notice, the omission of such notice by mistake from a particular copy or copies shall not invalidate the copyright or prevent recovery for infringement against any person who, after actual notice of the copyright, begins an undertaking to infringe it, but shall prevent the recovery of damages against an innocent infringer who has been misled by the omission of the notice.

In the case of a book in English published abroad before publication in this country, the deposit in the copyright office within thirty days of one copy of the foreign edition, with a request for the reservation of the copyright, secures for the author or owner an ad interim copyright for thirty days after such deposit is made.

The copyright secured by the act endures for twenty-eight years from the date of the first publication. In the case of any posthumous work, periodical, encyclopedic or other composite work upon which the copyright was originally secured by the proprietor thereof, or of any work copyrighted by a corporate body, or by an employer for whom such work is made for hire, the proprietor of such copyright shall be entitled to a renewal of the copyright in such work for the further term of twenty-eight years when application for such renewal shall have been made within one year prior to the expiration of the original term. In the case of any other copyrighted work, including a contribution by an individual author to a periodical or to a cyclopedic or other composite work when such contribution has been separately copyrighted, the author of such work, if living, or the heirs, executors or next of kin, if the author be dead, shall be entitled to a renewal of the copyright for a further term of twenty-eight years. In default of such application for renewal the copyright in any work shall end at the expiration of twenty-eight years.

If any person shall infringe the copyright in any work protected under the copyright laws of the United States, such person shall be liable:

(a) To an injunction restraining such infringement;

(b) To pay to the copyright proprietor such damages as the copyright proprietor may have suffered due to the infringement, as well as all the profits which the infringer shall have made from such infringement, and in proving profits the plaintiff shall be required to prove sales only and the defendant shall be required to prove every element of cost which he claims, or in lieu of actual damages or profits such damages as to the court shall appear to be just, and in assessing such damages the court may, in its discretion, allow the amounts as hereinafter stated (in numbered paragraphs), but in the case of newspaper reproduction of a copyrighted photograph such damages shall not exceed the sum of $200 nor be less than $50, and such damages shall in no other case exceed the sum of $250 and shall not be regarded as a penalty;

1. In the case of a painting, statue or sculpture, $10 for every infringing copy made or sold by or found in the possession of the infringer or his agents or employees;

2. In the case of any work enumerated in the list (given above) of works for which copyright may be asked, except a painting, statue or sculpture, $1 for every infringing copy.

3. In the case of a lecture, sermon or address, $50 for every infringing delivery.

4. In the case of dramatic or dramatic-musical or a choral or orchestral composition $100 for the first and $50 for every subsequent infringing performance; in the case of other musical compositions, $10 for every infringing performance.

(c) To deliver up on oath all articles alleged to infringe a copyright.

(d) To deliver up on oath for destruction all the infringing copies or devices, as well as all plates, molds, matrices or other means for making such infringing copies, as the court may order.

(e) Whenever the owner of a musical copyright has used or permitted the use of the copyrighted work upon the parts of musical instruments serving to reproduce mechanically the musical work, then in case of infringement by the unauthorized manufacture, use or sale of interchangeable parts, such as disks, rolls, bands or cylinders for use in mechanical music-producing machines, no criminal action shall be brought, but in a civil action an injunction may be granted upon such terms as the court may impose and the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover in lieu of profits and damages a royalty as provided in the act.

Any person who shall willfully and for profit infringe any copyright, or willfully aid or abet such infringement, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not exceeding one year or by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000 or both, in the discretion of the court. It is provided, however, that nothing in the act shall prevent the performance of religious or secular works, such as oratorios, cantatas, masses or octaves, choruses by public schools, church choirs or vocal societies, provided the performance is for charitable or educational purposes and not for profit.

Any person who shall fraudulently place a copyright notice upon any uncopyrighted article, or shall fraudulently remove or alter the notice upon any copyrighted article, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be subject to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000. Any person who shall knowingly sell or issue any article bearing a notice of United States copyright which has not been copyrighted in this country, or who shall knowingly import any article bearing such notice, shall be liable to a fine of $100.

During the existence of the American copyright in any book the importation of any piratical copies thereof or of any copies not produced in accordance with the manufacturing provisions of the copyright law, or of any plates of the same not made from type set in this country, or any copies produced by lithographic or photo-engraving process not performed within the United States, is prohibited. Except as to piratical copies this does not apply.

(a) To works in raised characters for the blind;

(b) To a foreign newspaper or magazine, although containing matter copyrighted in the United States printed or reprinted by authority of the copyright owner, unless such newspaper or magazine contains also copyright matter printed without such authorization;

(c) To the authorized edition of a book in a foreign language of which only a translation into English has been copyrighted in this country;

(d) To any book published abroad with the authorization of the author or copyright proprietor under the following circumstances:

1. When imported, not more than one copy at a time, for individual use and not for sale, but such privilege of importation shall not extend to a foreign reprint of a book by an American author copyrighted in the United States;

2. When imported by or for the use of the United States;

3. When imported, for use and not for sale, not more than one copy of any such book in any one invoice, in good faith, by or for any society or institution incorporated for educational, literary, philosophical, scientific or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for any college, academy, school or seminary of learning, or for any state, school, college, university or free public library in the United States;

4. When such books form parts of libraries or collections purchased on loan for the use of societies, institutions or libraries, or for parts of the library or personal baggage belonging to persons or families arriving from foreign countries and are not intended for sale.

No criminal actions shall be maintained under the copyright law unless the same be begun within three years after the cause of action arose.

Copyright may be assigned, mortgaged or bequeathed by will.

There shall be appointed by the librarian of congress a register of copyrights at a salary of $4,000 a year and an assistant register at $3,000 a year.

These with their subordinate assistants shall perform all the duties relating to the registration of copyrights. The register of copyrights shall keep such record books in the copyright office as are required to carry out the provisions of the law, and whenever deposit has been made in the copyright office of a copy of any work under the provisions of the act he shall make entry thereof.

In the case of each entry the person recorded as the claimant of the copyright shall be entitled to a certificate of registration under seal of the copyright office.

The register of copyrights shall receive and the persons to whom the services designated are rendered shall pay the following fees: For the registration of any work subject to copyright, $1, which sum is to include a certificate of registration under seal: Provided, that in the case of photographs the fee shall be 50 cents where a certificate is not demanded. For every additional certificate of registration made, 50 cents. APPLICATIONS FOR PATENTS.

[Condensed from Rules of Practice in the United States patent office.]

A patent may be obtained by any person who has invented or discovered any new and useful art, machine, manufacture or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof not previously patented or described in this or any other country, for more than two years prior to his application, unless the same is proved to have been abandoned. A patent may also be obtained for any new design for a manufacture, bust, statue, alto-relievo or bas-relief; for the printing of woolen, silk or other fabrics; for any new impression, ornament, pattern, print or picture to be placed on or woven into any article of manufacture; and for any new, useful and original shape or configuration of any article of manufacture, upon payment of fees and taking the other necessary steps.

Applications for patents must be in writing, in the English language and signed by the inventor if alive. The application must include the first fee of $15, a petition, specification and oath, and drawings, model or specimen when required. The petition must be addressed to the commissioner of patents and must give the name and full address of the applicant, must designate by title the invention sought to be patented, must contain a reference to the specification for a full disclosure of such invention and must be signed by the applicant.

The specification must contain the following in the order named: Name and residence of the applicant with title of invention; a general statement of the object and nature of the invention; a brief description of the several views of the drawings (if the invention admits of such illustration); a detailed description; claim or claims; signature of inventor and signatures of two witnesses. Claims for a machine and its product and claims for a machine and the process in the performance of which the machine is used must be presented in separate applications, but claims for a process and its product may be presented in the same application.

The applicant, if the inventor, must make oath or affirmation that he believes himself to be the first inventor or discoverer of that which he seeks to have patented. The oath or affirmation must also state of what country he is a citizen and where he resides. In every original application the applicant must swear or affirm that the invention has not been patented to himself or to others with his knowledge or consent in this or any foreign country for more than two years prior to his application, or on an application for a patent filed in any foreign country by himself or his legal representatives or assigns more than seven months prior to his application. If application has been made in any foreign country, full and explicit details must be given. The oath or affirmation may be made before any one who is authorized by the laws of his country to administer oaths.

Drawings must be on white paper with India ink and the sheets must be exactly 10x15 inches in size, with a margin of one inch. They must show all details clearly and without the use of superfluous lines.

Applications for reissues must state why the original patent is believed to be defective and tell precisely how the errors were made. These applications must be accompanied by the original patent and an offer to surrender the same; or if the original be lost, by an affidavit to that effect and certified copy of the patent. Every applicant whose claims have been twice rejected for the same reasons may appeal from the primary examiners to the examiners in chief upon the payment of a fee of $10.

The duration of patents is for seventeen years except in the case of design patents, which may be for three and a half, seven or fourteen years, as the inventor may elect.

Caveats or notices given to the patent office of claims to inventions to prevent the issue of patents to other persons upon the same invention, without notice to caveaters, may be filed upon the payment of a fee of $10. Caveats must contain the same information as applications for patents.

With this statement shall be filed a drawing of the trade-mark, signed by the applicant or his attorney, and such number of specimens of the trade-mark as may be required by Trade-marks consisting of or comprising immoral or scandalous matter, the coat of arms, flag or other insignia of the United States or of any state or foreign nation cannot be registered. Fees for renewal of trade-marks and for filing opposition to registration are $10 each; for appeals from examiners to the commissioner of patents, $15 each.

ESPERANTO SIMPLIFIED, OR IDO.

By E. F. McPike and O. H. Mayer, Chicago representatives of the "Delegation for the Adoption of an International Auxiliary Language."

Esperanto, the proposed international auxiliary language, published in 1887 by Dr. L. Zamenhof, an oculist of Warsaw, Poland, was welcomed by many, as it became more generally known in 1904, 1905 and 1906; but the practical application of the language to many topics, as well as a thorough theoretical examination, brought out a number of defects. An international committee of eminent philologists, logicians, linguists and men of science, representing the "Delegation for the Adoption of an International Auxiliary Language," and comprising the representatives of 310 societies of all countries and 1,250 members of academies and universities, met in Paris in October, 1907, and, as says the Scientific American supplement of June 18, 1910, in a long editorial, after an exhaustive study of all international language projects published heretofore, and especially of Esperanto, "succeeded not only in recognizing, but also in correcting in a competent manner, the errors of Esperanto, with the result that we are to-day in possession of a language which, in respect of facility, lucidity, variety and elegance of expression, represents the pinnacle of international speech. The new language, whose official name is 'International Language of the Delegation,' is often called in short 'Ido'—that is, a descendant, because it sprang from Esperanto."

The following are the chief alterations effected:

1. All accented letters done away with, making it possible to print the language anywhere, while preserving phonetic spelling and often restoring the international orthography.

2. Suppression of a few grammatical rules that were unnecessary and very troublesome for most nations, and chiefly for people with little knowledge of grammar (accusative, agreement of the adjective).

3. Word-building made regular, this being the only means to prevent the influx of national idioms and to give a solid basis to the scientific and technical vocabulary, without which the international language cannot obtain a footing in the world of science.

4. The vocabulary made richer by the adoption of new roots, carefully selected according to the principle of the maximum of internationality.

All the words are formed from international roots, i. e., roots found in most European languages, so that they are known without study by every fairly educated man. It is not a new language to learn; it is the quintessence of European languages. But it is easier beyond comparison than any of the latter, on account of its absolute simplicity and regularity. It is learned by reading; when you can read it you can write it; when you can write it you can speak it. And it has been proved by experience that people from the most different countries pronounce it so nearly alike as to make any difference trifling and by no means troublesome.

Although but two and a half years before the public, Ido counts already twelve magazines and 150 propaganda societies in many countries. Its directing committee is headed by the chemist, Prof. Ostwald of Leipzig (Nobel prize in 1909), the physicist, Prof. Pfaunder of Graz, member of the Imperial Academy of Sciences of Vienna, and Prof. Lorenz of the Technical University of Frankfurt-on-the-Main; its academy is headed by the philologist, Prof. Jespersen of Copenhagen, member of the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences, and the philosopher, Dr. L. Couturat of Paris, sometime professor at the University of Toulouse.

THE CARNEGIE HERO FUND.

April 15, 1904, Andrew Carnegie placed in the hands of a commission the sum of $5,000,000 to be known as "the hero fund." Widows are given support until they remarry and children are given allowances until they are 16 years of age. HOT WEATHER AND DROUGHT IN 1910.

The summer of 1910 was warm and dry throughout the greater part of the United States, the heat and drought resulting in considerable damage to crops and in extensive forest fires in Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Idaho and Montana. The spring was rather late and cold in the north central states, though on the southern Pacific slope it was unusually warm. In Los Angeles, Cal., the thermometer registered 100 degrees above zero April 23, the warmest weather experienced there at that time of year since the government began keeping a record. It began to get warm in the Mississippi valley in June and culminated in a general "hot wave" in the third week of July. On the 25th and 26th of that month the thermometer ranged from 90 to 109 degrees above, the highest temperatures being registered in Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Arkansas and Colorado. In Chicago, July 24, it was 97 degrees above. The heat continued with brief interruptions well into August.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE.

Civil-service act approved Jan. 16, 1883.

Officers—Three commissioners are appointed by the president to assist him in classifying the government offices and positions, formulating rules and enforcing the law. Their office is in Washington, D. C. The chief examiner is appointed by the commissioners to secure accuracy, uniformity and justice in the proceedings of the examining boards. The secretary to the commission is appointed by the president.

General Rules—The fundamental rules governing appointments to government positions are found in the civil-service act itself. Based upon these are many other regulations formulated by the commission and promulgated by the president from time to time as new contingencies arise. The present rules were approved March 20, 1903, and went into effect April 15, 1903. In a general way they require that there must be free, open examinations of applicants for positions in the public service; that appointments shall be made from the graded highest in the examinations; that appointments to the service in Washington shall be apportioned among the states and territories according to population; that there shall be a period (six months) of probation before any absolute appointment is made; that no person in the public service is for that reason obliged to contribute to any political fund or is subject to dismissal for refusing to so contribute; that no person in the public service has any right to use his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person. Applicants for positions shall not be questioned as to their political or religious beliefs and no discrimination shall be exercised against or in favor of any applicant or employee on account of his religion or politics. The classified civil service shall include all officers and employees in the executive civil service of the United States except laborers and persons whose appointments are subject to confirmation by the senate.

Examinations—These are conducted by boards of examiners chosen from among persons in government employ and are held twice a year in all the states and territories at convenient places. In Illinois, for example, they are usually held at Cairo, Chicago and Peoria. The dates are announced through the newspapers or by other means. They can always be learned by applying to the commission or to the nearest postoffice or custom house. Those who desire to take examinations are advised to write to the commission in Washington for the "Manual of Examinations," which is sent free to all applicants. It is revised semiannually to Jan. 1 and July 1. The January edition contains a schedule of the spring examinations and the July edition contains a schedule of the fall examinations. Full information is given as to the methods and rules governing examinations, manner of making application, qualifications required, regulations for rating examination papers, certification for and chances of appointment, and as far as possible it outlines the scope of the different subjects of general and technical examinations. These are practical in character and are designed to test the relative capacity and fitness to discharge the duties to be performed. It is necessary to obtain an average percentage of 70 to be eligible for appointment, except that applicants entitled to preference because of honorable discharge from the military or naval service for disability resulting from wounds or sickness incurred in the line of duty need obtain but 65 per cent. The period of eligibility is one year.

Qualifications of Applicants—No person will be examined who is not a citizen of the United States; who is not within the age limitations prescribed; who is physically disqualified for the service which he seeks; who has been guilty of criminal, infamous, dishonest or disgraceful conduct; who has been dismissed from the public service for delinquency and misconduct or has failed to receive absolute appointment after probation; who is addicted to the habitual use of intoxicating liquors to excess, or who has made a false statement in his application. The age limitations in the more important branches of the public service are: Postoffice, 18 to 45 years; rural letter carriers, 17 to 55; internal revenue, 21 years and over; railway mail, 18 to 35; lighthouse, 18 to 50; life saving, 18 to 45; general departmental, 20 and over. These age limitations are subject to change by the commission. They do not apply to applicants of the preferred class. Applicants for the position of railway mail clerk must be at least 5 feet 6 inches in height, exclusive of boots or shoes, and weigh not less than 135 pounds in ordinary clothing and have no physical defects. Applicants for certain other positions have to come up to similar physical requirements.

Method of Appointment—Whenever a vacancy exists the appointing officer makes requisition upon the civil-service commission for a certification of names to fill the vacancy, specifying the kind of position vacant, the sex desired and the salary. The commission thereupon takes from the proper register of eligibles the names of three persons standing highest of the sex called for and certifies them to the appointing officer, who is required to make the selection. He may choose any one of the three names, returning the other two to the register to await further certification. The time of examination is not considered, as the highest in average percentage on the register must be certified first. If after a probationary period of six months the name of the appointee is continued on the roll of the department in which he serves the appointment is considered absolute.

Removals—No person can be removed from a competitive position except for such cause as will promote the efficiency of the public service and for reasons given in writing. No examination of witnesses nor any trial shall be required except in the discretion of the officer making the removal.

Salaries—Entrance to the department service is usually in the lowest grades, the higher grades being generally filled by promotion. The usual entrance grade is about $900, but the applicant may be appointed at $840, $760 or even $600.

THE CARNEGIE FOUNDATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF TEACHING.

In April, 1905, Andrew Carnegie transferred to a board of trustees $10,000,000 in United States Steel corporation fifty-year bonds bearing 5 per cent interest, the purpose of the trust fund thus created being to provide retiring allowances or annuities to teachers in the higher institutions of learning in the United States, Canada, and Newfoundland under such regulations as the trustees might decide to be wise. Schools below the rank of college and institutions directly under the control of religious denominations are excluded from the benefits of the fund. State universities were also originally excluded from the benefits of the fund, but March 31, 1908, Mr. Carnegie, at the request of the National Association of State Universities, admitted them and at the same time added to the foundation $5,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds, making the fund $15,000,000 in all. The state universities of Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and Missouri were admitted in 1909.

The policy of the board has been to confer the retiring allowances through the institutions themselves rather than to individual teachers, on the principle that the annuity must come as a right and not as a charity. The professors in the accepted institutions receive retired pay in due course and under established rules. Allowances are granted on the basis of age, service and disability. Any person 65 years of age who has had not less than fifteen years of service as professor or not less than twenty-five years of service as instructor or as instructor and professor, and who is at the time a professor or an instructor in an accepted institution, shall be entitled to an annual retiring allowance, computed as follows:

(a) For an active pay of $1,200 or less an allowance of $1,000, provided no retiring allowance shall exceed 90 per cent of the active pay.

(b) For an active pay greater than $1,200 the retiring allowance shall equal $1,000, increased by $50 for each $100 of active pay in excess of $1,200.

(c) No retiring allowance shall exceed $4,000.

Any person who has had twenty-five years of service as a professor or thirty years of service as professor and instructor and who is at the time either a professor or an instructor in an accepted institution, shall, in the case of disability unfitting him for the work of a teacher, as proved by medical examination, be entitled to a retiring allowance computed as follows:

(a) For an active pay of $1,200 or less a retiring allowance of $800, provided that no retiring allowance shall exceed 80 per cent of the active pay.

(b) For an active pay greater than $1,200 the retiring allowance shall equal $800, increased by $40 for each $100 in excess of $1,200.

(c) For each additional year of service above twenty-five for a professor or thirty for an instructor the retiring allowance shall be increased by 1 per cent of the active pay.

(d) No retiring allowance shall exceed $4,000.

At the beginning of 1910 the foundation was paying 318 pensions, the cost being $466,000. The professors receiving these pensions came from 139 colleges, distributed over forty-three states of the union and provinces of Canada. Following were the officers of administration in 1910:

The national holidays, such as July 4, New Year's, etc., are such by general custom and observance and not because of congressional legislation. Congress has passed no laws establishing holidays for the whole country. It has made Labor day a holiday in the District of Columbia, but the law is of no effect elsewhere.

DESTRUCTIVE FLOOD IN PARIS.

Paris, France, was visited by the most destructive flood in the history of the city between Jan. 20 and Feb. 5, 1910. The Seine rose thirty-one feet six inches above the normal level at Pont Royal, or nearly a foot higher than in 1615, the year of the worst previous flood. The total damage to property in the city and country was roughly estimated at $200,000,000 and between 150,000 and 200,000 persons were made temporarily homeless. Snows and long-continued rains had saturated the valleys of the Maine and the Seine and the narrow channel of the latter river, which runs through the heart of Paris, was unable to carry away the immense volume of water poured into it. The result was that the lower parts of the city to the extent of many square miles on each side of the stream and several of the suburbs were inundated, the houses in some instances being completely submerged. Few lives were lost, soldiers and policemen rescuing those who were in peril. The rise of the water was comparatively slow, allowing nearly everybody not only to reach places of safety but to save considerable personal property.

Most of the damage done was caused by the backing up of the water in the sewers, flooding cellars, destroying pavements and weakening the foundations of buildings. In the Seine the water rose almost to the roof of the bridge arches and the danger of collapse was so great that eight of the twenty-four bridges had to be temporarily closed to traffic. The docks were badly washed out and a great deal of property along the quays was carried away. For a time it was feared that some of the historic and monumental buildings of Paris, such as the Louvre, the opera house, Sainte Chapelle, Notre Dame cathedral and the Madeleine, would be irreparably damaged, but fortunately this did not prove to be the case. No art treasures of any kind were lost. The basements of the public buildings on the Isle de la Cite were flooded and the old Latin quarter and the Champs de Mars were submerged. The Place de la Concorde and a portion of the Champs Elysees were made impassable and one side of the Place de l'Opera in the very center of the city had to be roped off on account of the caving in of the sidewalk. The sinking of pavements on account of the collapse of sewers was common and many thoroughfares had to be closed. A great part of the subway system was put out of commission and transportation from one part of the city to another was made even more difficult by the flooding of many of the street-car and omnibus routes. Railroad lines also suffered severely and suburban traffic was brought almost to a standstill. The St. Lazare station could scarcely be approached, and only the Gare du Nord was unaffected. This crippling of the railroad communications made the bringing in of provisions difficult and for a few days the prospect of famine prices for food was faced. Fortunately the situation in this respect did not become serious.

Electric and gas-lighting plants were interfered with and the postal service was disorganized. Telegraph lines were crippled in some directions, but communication with the outside world was kept open by means of roundabout lines. Some of the hospitals were flooded to such an extent that the patients had to be removed at the cost of much suffering. Distress among those who were compelled to leave their homes was great until relief measures could be taken to provide food and shelter. The Red Cross society, the Association of French Women, the local and national authorities and individuals worked energetically and successfully to help the destitute, special attention being given to women and children. By Feb. 7 the contributions from foreign sources amounted to more than $800,000 and this sum was largely increased later on.

The Academie Francaise, or French academy, was instituted in 1635. It is a part of the Institute of France and its particular function is to conserve the French language, foster literature and encourage genius.

WEIGHTS OF DIAMONDS AND FINENESS OF GOLD.

The weight of diamonds and other precious stones is expressed in carats, grains and quarter-grains. The grains are pearl grains, one of which is equal to four-fifths of a troy grain. Four quarter-grains make one grain and four grains make one carat. A carat is therefore equal to four-fifths of four troy grains, or 3.2.

The fineness of gold is also expressed in carats. Pure gold is said to be twenty-four carats fine. If it contains eight parts of a baser metal or alloy it is only sixteen carats fine. The carats therefore indicate the proportion of pure gold to alloy. Most of the gold used by jewelers is about fourteen carats fine, having ten parts of alloy.

NOTE—The above list, it will be noted, includes a number of canalized rivers, and does not include canals completed since 1906.

THE HENNEPIN CANAL.

Preliminary surveys begun—1871.
Excavation begun—1892.
Work completed—1907.
Canal formally opened—Oct. 24, 1907.
Length of main channel—75 miles.
Length of feeder—29.3 miles.
Total length—104 miles.
Depth—7 feet.
Width at bottom—52 feet.
Width at water level—80 feet.
Locks on main canal—32.
Locks on feeder—1.
Total cost—$7,500,000.

The Hennepin, or, more comprehensively, the Illinois and Mississippi canal, extends from the Illinois river near Hennepin to the Mississippi three miles below Rock Island. The navigable feeder extends from Rock river at Sterling and Rock Falls to the main line near Sheffield and is of the same size and just as navigable as the main line. Water is forced into it by a dam a quarter of a mile long at Sterling.

NEW YORK STATE BARGE CANAL.

Total length—442 miles.
Width—From 122 to 160 feet.
Depth—From 12 to 20 feet.
Locks—61.
Excavation—175,000,000 cubic yards.
Cost—$101,000,000.

Work on the New York state barge canal, or system of canals, according to estimates, will be completed in 1916. The main waterway will follow the line of the present Erie canal in most places from the Hudson river at Waterford, Saratoga county, to Tonawanda and Lake Erie; another division will connect the Hudson with Lake Champlain, while a third branch will run from the main canal at Three Rivers Point to Lake Ontario. The waterway will be wide and deep enough to accommodate steam barges with a maximum capacity of 1,800 tons each.

CITIZENSHIP IN THE UNITED STATES.

All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. (Fourteenth amendment to the constitution.)

All persons born in the United States and not subject to any foreign power, excluding Indians not taxed, are declared to be citizens of the United States. (Sec. 1992, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

All children heretofore born or hereafter born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose fathers were or may be, at the time of their birth, citizens thereof, are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the rights of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States. (Sec. 1993, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

Any woman who is now or may hereafter be married to a citizen of the United States and who might herself be lawfully naturalized shall be deemed a citizen. (Sec. 1995, U. S. Revised Statutes.)

Children born in the United States of alien parents are citizens of the United States.

When any alien who has formally declared his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States dies before he is actually naturalized the widow and children of such alien are citizens.

Children of Chinese parents who are themselves aliens and incapable of becoming naturalized are citizens of the United States.

Children born in the United States of persons engaged in the diplomatic service of foreign governments are not citizens of the United States.

Children born of alien parents on a vessel of a foreign country while within the waters of the United States are not citizens of the United States, but of the country to which the vessel belongs.

Children born of alien parents in the United States have the right to make an election of nationality when they reach their majority.

Minors and children are citizens within the meaning of the term as used in the constitution.

Deserters from the military or naval service of the United States are liable to loss of citizenship.

Any alien being a free white person, an alien of African nativity or of African descent may become an American citizen by complying with the naturalization laws.

"Hereafter no state court or court of the United States shall admit Chinese to citizenship; and all laws in conflict with this act are repealed." (Sec. 14, act of May 6, 1882.)

The courts have held that neither Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiians, Burmese nor Indians can be naturalized.

The naturalization laws apply to women as well as men. An alien woman who marries a citizen, native or naturalized, becomes a naturalized citizen of the United States.

Aliens may become citizens of the United States by treaties with foreign powers, by conquest or by special acts of congress.

In an act approved March 2, 1907, it is provided that any American citizen shall have expatriated himself when he has been naturalized in any foreign state in conformity with its laws, or when he has taken an oath of allegiance to any foreign state.

When any naturalized citizen shall have resided for two years in the foreign state from which he came, or five years in any other foreign state, it shall be presumed that he has ceased to be an American citizen, and the place of his general abode shall be deemed his place of residence during said years; provided, however, that such presumption may be overcome on the presentation of satisfactory evidence to a diplomatic or consular officer of the United States, under such rules and regulations as the department of state may prescribe; and, provided also, that no American citizen shall be allowed to expatriate himself when this country is at war.

Any American woman who marries a foreigner shall take the nationality of her husband. At the termination of the marital relation she may resume her American citizenship, if abroad, by registering as an American citizen within one year with a consul of the United States, or by returning to reside in the United States, or, if residing in the United States at the termination of the marital relation, by continuing to reside therein.

Any foreign woman who acquires American citizenship by marriage to an American citizen shall be assumed to retain the same after the termination of the marital relation if she continue to reside in the United States, unless she makes formal renunciation thereof before a court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens, or, if she resides abroad, she may retain her citizenship by registering as such before a United States consul within one year after the termination of such marital relation.

A child born without the United States, of alien parents, shall be deemed a citizen of the United States by virtue of the naturalization of or resumption of American citizenship of the parent; provided that such naturalization or resumption takes place during the minority of such child; and, provided further, that the citizenship of such minor child shall begin at the time such minor child begins to reside permanently in the United States.

All children born outside the limits of the United States, who are citizens thereof in accordance with the provisions of section 1993 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (see above), and who continue to reside outside of the United States, shall, in order to receive the protection of the government, be required, upon reaching the age of 18 years, to record at an American consulate their intention to become residents and remain citizens of the United States and shall further be required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States upon attaining their majority.

NATURALIZATION LAWS.

Approved June 29, 1906.

Exclusive jurisdiction to naturalize aliens resident in their districts is conferred upon the United States Circuit and District courts and all courts of record having a seal, a clerk and jurisdiction in actions at law or equity or both in which the amount in controversy is unlimited.

An alien may be admitted to citizenship in the following manner and not otherwise:

1. He shall declare on oath before the clerk of the proper court at least two years before his admission, and after he has reached the age of 18 years, that it is bona fide his intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce allegiance to any foreign state or sovereignty.

Such declaration shall set forth the same facts as are registered at the time of his arrival.

2. Not less than two years nor more than seven after he has made such declaration he shall file a petition, signed by himself and verified, in which he shall state his name, place of residence, occupation, date and place of birth, place from which he emigrated, name of the vessel on which he arrived; the time when and the place and name of the court where he declared his intention of becoming a citizen; if he is married, he shall state the name of his wife, the country of her nativity and her place of residence at the time the petition is filed, and if he has children, the name, date and place of birth and place of residence of each child living. The petition shall also set forth that he is not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government or a member of any body of persons opposed to organized government, and that he is not a polygamist or a believer in polygamy; that he intends to become a citizen of and to live permanently in the United States, and every other fact material to his naturalization and required to be proved upon the final hearing of his application. The petition shall be verified by the affidavits of at least two credible witnesses who are citizens. At the time of the filing of the petition there shall be also filed a certificate from the department of commerce and labor stating the date, place and manner of his arrival in the United States and the declaration of intention of such petitioner, which certificate and declaration shall be attached to and be a part of his petition.

3. He shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support the constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely renounces all allegiance to any foreign prince, potentate, state or sovereignty.

4. It shall be made apparent to the satisfaction of the court admitting any alien to citizenship that immediately preceding the date of his application he has resided continuously within the United States five years at least, and within the state or territory where such court is at the time held one year at least, and that during that time he has behaved as a man of good moral character, attached to the principles of the constitution. In addition to the oath of the applicant, the testimony of at least two witnesses, citizens of the United States, as to the facts of residence, moral character and attachment to the principles of the constitution shall be required.

5. He must renounce any hereditary title or order of nobility which he may possess.

6. When any alien, who has declared his intention, dies before he is actually naturalized the widow and minor children may, by complying with the other provisions of the act, be naturalized without making any declaration of intention.

Immediately after the filing of the petition the clerk of the court shall give notice thereof by posting in a public place the name, nativity and residence of the alien, the date and place of his arrival in the United States and the date for the final hearing of his petition and the names of the witnesses whom the applicant expects to summon in his behalf. Petitions for naturalization may be filed at any time, but final action thereon shall be had only on stated days and in no case until at least ninety days have elapsed after the filing of the petition. No person shall be naturalized within thirty days preceding a general election within the territorial jurisdiction of the court.

No person who disbelieves in or who is opposed to organized government, or who is a member of or affiliated with any organization entertaining and teaching such disbelief in or opposition to organized government, or who advocates or teaches the duty, necessity or propriety of the unlawful assaulting or killing of any officer or officers of the government of the United States, or of any other organized government, because of his or their official character, or who is a polygamist, shall be naturalized.

No alien shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted as a citizen of the United States who cannot speak the English language. This requirement does not apply to those physically unable to comply with it; or to those making homestead entries upon the public lands of the United States

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION OF 1912.

The next president and vice-president of the United States will be chosen Nov. 5, 1912. As is well known, these officials are not elected directly by the people, but by electors, who are voted for on the party tickets on the date named. The electors chosen will meet Monday, Jan. 13, 1913, in their respective states and vote by ballot for president and vice-president of the United States. The result will be transmitted to the president of the senate in Washington, Wednesday, Feb. 12, 1913, the electoral votes will be opened and counted in the presence of both houses of congress and the result announced by the president of the senate.

While the president and vice-president are thus formally elected in 1913, the actual choice is made in 1912. In the spring and summer of that year national party conventions will be held for the nomination of candidates for president and vice-president of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1913. These conventions are not provided for by the constitution, but it has become the invariable rule that the candidates presented by them are voted for by the presidential electors. The latter are nominated at the state party conventions or primaries and are elected on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of every fourth year preceding the end of the presidential term. Each state is entitled to as many electors as it has senators and representatives. No senator or representative or person holding an office of trust or honor under the United States may be an elector. The twelfth amendment to the constitution prescribes how the electors shall meet and cast their ballots and how congress shall count the votes. The article is as follows:

"The electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for president and vice-president, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as president, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as vice-president, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as president and of all persons voted for as vice-president, and of the number of votes for each, which list they shall sign and certify and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate.

"The president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for president shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers, not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as president, the house of representatives shall choose immediately by ballot the president. But in choosing the president the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the house of representatives shall not choose a president, whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the 4th day of March next following, then the vice-president shall act as president, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the president.

"The person having the greatest number of votes as vice-president shall be the vice-president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list the senate shall choose the vice-president; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of president shall be eligible to that of vice-president of the United States."

Section 5, article II., of the constitution prescribes the qualifications of the president as follows:

"No person except a natural born citizen or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of the constitution shall be eligible to the office of president; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of 35 years and been fourteen years a resident within the United States."

The qualifications of the vice-president are the same as those of the president.

THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

The president and vice-president of the United States are not elected directly by the people, but by the members of an electoral college who are voted for at the regular presidential elections. Each state is entitled to as many representatives in the electoral college as there are congressional districts in the states and in addition one for each senator. Following is the electoral vote of the states, based upon the apportionment of representatives made by congress under the census of 1900:

NATIONAL PARTY PLATFORMS OF 1908.

[For full text see The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1909, page 195.]

PEOPLE'S.

Adopted at St. Louis, April 3.

The people's party advocates the issuance of money direct by the government to the people without the intervention of the national banks, to be distributed through federal and internal improvement; the public ownership of railroads and other public utilities; homesteading of land; the parcels post; governmental regulation of corporations by a general law regulating corporations doing an interstate business; initiative and referendum; direct vote for all public officers, with the power of recall; federal statute recognizing the principle of the initiative and referendum; giving the people power of instructing their national representatives in congress; abolition of child labor; the eight-hour day; an employers' liability law; condemnation of federal injunctions and gambling on futures.

UNITED CHRISTIAN.

Reaffirmed at Rock Island, Ill., May 1.

The platform of the united Christian party is based on the ten commandments and the golden rule and favors direct primary elections, the initiative, referendum, recall, uniform marriage and divorce laws, equal rights for men and women, government ownership of coal mines, oil wells and public utilities; the regulation of trusts and the election of the president and vice-president and senators of the United States by the direct vote of the people.

SOCIALIST.

Adopted at Chicago, May 17.

"We advocate and pledge ourselves and our elected officers to the following programme:

"1. The immediate government relief for the unemployed workers by building schools, by reforesting of cutover and waste lands, by reclamation of arid tracts, and the building of canals, and by extending all other useful public works. All persons employed on such works shall be employed directly by the government under an eight-hour workday and at the prevailing union wages. The government shall also loan money to states and municipalities, without interest, for the purpose of carrying on public works. It shall contribute to the funds of labor organizations for the purpose of assisting their unemployed members, and shall take such other measures within its power as will lessen the widespread misery of the workers caused by the misrule of the capitalist class.

"2. The collective ownership of railroads, telegraphs, telephones, steamship lines and all other means of social transportation and communication, and all land.

"3. The collective ownership of all industries which are organized on a national scale and in which competition has virtually ceased to exist. The extension of the public domain to include mines, quarries, oil wells, forests and water power.

"5. The occupancy and use of land to be the sole title to possession. The scientific reforestation of timber lands and the reclamation of swamp lands. The land so reforested or reclaimed to be permanently retained as a part of the public domain.

"6. The absolute freedom of press, speech and assemblage.

"7. The improvement of the industrial condition of the workers—

(a). By shortening the workday in keeping with the increased productiveness of machinery.

(b). By securing to every worker a rest period of not less than a day and a half in each week.

(c). By securing a more effective inspection of workshops and factories.

(d). By forbidding the employment of children under 16 years of age.

(e). By forbidding the interstate transportation of the products of child labor, of convict labor and of all uninspected factories.

(f). By abolishing official charity and substituting in its place compulsory insurance against unemployment, illness, accidents, invalidism, old age and death.

"8. The extension of inheritance taxes, graduated in proportion to the amount of the bequests and to the nearness of kin.

"9. A graduated income tax.

"10. Unrestricted and equal suffrage for men and women, and we pledge ourselves to engage in an active campaign in that direction.

"11. The initiative and referendum, proportional representation and the right of recall.

"12. The abolition of the senate.

"13. The abolition of the power usurped by the Supreme court of the United States to pass upon the constitutionality of legislation enacted by congress. National laws to be repealed or abrogated only by act of congress or by a referendum of the whole people.

"14. That the constitution be made amendable by a majority vote.

"15. The enactment of further measures for general education and for the conservation of health. The bureau of education to be made a department. The creation of a department of public health.

"16. The separation of the present bureau of labor from the department of commerce and labor, and the establishment of a department of labor.

"17. That all judges be elected by the people for short terms, and that the power to issue injunctions shall be curbed by immediate legislation.

"18. The free administration of justice."

SOCIALIST LABOR.

Adopted at New York city, July 5.

The socialist labor party at its national convention in New York city, July 2-5, 1908, reaffirmed the platform adopted in 1904. This, in substance, advocates the ending of the present struggle between the capitalist and laboring classes by placing the land and the means of production, transportation and distribution into the hands of the people as a collective body and substituting the co-operative commonwealth for the present state of planless production, industrial war and social disorder—a commonwealth in which every worker shall have the free exercise and full benefit of his faculties, multiplied by all the modern factors of civilization.

DEMOCRATIC.

Adopted at Denver, July 10.

The platform denounces the waste of the people's money through extravagant appropriations by congress and the increase in the number of officeholders. It charges that the house of representatives has ceased to be a deliberative and legislative body, responsive to the will of the majority of its members, and has come under the absolute domination of the speaker. It pledges the democratic party to the enactment of a law preventing corporations from making campaign contributions and any individual from contributing an amount above a reasonable maximum and providing for the publication of contributions. It opposes the extension of the powers of the general government by judicial construction and insists that federal remedies for the regulation of interstate commerce and for the prevention of private monopoly shall be added to, not substituted for, state remedies.

"We favor immediate revision of the tariff by the reduction of import duties. Articles entering into competition with trust-controlled products should be placed upon the free list and material reductions should be made in the tariff upon the necessities of life, especially upon articles competing with such American manufactures as are sold abroad more cheaply than at home; and graduate reductions should be made in such other schedules as may be necessary to restore the tariff to a revenue basis. We demand the immediate repeal of the tariff on wood pulp, print paper, lumber, timber and logs and that these articles be placed upon the free list.

"A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We, therefore, favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal law against guilty trust magnates and officials, and demand the enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States. Among the additional remedies we specify three: First, a law preventing a duplication of directors among competing corporations; second, a license system which will, without abridging the right of each state to create corporations or its right to regulate as it will foreign corporations doing business within its limits, make it necessary for a manufacturing or trading corporation engaged in interstate commerce to take out a federal license before it shall be permitted to control as much as 25 per cent of the product in which it deals, the license to protect the public from watered stock and to prohibit the control by such corporations of more than 50 per cent of the total amount of any product consumed in the United States; and third, a law compelling such licensed corporation to sell to all purchasers in all parts of the country on the same terms, after making due allowance for cost of transportation.

"We assert the right of congress to exercise complete control over interstate commerce and the right of each state to exercise like control over commerce within its borders. We demand such enlargement of the powers of the interstate-commerce commission as may be necessary to compel railroads to perform their duties as common carriers and prevent discrimination and extortion. We favor the efficient supervision and rate regulation of railroads engaged in interstate commerce, and to this end we recommend the valuation of railroads by the interstate-commerce commission, such valuation to take into consideration the physical value of the property, the original cost, cost of production and all elements of value that will render the valuation fair and just. We favor such legislation as will prohibit the railroads from engaging in business which brings them into competition with their shippers, also legislation preventing the overissue of stocks and bonds by interstate railroads and legislation which will assure such reduction in transportation rates as conditions will permit, care being taken to avoid reductions that would compel a reduction of wages, prevent adequate service or do injustice to legitimate investment. We favor such legislation as will increase the power of the interstate-commerce commission, giving to it the initiative with reference to rates and transportation charges put into effect by the railroad companies and permitting the interstate-commerce commission on its own initiative to declare a rate illegal and as being more than should be charged for such service. We further declare in favor of a law providing that all agreements of traffic or other associations of railway agents affecting interstate rates, service or classification shall be unlawful unless filed with and approved by the interstate-commerce commission.

"We favor a postal savings bank, if the guaranteed bank cannot be secured, and believe that it should be so constituted as to keep the deposited money in the community where the depositories are. But we condemn the policy of the republican party in proposing postal savings banks under a plan of conduct by which they will aggregate the deposits of rural communities and redeposit the same while under government charge in the banks of Wall street, thus depleting the circulating medium of the producing regions and unjustly favoring the speculative markets.

"We favor an income tax as part of our revenue system, and we urge the submission of a constitutional amendment specifically authorizing congress to levy and collect a tax upon individual and corporate incomes, to the end that wealth may bear its proportionate share of the burdens of the federal government.

"Experience has proved the necessity of a modification of the present law relating to injunctions, and we reiterate the pledges of our national platforms of 1896 and 1904 in favor of the measure which passed the United States senate in 1896, but which a republican congress has ever since refused to enact, relating to contempt in federal courts and providing for trial by jury in cases of indirect contempt. Questions of judicial practice have arisen, especially in connection with industrial disputes. We deem that parties to all judicial proceedings should be treated with rigid impartiality and that injunctions should not be issued in any case in which injunctions would not issue if no industrial dispute were involved."

The platform further pledges the democratic party to the enactment of a general employers' liability law, to the creation of a federal department of labor, represented separately in the president's cabinet, to the upbuilding of the merchant marine without bounties and to the maintenance of an adequate navy. It favors a generous pension policy and advocates the organization of a national bureau of public health.

"We favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people, and regard this reform as the gateway to other national reforms.

"We earnestly favor the immediate adoption of a liberal and comprehensive plan for improving every water course in the union which is justified by the needs of commerce, and, to secure that end, we favor, when practicable, the connection of the great lakes with the navigable rivers and with the gulf, through the Mississippi river, and the navigable rivers with each other, and the rivers, bays and sounds of our coasts with each other by artificial canals, with a view to perfecting a system of inland waterways, to be navigated by vessels of standard draft.

"We repeat the demand for internal development and for the conservation of our natural resources contained in previous platforms, the enforcement of which Mr. Roosevelt has vainly sought from a reluctant party, and to that end we insist upon the preservation, protection and replacement of needed forests, the preservation of the public domain for homeseekers, the protection of the nation's natural resources in timber, coal, iron and oil against monopolistic control, the development of our waterways for navigation and every other useful purpose, including the irrigation of arid lands, the reclamation of swamplands, the clarification of streams, the development of water power and the preservation of electric power generated by this natural force from the control of monopoly; and to such end we urge the exercise of all powers, national, state and municipal, both separately and in co-operation.

"We condemn the experiment in imperialism as an inexcusable blunder which has involved us in an enormous expense, brought us weakness instead of strength, and laid our nation open to the charge of abandoning a fundamental doctrine of self-government. We favor an immediate declaration of the nation's purpose to recognize the independence of the Philippine islands as soon as a stable government can be established, such independence to be guaranteed by us as we guarantee the independence of Cuba, until the neutralization of the islands can be secured by treaty with other powers. In recognizing the independence of the Philippines our government should retain such land as may be necessary for coaling stations and naval bases."

PROHIBITIONIST.

Adopted at Columbus, O., July 16.

The prohibition party of the United States, assembled in convention at Columbus, O., July 15-16, 1908, expressing gratitude to Almighty God for the victories of our principles in the past, for encouragement at present and for confidence in early and triumphant success in the future, makes the following declaration of principles and pledges their enactment into law when placed in power:

1. The submission by congress to the several states of an amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation or transportation of alcoholic liquors for beverage purposes.

2. The immediate prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes in the district of Columbia, in the territories and all places over which the national government has jurisdiction; the repeal of the internal revenue tax on alcoholic liquors and the prohibition of interstate traffic therein.

3. The election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

4. Equitable graduated income and inheritance taxes.
5. The establishment of postal savings banks and the guaranty of deposits in banks.
6. The regulation of all corporations doing an interstate-commerce business.
7. The creation of permanent tariff commissions.
8. The strict enforcement of law instead of official tolerance and practical license of the social evil which prevails in many of our cities, with its unspeakable traffic in girls.
9. Uniform marriage and divorce laws.
10. An equitable and constitutional employers' liability act.
11. Court review of postoffice department decisions.
12. The prohibition of child labor in mines, workshops and factories.
13. Legislation basing suffrage only upon intelligence and ability to read and write the English language.
14. The preservation of the mineral and forest resources of the country and the improvement of the highways and waterways.

REPUBLICAN.

Adopted at Chicago, June 18.

"The republican party declares unequivocally for a revision of the tariff by a special session of congress immediately following the inauguration of the next president, and commends the steps already taken to this end in the work assigned to the appropriate committees of congress which are now investigating the operation and effect of existing schedules. In all tariff legislation the true principle of protection is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries. We favor the establishment of maximum and minimum rates to be administered by the president under limitations fixed in the law, the maximum to be available to meet discriminations by foreign countries against American goods entering their markets and the minimum to represent the normal measure of protection at home; the aim and purpose of the republican policy being not only to preserve, without excessive duties, that security against foreign competition to which American manufacturers, farmers and producers are entitled, but also to maintain the high standard of living of the wage earners of this country, who are the most direct beneficiaries of the protective system. Between the United States and the Philippines we believe in a free interchange of products with such limitations as to sugar and tobacco as will afford adequate protection to domestic interests.

"We approve the emergency measures adopted by the government during the recent financial disturbance, and especially commend the passage by congress at the last session of the law designed to protect the country from a repetition of such stringency. The republican party is committed to the development of a permanent currency system, responding to our greater needs, and the appointment of the national monetary commission by the present congress which will impartially investigate all proposed methods insures the early realization of this purpose.

"We favor the establishment of a postal savings bank system for the convenience of the people and the encouragement of thrift.

"The republican party passed the Sherman anti-trust law over democratic opposition, and enforced it after democratic dereliction. It has been a wholesome instrument for good in the hands of a wise and fearless administration. But experience has shown that its effectiveness can be strengthened and its real objects better attained by such amendments as will give to the federal government greater supervision and control over, and secure greater publicity in, the management of that class of corporations engaged in interstate commerce having power and opportunity to effect monopolies.

"We approve the enactment of the railroad rate law and the vigorous enforcement by the present administration of the statutes against rebates and discriminations, as a result of which the advantages formerly possessed by the large shipper over the small shipper have substantially disappeared, and in this connection we commend the appropriation by the present congress to enable the interstate-commerce commission to thoroughly investigate and give publicity to the accounts of interstate railroads. We believe, however, that the interstate-commerce law should be further amended so as to give railroads the right to make and publish traffic agreements subject to the approval of the commission, but maintaining always the principle of competition between naturally competing lines and avoiding the common control of such lines by any means whatsoever. We favor such national legislation and supervision as will prevent the future overissue of stocks and bonds by interstate carriers.

"The republican party will uphold at all times the authority and integrity of the courts, state and federal, and will ever insist that their powers to enforce their process and to protect life, liberty and property shall be preserved inviolate. We believe, however, that the rules of procedure in the federal courts with respect to the issuance of the writ of injunction should be more accurately defined by statute and that no injunction or temporary restraining order should be issued without notice, except where irreparable injury would result from delay, in which case a speedy hearing thereafter should be granted.

"We endorse the movement inaugurated by the administration for the conservation of natural resources; we approve all measures to prevent the waste of timber; we commend the work now going on for the reclamation of arid lands, and reaffirm the republican policy of the free distribution of the available areas of the public domain to the landless settler. No obligation of the future is more insistent and none will result in greater blessings to posterity. In line with this splendid undertaking is the further duty, equally imperative, to enter upon a systematic improvement upon a large and comprehensive plan, just to all portions of the country, of the waterway harbors and great lakes, whose natural adaptability to the increasing traffic of the land is one of the greatest gifts of a benign Providence.

"We adhere to the republican doctrine of encouragement to American shipping and urge such legislation as will revive the merchant marine prestige of the country, so essential to national defense, the enlargement of foreign trade and the industrial prosperity of our own people.

"We reaffirm our former declarations that the civil-service laws enacted, extended and enforced by the republican party shall continue to be maintained and obeyed.

"We commend the efforts designed to secure greater efficiency in national public health agencies and favor such legislation as will effect this purpose.

"In the interest of the great mineral industries of our country we earnestly favor the establishment of a bureau of mines and mining.

"We favor the immediate admission of the territories of New Mexico and Arizona as separate states in the union."

INDEPENDENCE.

Adopted at Chicago, July 23.

"As of first importance, in order to restore the power of government to the people, to make their will supreme in the primaries, in the elections and in the control of public officials after they have been elected, we declare for direct nominations, the initiative and referendum and the right of recall.

"Representative government is made a mockery by the system of modern party conventions dominated by bosses and controlled by cliques. We demand the natural remedy of direct nominations by which the people not only elect but, which is far more important, select their representatives.

"We believe in the principle of the initiative and referendum and we particularly demand that no franchise be granted into operation until the terms and conditions have been approved by popular vote in the locality interested.

"We demand for the people the right to recall public officials from the public service. The power to make officials resides in the people and in them also should reside the power to unmake and remove from office any official who demonstrates his unfitness or betrays the public trust.

"Of next importance in destroying the power of selfish special interests and the corrupt political bosses whom they control is to wrest from their hands their main weapon, the corruption fund. We demand severe and effective legislation against all forms of corrupt practices at elections and advocate prohibiting the use of any money at elections except for meetings, literature and the necessary traveling expenses of candidates.

"From the foundation of our government down to 1872 the federal judiciary act prohibited the issue of any injunction without reasonable notice until after a hearing. We assert that in all actions growing out of a dispute between employers and employees concerning terms or conditions of employment no injunction should issue until after a trial upon the merits, that such trial should be had before a jury and that in no case of alleged contempt should any person be deprived of liberty without a trial by jury.

"The independence party declares that the right to issue money is inherent in the government and it favors the establishment of a central governmental bank through which the money so issued shall be put into general circulation.

"We demand a revision of the tariff, not by the friends of the tariff, but by the friends of the people, and declare for a gradual reduction of tariff duties with just consideration for the rights of the consuming public and of established industry. There should be no protection for oppressive trusts which sell cheaply abroad and take advantage of the tariff at home to crush competition, raise prices, control production and limit work and wages.

"The parcels post system should be rapidly and widely extended, and government postal savings banks should be established where the people's deposits will be secure, the money to be loaned to the people in the locality of the several banks and at a rate of interest to be fixed by the government."

The platform also favored the passage of an exclusion act to protect American workmen from competition with Asiatic cheap labor; the building of a navy strong enough to protect at the same time both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States; the building of a ship canal from the lakes to the gulf; the protection of American citizens abroad; the popular election of United States senators and of judges, both state and federal, and a graduated income tax.

DECISION IN THE DANBURY HATTERS' CASE.

In the United States Circuit court in Hartford, Conn., Feb. 4, 1910, a jury awarded D. E. Loewe & Co., hat manufacturers in Danbury, Conn., $74,000 damages in their suit against Martin Lawler and 240 other members of the local unions of the United Hatters of North America for conducting a boycott against the hats made by the firm. Judge J. P. Platt, who presided, instructed the jury to find for the plaintiff and fix the amount of the damages. This was placed at the amount named, but as the Sherman antitrust act, under which the action was brought, allows triple damages, the judge multiplied the $74,000 by three, making the total $222,000.

The suit was originally brought in the Circuit court in 1903, when Loewe & Co. filed a bill alleging that the labor organization had undertaken to unionize the company's hat factory in Danbury, and failing to do so, had gone on a strike. This act was followed by the declaration of a boycott against the firm's hats wherever they were found, and as it controlled an extensive trade throughout many states the boycott, in the language of the bill, constituted a combination to limit and restrain interstate commerce. On a demurrer by the hatters' union, the Circuit court decided that the Sherman law was inapplicable and dismissed the case. The Court of Appeals, however, certified the suit to the United States Supreme court, and that tribunal, Feb. 3, 1908, reversed the decision of the Circuit court, deciding without a dissenting voice that boycotting, where it affected interstate commerce, was in violation of the Sherman antitrust act. (See The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1909, page 256.)

The case then went back to the Circuit court, and after a trial lasting eleven weeks resulted as stated above. The suit was for $240,000 damages and was instituted by the Antiboycott society through Mrs. Loewe. The hatters' union was supported by the American Federation of Labor.

THE HOMESTEAD LAW.

Any person who is the head of a family, or who is 21 years old and is a citizen of the United States or has filed his declaration of intention to become such, and who is not the proprietor of more than 160 acres of land in any state or territory, is entitled to enter one-quarter section (160 acres) or less quantity of unappropriated public land under the homestead laws. The applicant must make affidavit that he is entitled to the privileges of the homestead act and that the entry is made for his exclusive use and for actual settlement and cultivation, and must pay the legal fee and that part of the commission required, as follows: Fee for 160 acres, $10; commission, $4 to $12. Fee for eighty acres, $5; commission, $2 to $6. Within six months from the date of entry the settler must take up his residence upon the land and cultivate the same for five years continuously. At the expiration of this period, or within two years thereafter, proof of residence and cultivation must be established by four witnesses. The proof of settlement, with the certificate of the register of the land office, is forwarded to the general land office at Washington, from which a patent is issued. Final proof cannot be made until the expiration of five years from date of entry, and must be made within seven years. The government recognizes no sale of a homestead claim. After the expiration of fourteen months from date of entry the law allows the homesteader to secure title to the tract, if so desired, by paying for it in cash and making proof of settlement, residence and cultivation for that period.

The law allows only one homestead privilege to any one person.

THE HYDE-SWOPE MURDER CASE.

Col. Thomas H. Swope, a millionaire philanthropist of Independence, Mo., died under suspicious circumstances Oct. 3, 1909. He was attended by Dr. B. Clarke Hyde, husband of his niece, John G. Paxton, executor of Col. Swope's estate, and Mrs. Logan Swope, mother of Chrisman Swope, who died in December, 1909, instituted an investigation, which resulted in the arrest of Dr. Hyde on the charge of causing the death of Col. Swope. Chemical analysis of a portion of the colonel's stomach disclosed strychnine. It also appeared that Dr. Hyde had purchased from another physician an active typhoid culture. This was connected with an epidemic of typhoid fever which occurred in the Swope family in December, 1909. The trial of Dr. Hyde began April 11, 1910, in Kansas City, Mo., and ended May 16 in a verdict of guilty. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

In five states in 1892 the electoral vote was divided: California gave 8 electoral votes for Cleveland and 1 for Harrison and Ohio gave 1 for Cleveland and 22 for Harrison; in Michigan, by act of the legislature, each congressional district voted separately for an elector; in Oregon 1 of the 4 candidates for electors on the people's party ticket was also on the democratic ticket; in North Dakota 1 of the 2 people's party electors cast his vote for Cleveland, this causing the electoral vote of the state to be equally divided among Cleveland, Harrison and Weaver. In 1896 California gave 8 electoral votes to McKinley and 1 to Bryan; Kentucky gave 12 to McKinley and 1 to Bryan. In Maryland in 1904 7 of the presidential electors chosen were democrats and 1 republican. In 1908 Maryland elected 6 democratic and 2 republican electors.

NONCONTIGUOUS POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

The Philippine islands were ceded to the United States by Spain Dec. 10, 1898. Maj.-Gen. Merritt was the first military governor. He was succeeded in August, 1899, by Maj.-Gen. E. S. Otis, who in turn was followed in May, 1900, by Maj.-Gen. Arthur MacArthur. The last named remained in office until July 4, 1901, when the military authority was transferred to Gen. A. R. Chaffee. By order of the president Gen. Chaffee was relieved of his duties as military governor July 4, 1902, and the office terminated. The Philippine commission was at the same time made the superior authority. Sept. 2 the islands were divided into three military departments, to be known as the department of Luzon, the department of Visayas and the department of Mindanao.

July 1, 1902, congress passed an act providing temporarily for the government of the Philippines, providing for the election by popular vote, two years after a census of the islands had been taken and published, of delegates to an assembly, consisting of not more than 100 members nor less than fifty, apportioned among the provinces as nearly as possible according to population. This assembly should, together with the Philippine commission appointed by the president of the United States, exercise the legislative power heretofore exercised by the commission alone, the members of the commission acting as an upper house and the elected assemblymen as a lower house. The members of the assembly were to hold office two years and annual sessions of the legislature not exceeding ninety days in length were to be held.

The first election was held July 30, 1907, when eighty members of the legislature were chosen, the total vote being 97,803. The first session was formally opened Oct. 16 by William H. Taft, United States secretary of war, the first civil governor of the islands after they came into American possession. Sergio Osmena was elected president.

ISLAND OF PORTO RICO.

Porto Rico, according to the decision of the United States Supreme court in the insular cases May 27, 1901, is a territory appurtenant and belonging to the United States, but not a part of the United States within the revenue clause of the constitution. The island was ceded to the United States by Spain Dec. 10, 1898, and was under military rule until the Foraker law went into effect May 1, 1900. (For the provisions of that law see The Daily News Almanac for 1901.) In accordance with the third section of that act, the legislative assembly of Porto Rico having put into operation a system of local taxation to meet the necessities of government, President McKinley on the 25th of July, 1901—the anniversary of the landing of American troops on the island in 1898—proclaimed free trade between the United States and Porto Rico.

GOVERNMENT—Civil government, under the provisions of the Foraker act, was established May 1, 1900. The upper house consists of eleven members, six of whom are "cabinet" officers appointed by the president; the lower house is made up of thirty-five delegates elected by the people every two years. The governor, who is appointed by the president, has practically the same duties as the governor of any other territory of the United States. The present officers are: Governor, Col. George R. Colton; acting secretary, M. Drew Carrel; treasurer, Samuel D. Gromer; commissioner of education, Edward Grant Dexter; resident commissioner in the United States, Tulio Larrazaga.

AREA AND POPULATION—The area of Porto Rico is about 3,600 square miles and the population, as shown by the census of 1910, is 1,118,012. In 1900 the population was 953,243. Of these 341,751 are natives. The whites number 589,423 and the colored 363,817. The colored are subdivided into 304,352 mestizos, 59,290 negroes and 75 Chinese. By departments the population in 1900 was: Aguadilla, 99,645; Arecibo, 162,308; Bayamon, 147,681; Guayama, 111,986; Humacao, 160,366; Mayaguez, 127,566; Ponce, 203,191. The cities having more than 5,000 inhabitants are: San Juan, 32,048; Ponce, 27,952; Mayaguez, 15,187; Arecibo, 8,008; Aguadilla, 6,425; Yauco, 6,168; Caguas, 5,450; Guayama, 5,334.

COMMERCE—For the year ended June 30, 1910, the total domestic exports from Porto Rico to foreign countries were $5,822,602, and to the United States, $26,391,338. Foreign imports amounted to $3,537,201 and imports from the United States amounted to $22,272,770. Of the exports Spain took $1,058,137; Cuba $2,468,689; France, $583,682; Germany, $259,508; Austria-Hungary, $833,604.

AVALANCHES IN THE CASCADE AND SELKIRK MOUNTAINS.

Warm weather in the latter part of February and the early part of March, 1910, following a winter remarkable for its heavy snow, caused a number of disastrous avalanches in the Cascade mountains in Idaho and Washington. Feb. 27 the mining towns of Mace and Burke and the camp of the Carbonate Hill Mining company at Mullan, all in the northern part of Idaho, were overwhelmed by avalanches of snow and rock. Twelve persons were killed at Mace, four at Burke and three at Mullan. Two were killed at Dorsey, Idaho, Feb. 28. As many persons were reported missing, the number of actual fatalities was probably much larger than that given.

Early on the morning of March 1 two Great Northern trains were buried by an avalanche on the west slope of the Cascades, near the small station of Wellington. One was a passenger and the other a mail train, and most of the victims were asleep in the coaches at the time the disaster occurred. They were buried into a canyon 200 feet deep and covered with hundreds of tons of snow and rock. Only a few escaped, and these were severely injured. The dead, many of whom remained under the snow and wreckage for days, numbered 118. The property loss was $1,000,000.

March 2 the Oriental limited train No. 2, east bound, on the Great Northern road, ran into a landslide near Millan, a station twenty-two miles east of Spokane. The fireman was killed and a dozen persons were badly injured.

March 5, while a large number of workmen were clearing the line of the Canadian Pacific railroad of the debris of a snowslide in Rogers pass, near Glacier, at the summit of the Selkirk mountains, British Columbia, they were overwhelmed by a second slide. Ninety-two lives were lost, the victims being carried down into the valley and buried under tons of snow.

BRITISH GENERAL ELECTIONS OF 1910.

Following the formal dissolution of the second parliament of King Edward VII., Jan. 10, 1910, election writs were issued to every constituency. Voting began almost immediately and continued through the greater part of the month, but the bulk of the polling took place Jan. 15, 17, 18 and 19. The campaign was an extremely hard-fought one, both of the leading parties exerting their utmost power to win. It had been expected that the chief issues would be the budget of 1909, with its radical methods of taxation, and the veto power of the house of lords in the matter of financial legislation, but tariff reform was widely discussed and at times seemed to be the dominant question of the hour. Home rule for Ireland, votes for women, naval and military progress, old-age pensions, work for the unemployed, socialism and many other matters also attracted more or less attention. With such a multiplicity of issues before it the British electorate divided almost evenly and failed to pass decisively upon any one of them. The liberals elected 275 members and the unionists 273. This left the liberal government in the power of the Irish nationalists, who secured eighty-two members, and the labor party, with forty members, and it was freely predicted that the ministry would soon fall, necessitating another general election.

HOOKWORM-DISEASE COMMISSION.

Oct. 26, 1909, John D. Rockefeller gave $1,000,000 as a fund to be used in combating the ravages of the "hookworm" parasite in the southern states. The following gentlemen were designated to take charge of the work: John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; Dr. William H. Welch, Dr. Simon Flexner, Dr. Charles W. Stille, Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, Dr. David F. Houston, Prof. P. P. Claxton, J. Y. Joyner, Walter H. Page, Dr. H. B. Frissell, Frederick T. Gates, Starr J. Murphy.

According to the medical authorities the "hookworm" is a hairlike parasite causing a form of anemia prevalent especially among the poor people of the south. Although less than half an inch in length it operates on its victims' intestines in such a way as to sap their vitality. It has a complete and well-developed set of organs and the female has the capacity of laying thousands of eggs. The parasite was discovered by Dr. Charles W. Stille in 1902 in a Washington hospital.

tween the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m., if the office be other than a free-delivery office.

REGISTRATION.—All mailable matter may be registered at the rate of 10 cents for each package in addition to the regular postage, which must be prepaid. An indemnity not to exceed $50 will be paid for the loss of first-class registered matter, and 50 francs ($10) in case of the loss of a registered article addressed to a country in the universal postal union, under certain conditions.

LIMITS OR WEIGHT.—No package of third or fourth class matter weighing more than four pounds, except single books, will be received for conveyance by mail. The limit of weight does not apply to second-class matter mailed at the second-class rate of postage, or at the rate of 1 cent for each four ounces, nor is it enforced against matter fully prepaid with postage stamps affixed at the first-class or letter rate of postage.

INHERITANCE TAX IN ILLINOIS.

The Illinois law taxing gifts, legacies and inheritances was passed by the legislature in 1895 and amended in 1901. Its constitutionality was contested, but the United States Supreme court in a decision rendered Jan. 19, 1903, held it to be valid.

Under the provisions of this law all property, real, personal and mixed, which shall pass by will or by the intestate laws of the state from any resident of the state or any one whose property is in this state to any person or persons is subject to tax at the following rates: When the beneficial interests to any property or income therefrom shall pass to any father, mother, husband, wife, child, brother, sister, wife or widow of the son or the husband of the daughter, or any adopted child or children, or to any lineal descendant born in lawful wedlock, the rate of tax shall be $1 on every $100 of the clear market value of such property received by each person and at the same rate for any less amount, provided that any estate which may be valued at less than $20,000 shall not be subject to any such tax; and the tax is to be levied in the above cases only upon the excess of $20,000 received by each person.

When the property passes to any uncle, aunt, niece, nephew or any lineal descendant of the same the rate shall be $2 on every $100 in excess of $2,000.

DALAI LAMA OF TIBET DEPOSED BY CHINA.

Feb. 25, 1910, the Chinese foreign office issued a statement announcing that the government had deposed the dalai lama as head of the Tibetan government because he had deserted his capital, Lassa, following an attempt by him to organize a general revolt. It was alleged that he had circulated rumors to the effect that China intended to exterminate lamaism and that British trade was injuring Tibet. For this reason China sent 2,000 soldiers to Lassa to preserve the peace and afford protection. The dalai lama secretly left Lassa Feb. 12 with his followers, whereupon China ordered the Tibetans to elect his successor. At the same time it issued a decree ordering the protection of lamaism and the strict observance of treaties with foreign countries. The dalai lama fled to India after narrowly escaping capture by the Chinese.

Under the constitution the legislative power is exercised by two elective bodies—the house of representatives and the senate, conjointly called congress. The senate is composed of four senators from each of the six provinces, elected for eight years by the provincial councilmen and by a double number of electors constituting together an electoral board.

The house of representatives is composed of one representative for each 25,000 inhabitants or fraction thereof over 12,500, elected for four years by direct vote. One-half of the members of the house are elected every two years. The salary of members of congress is $3,600 a year.

ANNEXATION OF KOREA BY JAPAN.

The empire of Korea was formally annexed to Japan Aug. 29, 1910, when the treaty concluded between the two governments was officially promulgated. The document is preceded by a declaration in which attention is called to the fact that the system of government prevailing in Korea had not proved equal to the preservation of order and tranquillity and that fundamental changes in the actual regime were absolutely essential. The government of Japan further declares that foreigners resident in Korea will enjoy the same rights and immunities as in Japan; that Japan, for a period of ten years, will levy upon goods imported into Korea from foreign countries or exported from Korea, and upon foreign vessels entering any of the open ports of Korea, the same import or export duties and the same tonnage dues as under the existing schedules; that Japan will also permit, for a period of ten years, vessels under the flags of powers having treaties with Japan to engage in the coasting trade between the open ports of Korea and Japan, and that the existing open ports of Korea, with the exception of Masampo, will be continued as open ports and in addition Shin-Wiju will be newly opened. The text of the treaty follows:

His majesty the emperor of Japan and his majesty the emperor of Korea, having in view the special and close relations between their respective countries, desiring to promote the common weal of the two nations and to assure permanent peace in the extreme east, and being convinced that these objects can be best attained by the annexation of Korea to the empire of Japan, have resolved to conclude a treaty of such annexation, and have for that purpose appointed as their plenipotentiaries, that is to say:

REVOLUTION IN PORTUGAL.

King Manuel II. of Portugal was deposed by a revolution in Lisbon and a republican government established Oct. 3-4, 1910. The royal family escaped from the Necessidades palace to the Portuguese royal yacht, Amelle, and proceeded to Gibraltar, whence the king later was conveyed to England on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert.

The republicans in Portugal had been planning for months to overthrow the monarchy, but the actual revolution was brought about by the act of a fanatical royalist named Santos, recently released from an insane asylum, who shot and mortally wounded Prof. Bombarda, whom he blamed for his detention. Bombarda was a well-known republican and his killing was denounced in the republican newspaper, Seculo, as a political assassination, as the professor was one of the delegates recently elected to the cortes. Great excitement ensued, mobs were formed and encounters with the police occurred. The 1st battery of artillery seized their officers, tore down the royal flag and distributed arms and ammunition among the people. Part of the 16th infantry also mutinied and fought against the troops that remained loyal to the king. The republican forces were getting the worst of it when three Portuguese cruisers in the Tagus, the Adamastor, the San Rafael and the Dom Fernando, came to their rescue, hoisting the red and green flag of the republic and shelling the royal palaces. The bombardment did little actual damage, but hastened the surrender of the royalists. The municipal guard and some of the other loyal soldiers held out until Wednesday morning, Oct. 5, when they surrendered. In the course of the fighting several hundreds of persons were killed or wounded, but no accurate figures were published.

King Manuel, who a few hours before the revolt had banqueted President-elect Fonseca of Brazil, escaped from the Necessidades palace and was conveyed in an automobile to Mafra, a town about eighteen miles northwest of Lisbon. Here he was joined by the Queen Mother Amelle and the Dowager Queen Maria Pia, who had fled from the Ajuda palace to Cintra. The Infante Alfonso, duke of Sperto, had embarked upon the royal yacht Amelle at Cascaes and brought the vessel around to Ericeira, a fishing village a few miles beyond Mafra. Here the royal fugitives embarked and went directly to Gibraltar and placed themselves under the protection of the British authorities.

In the provinces, island possessions and colonies of Portugal the republicans assumed control almost without opposition and within a few days after the events in Lisbon the revolution was complete throughout the country. The people in the capital, who had taken part in the insurrection, disbanded voluntarily, order was quickly restored and business resumed. A provisional government was established with Theophile Braga, a poet and philosopher, as president, and the following as members of his cabinet:

Minister of Justice—Alfonso Costa.
Minister of Foreign Affairs—Bernardino Machado.
Minister of Finance—Bazilio Telles.
Minister of Public Works—Antonio Luiz Gomes.
Minister of War—Col. Barreto.
Minister of Marine—Amaro Azovado Gomes.
Minister of the Interior—Antonio Almeida.
Civil Governor of Lisbon—Eusebio Leao.

One of the first acts of the new government was to order the expulsion of many of the religious orders in Portugal and to substitute public for clerical schools. The announced policy of the new regime was to promote decentralization in the government and colonial autonomy, to establish a system of secular education, to secure freedom of speech, to reform the finances and to separate the church and the state. It was also announced that governmental authority would be turned over to officials elected by the people within three months.

EPIDEMIC OF CHOLERA IN EUROPE.

Europe had an epidemic of cholera in 1910 more serious than any other of recent years. The disease claimed thousands of victims in Russia and many in Italy, but sporadic cases occurred in various parts of Austria-Hungary, Germany, Spain and England, while a few died on ships at sea. Several cases developed on vessels arriving in New York from Naples early in October.

Cholera has existed in Russia for two or three years, but in a mild form compared to the outbreak of 1910. Cases of the plague appeared early in the summer and as the season advanced they multiplied until in July, August and September they numbered between 150,000 and 200,000. Accurate statistics were not available for the entire empire, but such official figures as were made public showed that the mortality was very great. For example, the sanitary bureau reported that during the week of Aug. 7-13 there were 23,944 new cases and 10,723 deaths, bringing the total number of cases in Russia during the year up to that time to 112,985. The disease was then raging not only in St. Petersburg, Moscow and other large cities, but in nearly all the provinces. Sept. 26 the reports of the sanitary bureau showed a total for the season of 182,327 cases, with 83,613 deaths. With the advent of cooler weather in October the plague began to decline.

Outside of Russia the most serious development of the disease was in Naples, Italy. The first cases were reported about the middle of August in Bari and other towns in southeastern and southern Italy. The epidemic spread rapidly and soon reached Naples, though its presence there was not officially admitted until Sept. 26. By the end of September there were a dozen deaths and a score or more of new cases daily in the southern capital. Thousands of people fled from the city and it was practically isolated.

In the course of the summer cases of cholera were reported from other points in Europe as follows: Triani, Barletta, Andria, Trinitapoli, Canosa, Molfetta, Spinazzola, Margherit, Savioia, San Venerando, Corignola, Bitonto, province of Apulia, Leghorn, Turin, Rome and towns in Sicily. Italy: Spandau, Freiburg, Berlin and Danzig, Germany; Budapest, Hungary, and London, England. Except in Italy, however, the disease was promptly checked.

REVOLUTIONS IN NICARAGUA.

Jose Santos Zelaya, the despotic president of Nicaragua, resigned Dec. 16, 1909, and Dr. Jose Madriz was elected to succeed him. Zelaya fled to Mexico in January, 1910, and then went to Belgium and finally to Spain. Dr. Madriz was opposed by a large portion of the population and a revolution broke out almost immediately after he assumed office. Warfare continued for several months, the leader of the rebels, Gen. Juan J. Estrada, gradually driving the government troops from one stronghold to another, until Aug. 21, when Madriz gave up the struggle. The following day Gen. Estrada was proclaimed president of Nicaragua. Dr. Madriz' fall was due in part to his unfriendly attitude toward the United States.

CARNEGIE INSTITUTION OF WASHINGTON.

The Carnegie institution was endowed by Andrew Carnegie with $10,000,000 and incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia, Jan. 4, 1902. It was, however, deemed advisable to have it incorporated by act of congress, and this was effected May 18, 1904. Section 2 of the act specifies that the objects of the corporation shall be to encourage, in the broadest and most liberal manner, investigation, research and discovery, and the application of knowledge to the improvement of mankind. The projects considered by the institute are chiefly of three classes, namely:

First, large projects or departments of work, whose execution requires continuous research by a corps of investigators during a series of years.

Secondly, minor projects, which may be carried out by individual experts in a limited period of time.

Thirdly, research associates and assistants, aid being given to a few investigators possessing exceptional abilities and opportunities for research work.

An annual appropriation is made for the purpose of publishing the results of investigations made under the auspices of the institution, and for certain works which would not otherwise be readily printed. These publications are not distributed gratis except to a limited list of the greater libraries of the world.

Dec. 4, 1907, Andrew Carnegie added $2,000,000 to the endowment of the institution, making the total $12,000,000.

The following table shows the gross sums allotted to large projects since the organization of the institution up to 1910:

Marriages between whites and negroes are prohibited by law in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and West Virginia. Michigan specifically declares such marriages valid.

Marriages between first cousins are prohibited

In 1890 the rate was 87 per 10,000 population. The rate in 1900 per 10,000 unmarried population 15 years of age and over was 312; in 1890 it was 304.

DIVORCE RATES.

FISH FURNITURE STORE FIRE.

Twelve lives were lost in a fire in the Fish Furniture company's store, 1906-1908 Wabash avenue, Chicago, March 25, 1910. The victims, of whom ten were women and two men, were trapped on the sixth floor and eleven were burned to death. One young woman either jumped or fell, struck a canopy in front of the store and was fatally injured, dying on the way to the hospital. The disaster was caused by the explosion of a can of gasoline, from which one of the employees was engaged in filling a number of patent cigar lighters on the fourth floor. There was a fire escape on the rear of the building by which several employees escaped, but there was none in front.

EARTHQUAKE IN SOUTHERN ITALY.

The southern part of Italy and a part of Tuscany and Venetia in the north were shaken by an earthquake about 3 o'clock on the morning of June 7, 1910. Nearly 100 persons were killed and many others were severely injured, while the loss to property was estimated at several million dollars. The largest number of casualties occurred at Calitri, where forty persons were killed and more than 100 injured. Half of the houses were destroyed. Great damage was done throughout the whole of the province of Avellino.

STATISTICS OF CRIME IN THE UNITED STATES.

[From special reports by census bureau.]

June 30, 1904, there were in the United States 1,337 prisons of all kinds receiving persons sentenced for crime. The total number of inmates on the same date was 81,772, or 100.6 per 100,000 of estimated population. Distributed by sex, color, nativity and race they were as follows for the main geographical divisions:

DEATHS AND BIRTHS BY DIVISIONS OF TIME.

Assuming that the total population of the world is 1,600,000,000 and the average annual death rate 20 per 1,000 of population, the total number of deaths in a year is about 32,000,000. This is at the rate of 87,671 per day, 3,653 per hour, 61 per minute and 1 per second.

As the population of the world increases by about 7,000,000 per year, the total births must be that number in excess of the deaths, or about 39,000,000. This is at the rate of 106,849 births per day, 4,452 per hour, 74 per minute and 1.2 per second.

Assuming that the population of the United States is 87,000,000 and the death rate 16 per 1,000, the total number of deaths in a year is 1,392,000. This is at the rate of 3,814 per day, 159 per hour and 2.6 per minute. With a birth rate of 34 per 1,000, the total number of births in a year in the United States will approximate 2,955,000, or at the rate of 8,104 per day, 338 per hour and 5.6 per minute.

EARTHQUAKE IN CARTAGO, COSTA RICA.

Fifteen hundred persons were killed and many others injured by an earthquake in Cartago, Costa Rica, Wednesday, May 5, 1910. The heaviest shock occurred at 7 o'clock in the evening, and no one had time to escape into the streets. Railroad and telegraph lines were broken and the electric lights fell, leaving the city in darkness. Every house and building in the city was destroyed, including four churches and the palace of the American peace court, the gift of Andrew Carnegie. No medical aid could be obtained until the following day and great suffering was the result. It was the severest disaster of the kind in the history of Costa Rica.

LIVE STOCK OF THE WORLD (1910).

[From the Crop Reporter, Washington, D. C.]

Statistics of the world supply of live stock are incomplete; large areas of Africa are unrepresented; the number of animals in China, Persia, Afghanistan, Korea, Bolivia, Ecuador, Salvador and several less important countries is unknown; for Brazil the number of cattle alone is estimated; in general statistics of cattle, horses, sheep and swine are much more complete than those of other animals, as statements for the world. In some countries the latest available data relate to numbers ten years ago. Keeping in view these deficiencies in data, estimates of the approximate number of live stock in the world, so far as information is available, are of interest.

Sheep seem to be the most numerous of the large animals of the world, with a total of about 580,000,000 head. Australia ranks first, with about 88,000,000; Argentina second, with 67,000,000; United States third, with about 57,000,000; European Russia and Asiatic Turkey each have approximately 45,000,000; Great Britain, with 27,000,000 in 1905, has more sheep in proportion to its area than any other important nation.

The number of cattle enumerated or estimated, about 430,000,000, although smaller than that of sheep, is much more important, owing to their larger size. In total number of cattle, British India ranks first, with about 91,000,000 (including buffaloes and buffalo calves); the United States ranks second, with about 70,000,000; Russia third, with about 36,000,000; Argentina and Brazil each have about 30,000,000; Germany about 20,000,000; Austria-Hungary 18,000,000 (in 1900); France 14,000,000 and the united kingdom 12,000,000. The proportion of the total number of cattle which is beef cattle, work cattle or milch cows has not been estimated.

The United States is pre-eminent as a swine-producing nation, being credited with approximately 50,000,000 head out of a world supply of less than 150,000,000. Germany ranks second, with about 22,000,000; European Russia has about 11,000,000; France, 7,000,000; Austria had 5,000,000 in 1900 and Hungary 7,000,000 in 1895. No other country is credited with as many as 5,000,000.

Horses aggregate about 95,000,000; European Russia and the United States have almost an equal number, between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000 head; Argentina has about 8,000,000; Asiatic Russia is credited with about 7,000,000; Germany, 4,000,000; France 3,000,000, the united kingdom 2,000,000, Austria and Hungary each had about 2,000,000 in 1900 and 1895, respectively.

Of the 7,500,000 mules that are estimated in the world more than half are in the United States; no other country is credited with 1,000,000; Spain comes nearest with about 810,000 in 1907.

The number of asses in the world is estimated to be between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000; Asiatic Turkey is credited with about 2,500,000; 1,300,000 were credited to British India in 1907; 850,000 to Italy in 1905, and 770,000 to Spain in 1907.

Nearly 100,000,000 goats are estimated in the various countries of the world; by far the largest number are in British India, nearly 30,000,000; Asiatic Turkey is credited with 9,000,000, the Cape of Good Hope with nearly 9,000,000, Algeria about 4,000,000, Mexico 4,000,000 and Argentina 3,000,000 (in 1907).

About 15,000,000 buffaloes were reported in British India in 1907, over 2,500,000 in Dutch East Indies in 1905; minor countries bring the total number estimated to over 21,000,000.

The approximate number of camels in important countries, so far as estimates can be made, is: Asiatic Russia, 700,000; British India, 450,000; European Russia, 225,000; Algeria, 200,000; Tunis, 150,000; Sudan (Anglo-Egyptian, number assessed for tribute and tax in 1905), 132,000; Egypt, 40,000.

Of the 900,000 reindeer reported from various countries, 350,000 were in Russia, 230,000 were in Sweden, 140,000 in Finland (in 1906) and 110,000 in Norway (1900).

UNITED STATES PASSPORT REGULATIONS.

Passports are issued to citizens of the United States upon application to the state department in Washington. The application must be accompanied by an affidavit, attested by a notary public or other officer empowered to administer oaths, stating that the applicant is a citizen and giving the place of birth and age, and it must be accompanied by the certificate of one other citizen to whom he is personally known that the declaration made by the applicant is true. The application must also be accompanied by a description of the person, particularly as to age, height, complexion, forehead, eyes, nose, mouth, chin, hair and face.

Blank forms are furnished by the state department upon application. The fee for each passport is $1. Citizens traveling abroad may also in some cases obtain passports by applying to United States ambassadors and ministers. Where any person has made a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States and has resided in the United States for three years a passport valid for six months may be issued to him. This passport is not renewable and does not entitle the holder to the protection of this government in the country of which he was originally a citizen.

MILITARY PLOT IN SPAIN.

Eighty army officers were arrested in Madrid Jan. 14, 1910, on the charge of conspiring with the conservatives to overthrow the government with the aid of the army. The Military club, of which they were members, was closed and the prisoners were sent to various provincial fortresses to be tried by court martial. The origin of the trouble was the complaint against the system of advancement for army officers.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS AND INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.

IN THE UNITED STATES.

In his book on "Industrial Insurance in the United States," Prof. Charles E. Henderson of the University of Chicago summarizes the situation in regard to old-age pensions in this country as follows:

"A few of the trade unions have begun to establish funds for old-age retirement benefits. The fraternal societies exhibit a serious defect at this point. Under their system they can carry life insurance only to the region of old age and then the 'brother' must care for himself, a very inconsistent kind of fraternity, yet inseparable from present methods. The Mutualists of France have gone much farther in meeting this difficulty by establishing funds for old age and invalidism. Some of the railroad corporations, and even private firms, have founded funds for old-age pensions, and this movement seems to be growing in this country. Cities have pension funds for policemen, firemen and to some extent for teachers. The nation and the states have made the old age of veterans comfortable. It is perfectly clear that the common laborers of cities can never on present wages provide for old age without help of employers and the public; the outlook is simply hopeless. The income of the workmen of cities is too small and too irregular to warrant any unaided attempt to provide for the last period of life."

GOVERNMENT PENSIONS.

In the ordinary service of the United States retiring pensions are confined to federal judges and the officers of the army and navy. The former at the age of 70, after ten years' service, may retire on full pay. The maximum pay on the retired list for officers of the army and navy is 75 per cent of the active pay of their respective ranks. The compulsory age of retirement in the army is 64 years and in the navy 62. The pensions paid to survivors of the civil and other wars are for service, disability, etc., and are not based on age or poverty, though they have the general effect of old-age pensions.

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES' FUNDS.

Pension funds, authorized by legislative acts, have been established in many cities of the United States for certain classes of employes, such as policemen, firemen, teachers and public library attendants and help. These as a rule are maintained either by the retention of a certain percentage of the employes' salary or wages or by the setting aside for them of the proceeds of certain licenses and fines. From fifteen to twenty-five years of service are required, and the age of retirement, for police and firemen, is 50 years. The amount paid as a pension is usually half of the monthly or annual salary received at the time of retirement, though in some cases a maximum limit is placed.

RAILROAD PENSION SYSTEMS.

Apart from the death and temporary or permanent disability funds established by most of the railroad corporations of the United States, a number of them have organized old-age or superannuation pension systems. These are controlled entirely by the companies, the employes not contributing to them. No legal right to retention in the service or to a pension allowance is conferred. The pensions in most cases are based on age and length of service, monthly payments for life being made usually on the basis of 1 per cent of the average monthly pay for the ten years next preceding retirement for each year of service. Thus, if a man is retired after twenty years of service and his average pay for the last ten years was $100 a month, his monthly allowance will be $20. In most of the systems pensions for superannuation are granted to employes retired at 65 to 70 years of age, after from ten to twenty years of service, and for incapacitation, to employes from 60 to 69 years of age, with like service. The usual maximum age for entering the service of the railroads is 45 years. Pensioners are ordinarily allowed to engage in gainful occupations after their retirement. The following table will show the years of service required, the age of retirement and the per cent of the average monthly pay for the last ten years for each year of service allowed as a pension by certain railroad companies:

The Metropolitan Street Railway company of New York, N. Y., has a pension department to which employes receiving less than $1,200 a year in wages are admitted. Pensions are paid to all employes who have reached the age of 70, and to employes 65 years of age who have worked for the company thirty-five years and have been disabled. The pension rates are: After thirty-five years of continuous service, 40 per cent of the average wages in the ten years immediately preceding retirement; service of thirty to thirty-five years, 30 per cent; service of twenty to thirty years, 25 per cent.

LABOR UNION PENSIONS.

In 1909 four large labor organizations had superannuation benefit systems in operation and several other unions had provided for similar systems to become operative at a future date. Those already paying old-age benefits were the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, Amalgamated Society of Engineers, Granite Cutters' International association and the International Typographical union.

In the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners any ordinary member who is 50 years of age and incapable of earning the usual amount of wages, if he has been twenty-five years continuously in the society, is allowed $2.50 per week for life; any member who has been in the society continuously for eighteen years is allowed $2.45 per week for life.

In the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, a British society with branches in the United States, a member to become entitled to superannuation benefit must be 55 years of age and have been a member of the society twenty-five years. The amount of benefit is based on the class of membership as follows: Full members, highest class, forty or more years of membership, $3 per week; second class, thirty-five years of membership, $2.70 per week; third class, thirty years of membership, $2.40 per week; fourth class, twenty-five years of membership, $2.10 per week. In the machinist section the benefits range from $1.50 to $2.40 per week, according to class and service.

In the Granite Cutters' International Association of America any member reaching the age of 62 years who has been a member twenty years continuously, and in good standing during the ten years before reaching the age of 62, is entitled to a superannuation benefit of $10 per month for six months in each year thereafter, payments to begin with Nov. 1 of each year.

The International Typographical union began paying old-age pensions in August, 1908. Any member of the union 60 years of age, in good standing for twenty years, who finds it impossible to secure sustaining employment, may receive $4 per week, payable monthly. The union supports a home for aged and invalid printers in Colorado Springs, Col. To be admitted an applicant must have been a member of the union for at least five years and his application must be indorsed by the president and secretary of the subordinate union to which he belongs.

ESTABLISHMENT FUNDS.

Funds providing for old-age pensions have been instituted in a number of local industrial establishments, either by the companies or the employes. In three of the funds investigated in 1909 by the United States labor commissioner the age of eligibility to benefits is as follows: In the first, 70 years; in the second, 65 years with twenty-five years of service, and in the third, 70 years with twenty-five years of service, or, if incapacitated, 65 years with twenty-five years of service, or with fifteen years of service if holding membership in the benefit fund maintained in the establishment. The benefit payments of the funds are as follows: In the first, a lump sum not to exceed $500 from any surplus over $3,000, at the discretion of the managing board; in the second, $10 per month for life; in the third, $6 per week for life, the establishment, however, reserving the right to reduce payments under certain conditions.

The First National bank of Chicago has a bank pension fund. The age when any officer or employee may receive a pension is determined by the bank, but as a rule pensions are not granted until after fifteen years of service in the bank and the age of 60 years has been reached. Members of the fund are required to contribute 3 per cent of their salaries. The pension allowed is on the basis of one-fiftieth of the salary for each year at the age of superannuation, the maximum pensions being, however, subject to limitations.

The Western Electric company in 1906 set aside a fund of $400,090 for pensions. Employees who have reached the age of 60, and have been in the service of the company continuously for twenty years, are eligible to pensions. The rate of payment for age is conditioned upon the number of years the employee has been in the active service of the company and the amount of his average wages per year for the ten years preceding retirement. For each year of active service the annual rate is 1 per cent of the average annual pay during the ten years before retirement. The pension is for life.

The International Harvester company has a pension fund administered by a board of five members appointed by the board of directors of the company. The pension board may authorize the payment of a pension to any retired employee on the following basis:

- All employees, engaged in any capacity, are eligible to pensions.
- All male employees who shall have reached the age of 65 years, and have been twenty or more years in the service, may at their own request, or at the discretion of the pension board, be retired from active service and become eligible to a pension.
- All male employees who have been twenty or more years in the service shall be retired at the age of 70 years, unless at the discretion of the pension board some later date be fixed for such retirement. Persons occupying executive positions are exempt from the maximum age limit.

Woman employees are eligible to pensions at the age of 60 or 65 on the same conditions as man employees.

The sums which the pension board may authorize to be paid monthly to employees at the retired age limit shall be as follows: For each year of active service an allowance of 1 per cent of the average annual pay during the ten years next preceding retirement, but no pension shall exceed $100 a month, or be less than $18 a month. Pension allowances are nonassignable. Pensioners may engage in any business not prejudicial to the interests of the company. An illustration of how pensions are computed follows: If the average pay for the last ten years of active service equals $600, and if the service has been continuous for twenty-five years, the pension would be 25 per cent of $600, or $150 per year, or $12.50 per month. Since the minimum pension has been fixed at $18 per month, then to this regular percentage $5.50 would be added, making the minimum of $18.

The Carnegie foundation, established by Andrew Carnegie in 1905, provides old-age pensions for teachers in the higher institutions of learning. Length of service and disability are taken into consideration as well as age. The average allowance is about $1,500. (See "The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching" on another page in this volume.)

In 1901 Andrew Carnegie established a fund providing for accident and death benefits and pension allowances for employees of the Carnegie Steel company and its constituent companies, now included in the United States Steel corporation. Any employee who has reached the age of 60 years and has been at least fifteen years continuously in the service of the company and is incapacitated for further service, may be granted a pension by the board of trustees of the fund. Allowances are paid monthly for life on the following basis: For each year of service, 1 per cent of the average regular monthly pay received during the entire term of service.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Savings banks incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts are permitted to establish life insurance and annuity departments. These issue five general forms of policies, as follows:

1. Straight life policy, on which premiums cease at age of 75.
2. Endowment policy, maturing at age of 65.
3. Endowment policy, maturing in twenty years.
4. Insurance and annuity policy. The full amount of insurance continues to the age of 65, at which time the payment of the premium ceases, the annuity beginning at the age of 65 and continuing throughout life. The insurance continues after the annuity begins, but is reduced by the amount of annuity paid until the payments on the annuity equal the full amount of the insurance, when the insurance ceases and the annuity continues. The annuity clause of the policy provides for an annuity equal (a) to one-fifth of the amount of the insurance, or (b) to two-fifths of the amount of the insurance.

5. Old-age pension policies:

a. Pension beginning at age of 60 and payment of premium ceasing (1) with no return of premiums if death occurs before pension begins; (2) with the return of all premiums paid if death occurs before pension begins.

b. Pension beginning at age of 65 and payment of premium ceasing (1) with no return of premiums if death occurs before pension begins; (2) with the return of all premiums if death occurs before the pension begins.

The premium rates are proportionately the same on all forms of policies. The premiums vary according to ages and are paid monthly. In old-age policies they are greater for women than for men. The maximum annuity that may be taken by a person in any one bank is $200, but policies may be taken by a person in two or more banks.

Savings banks in Massachusetts have no stockholders. Net profits in the banking department are divided among the depositors and all policies issued by the insurance department participate in dividends from the profits of that department.

IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

UNITED KINGDOM.

Under the terms of the old-age pension act of Aug. 1, 1908, every person, married or single, who has attained the age of 70 years, who is and has been for twenty years a British subject resident in the united kingdom and whose yearly income does not exceed £31 10s (£153.37), is entitled to a pension. Idlers, lunatics in asylums and those who have been convicts in prison within ten years are excluded. The pension is based upon the private income of the recipient in such manner that his total income, supplemented by the pension, will range from 10 to 12 shillings ($2.40 to $3.12) or week. The law gives 5 shillings to those whose incomes are £21 (£105.27) or less per year; 4 shillings (96 cents) to those whose incomes reach £23 12s 6d (£115); 3 shillings (72 cents) to those with incomes of £26 5s (£127.52); 2 shillings (48 cents) to those with incomes of £28 17s 6d ($130.56) and 1 shilling (24 cents) to those with incomes of £31 10s (£153.37).

Local pension committees are appointed by the borough councils and county councils, and to these committees the first applications are made. They are then referred to pension officers appointed by the treasury department and if the recommendations agree the pension is issued. In cases of dispute the matter is referred to the local government board, which is the final authority.

Sept. 30, 1909, the official figures on old-age pensions in the united kingdom were:

Country.	Population.	Pensioners.	Cost.
England and Wales.....	35,756,615	421,432	$18,363,700
Scotland	4,877,618	75,134	3,335,000
Ireland	4,374,158	186,202	8,619,500
Total	45,008,391	682,768	30,318,200

British Friendly Societies.

The so-called "friendly societies" of Great Britain and Ireland are largely mutual insurance societies organized by workmen, clerks and tradesmen. Though for the most part the benefits secured through them are for illness, accident and funeral allowances, some of them provide superannuation funds and asylums for the aged. In general they tend to increase thrift and to diminish the chances of their members becoming dependent upon charity in their old age. The same is true of the postoffice and other savings banks.

There were in existence on Dec. 31, 1909, the following registered provident societies in the united kingdom:

Provident societies.	No.	Membership.	Funds.
Friendly societies.....	29,524	13,837,902	$279,504,556
Co-operative societies...	2,953	2,679,805	283,792,303
Trade unions.....	634	1,971,328	29,179,690
Workmen's compensation schemes.....	40	65,277	423,050
Friends of labor loans societies	239	32,721	1,249,868
Societies not otherwise designated	1,864	622,614	359,982,640
Total	35,254	19,209,647	954,132,107

Of railway savings banks there were nineteen registered, with a membership of 65,712 and $29,768,502 deposits. There were 222 trustee savings banks, including investments in stock and special investment accounts, with a membership of 1,785,502 and deposits amounting to $363,505,930.

Of the postoffice savings banks, including investments in stock, there were 15,239 registered, with a membership of 11,018,251 and deposits amounting to $382,185,489. Altogether there were 15,480 certificated and postoffice savings banks, with 12,869,765 depositors and $1,215,459,921 deposits.

The total number of societies and savings banks in operation in the united kingdom on Dec. 31, 1909, was 760,734, whose members and depositors numbered 32,079,112 and whose funds deposited amounted to $2,169,592,028.

GERMANY.

Workmen's insurance laws, such as the sick-benefit law and the accident-insurance law, have existed in Germany for about a quarter of a century. The first old-age pension law was passed in 1889 and was amended in 1899. The insurance of all workmen is compulsory, employer and employee being obliged to pay fixed premiums, as established by law, and the government contributing a certain amount. In 1889 the employer and employee contributed $973,300,000, the workmen $851,557,500 and the government $121,662,500; total, $1,946,550,000. In 1906 out of every 1,000 day laborers 863 were protected by sick benefit, all against accident and 859 against old age and disability.

The most extensive of the insurance laws is the invalid and old-age pension. There are thirty-one offices for managing this department, employing 2,800 clerks. In 1907, 14,300,000 persons were protected by the invalid and old-age pension, the increase since 1900 being about 10 per cent. In 1907, $41,174,000 was paid as pensions and benefits, as compared with $63,379,400 for sickness and $35,771,400 for accidents. Since 1900 the indemnities have almost doubled. The premiums of the workmen amounted to about $19,516,000, or somewhat more than one-half of the indemnities. The general administration cost about $2,330,000, or approximately $1.67 per insured person. The fund increased from $204,110,000 in 1900 to $334,152,000 in 1909, which is about $23.80 per capita insured. This great sum of money is placed out, principally in loans to villages and private persons, in supporting the credit of agricultural districts, and in erecting good, sanitary workmen's dwellings, bathhouses, sanitariums and similar institutions. The mean rate of interest on the money so invested has varied since 1900 from 3.53 to 3.55 per cent. At the beginning of 1909 the statistics showed that 868,086 invalid, 108,637 old-age and 19,087 sick pensions would have to be paid during that year. Since 1907 the number of invalid pensions has risen from about 305,000 to 868,086, but, owing to the efficacy of this department of insurance, the number of the old-age pension fund has gradually diminished, the number of old-age pensions having decreased from 203,955 in 1896 to 108,637 in 1909.

The old-age pension is given on the completion of the 70th year of the workman's age after contributions have been paid for 1,200 weeks. The contributions are paid half by the workmen and half by the employers, while the government grants a subsidy of $12.50 annually toward each pension. The weekly contribution ranges from 14 pfennig (3½ cents) to 36 pfennig (9 cents) a week. The workmen are divided into five classes according to the amount of wages received, those receiving the lowest wages being in class 1 and those getting the highest in class 5. The annual pension runs from $40 in class 1 to $70 in class 5.

FRANCE.

The French senate, March 22, 1910, passed the workmen's pension bill, which had been before the chamber for more than four years and had been agreed to by the deputies. The law affects about 17,000,000 persons, including all workers, railroad employees, miners and seamen for whom pensions had previously been arranged. Practically the new measure extended the old-age pension system, applicable to state employees, to all the laborers of France. For the creation of the pension fund contributions from three sources are provided.

1. Obligatory yearly contributions from the wage earner amounting to $1.80 for men, $1.20 for women and 90 cents for minors.

2. The contribution of the employer, which equals that of the wage earner.

3. The contribution of the state.

Experts differ as to what the state's contribution will be, but the generally accepted figure is $36,000,000 for the first year, the amount decreasing until the scheme works normally, when it will be about $25,000,000.

The beneficiaries are to draw their pensions at the age of 65, or after thirty years of service, with certain diminutions for advanced enjoyment. The amount of the pension is calculated on the basis of the total sum contributed up to the 65th year of the pensioner's life. To this the state adds an annuity of $12, increasing the pension for the longest term contemplated to $30.80 per annum.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

Under an act passed in 1908 invalid and old-age pensions are paid at such rates as the commissioner of pensions deems sufficient, but the amount must not exceed $130 a year, nor must the recipient's income, including the pension, amount to more than $260 a year. Old-age pensions are paid to persons who are at least 65 years of age (60 for women) and have lived in Australia twenty-five years or more. Invalid pensions are granted to persons who have lived in Australia at least five years, have become incapacitated and are without sufficient means of support. The labor party now in power proposes to lower the age of female pensioners to 55 years. The present annual expenditure on old-age pensions is about $7,500,000.

Prior to the federal act the various states of the commonwealth had old-age pensions of their own. In New South Wales a pension of $130 a year was granted to every person more than 65 years of age, or more than 60 if incapacitated from earning a living by injury or infirmity. The amount of the pension was diminished by $1 for every $5 of income from other sources and by $1 for every $75 of property possessed. In 1906-1907 the pensioners received $2,222,000.

In Victoria pensions were granted to persons more than 65 years of age or under that age if incapacitated from work by an unhealthy or hazardous occupation. The amount was fixed by the state treasurer, the maximum being $2.50 a week. In 1906-1907 the pensions amounted to $935,600. In Victoria the law of 1900 gave $1.50 a week to pensioners more than 65 years old.

NEW ZEALAND.

The law of 1893, amended in 1905 and consolidated in 1908, gives a pension of $130 a year to every needy and worthy applicant over 65 years of age, who is not an alien or an Asiatic. The pensioners in 1909 numbered 14,356 and the total yearly payment was $1,766,700. The average pension was $122.75. Pensions are paid out of state funds.

SPAIN.

In 1909 Spain inaugurated a national insurance scheme for old-age pensions based on the Belgian system. It provides for a deposit of 5 centimes (less than one cent) daily from the age of 10 to 65 years to produce after maturity a guaranteed pension of 1 peseta (20 cents) daily, increased deposits furnishing increased pensions. Pensioners are to share in any surplus due to decreased mortality or increased profits from investments. In the event of death the sums paid in are to be refunded to the heirs. The state pays all expenses of administration. It is estimated that in ten years there will be 1,000,000 members with a distribution of $300,000 annually.

DENMARK.

Pensions are paid to men and women more than 60 years of age, who have lived in Denmark five years or more, are of good character and are in need of assistance. This may be in cash or residence in hospital, but it must be sufficient for maintenance and for attendance in case of illness. The pension is paid by the district in which the recipient lives, half of it being refunded by the state. In the year ending March 31, 1908, 71,135 persons were relieved at a cost of $2,446,000. Persons who receive private assistance amounting to $27 a year or more are not allowed pensions.

BELGIUM.

Belgium has a voluntary pension or insurance system open to all citizens. The premiums paid by the insured range from $19.20 to $96 a year and the pensions begin at the 55th to the 65th year, the amount varying with the age at the first payment, but going up to $240 a year. Invalid pensions are paid to those who become incapacitated before the pension age arrives. The premiums are paid into a state fund, and a state subsidy of one-third of the pension is added. The fund in 1906 paid 8,277 pensions, the average of each pension being $39.00.

ITALY.

Invalid and old-age pensions in Italy are voluntary, but are regulated by law. It is virtually a workmen's insurance system under state control. Premiums of $1.20 to $19.20 a year are paid by the insured, the state adding a subsidy of $2.40 or more to each pension. Old-age pensions are given to those workers over 60 years of age who have paid premiums twenty-five years at a minimum rate of $24 a year.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

Austria has an obligatory old-age pension law for miners, but for no other class of workers. Half of the premiums are paid by the employees and half by the employers. About 150,000 men are affected by the law. Hungary has a similar law applicable to about 100,000 miners. The invalid pensions range from $25 to $60 a year.

DEATH OF MARK TWAIN.

Samuel Langhorne Clemens, widely known as "Mark Twain," author of "Innocents Abroad," "Tom Sawyer," "Huckleberry Finn" and many other popular stories of a humorous character, died at "Stormfield," his home, in Redding, Conn., Thursday, April 21, 1910. The immediate cause of his death was angina pectoris, but his health had been greatly affected by the passing away of his invalid daughter, Jean, and of his friends, H. H. Rogers, W. M. Laffan and R. W. Gilder. He spent a part of the winter in Bermuda, but returned home April 14 in a weakened condition. The funeral services were held in the Brick Presbyterian church in New York, N. Y., April 23, the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke making the address. The interment was at Elmira, N. Y., where Mrs. Clemens and daughters, Susan and Jean, and infant son, Langhorne, are also buried. Mr. Clemens left a fortune, estimated at $1,000,000, to his only surviving child, Mrs. Ossip Gabrilowitsch. The author was 74 years old at the time of his death.

BIRD RESERVATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES.

For the purpose of preserving the native wild birds of the country from destruction, the United States in 1902 inaugurated the plan of setting aside regions that contain important colonies of breeding birds as bird reservations or "refuges." The first reserve created was that including Pelican island, Florida, containing a colony of brown pelicans. Since then many other reserves have been established by executive order in various parts of the union. The localities set aside are under the supervision of the secretary of agriculture and of wardens appointed by him, one warden usually caring for all the reservations within a state. Under a federal law, approved June 28, 1906, it is unlawful for any person to hunt, trap, capture, willfully disturb or kill any bird of any kind or take the eggs of such birds on any lands of the United States which have been set apart or reserved as breeding grounds for birds by any law, proclamation or executive order, except under such rules as the secretary of agriculture may prescribe. Violations of the law are punishable by fines up to $500, or imprisonment for six months, or both. Following is a list of the existing bird reserves in the order of their establishment:

ARCTIC AND ANTARCTIC EXPLORATION.

The controversy which arose in the fall of 1909 as to whom should be given the credit of having first reached the north pole, Commander Robert E. Peary or Dr. Frederick A. Cook, was definitely settled in 1910 in favor of the former. Late in December, 1909, the University of Copenhagen, to which Dr. Cook, through his agents, had submitted some documents relating to his alleged discovery of the north pole, announced the following formal verdict:

"The documents handed the university for examination do not contain observations and information which can be regarded as proof that Dr. Cook reached the north pole on his recent expedition."

Even before this verdict was made public Dr. Cook had mysteriously disappeared, much to the disappointment and chagrin of many persons who still had faith in his integrity. As week after week and month after month elapsed without word from him the conviction became settled that he had attempted to carry out a colossal fraud on the public, and, failing did not have the courage to face the consequences. His presence in Europe and in Chile, South America, was reported on apparently good authority in January and February, 1910, and late in the summer it was rumored that he had secured a steamer and departed for North Greenland to secure the scientific instruments and notebooks which he claimed to have left there on his return from the pole.

In the meantime Commander Peary, who had made enemies by his denunciation of Dr. Cook's fraudulent claims, was restored to public favor and became the recipient of many honors from scientific and other bodies. As noted in the last issue of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book, the National Geographic Society of America conferred on him a special gold medal for having "reached the north pole, the goal sought for centuries." Jan. 28, 1910, the Geographic society of Chicago gave a banquet in his honor and presented him with the Helen Culver medal. Feb. 14 the Italian Geographical society awarded Commander Peary the King Humbert gold medal, and May 4, before a great assembly in Albert hall, London, the Royal Geographic society presented him with the special gold medal of the organization and welcomed him as "the first and only human being who ever led a party of his fellow creatures to a pole of the earth." Similar honors were conferred upon the explorer by other societies.

In the United States senate, Feb. 9, a bill was unanimously passed adding Peary's name to the list of rear-admirals in the navy and providing for his immediate retirement with the highest pay received by one of the rank. In the house committee on naval affairs the proposition was, however, voted down and no further action was taken.

Commander Peary offered a purse of $10,000 to pay part of the expenses of an American exploring expedition to the antarctic regions under the auspices of the National Geographic society, and subscriptions were made by many members of that organization. It was proposed to use the Roosevelt steamer and the Peary equipment in the venture, which, however, was finally abandoned.

AMUNDSEN EXPLORATION.

Capt. Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the north-west passage, left Norway in August, 1910, on the Arctic steamer Fram for oceanographic work on the Atlantic coast of America. His original plan was to proceed to San Francisco in 1911, take on a new crew and outfit and continue on to the Arctic ocean via Bering strait. This programme was later extended so as to include an attempt to reach the south pole and to do general exploration work in the Antarctic regions, as he felt that popular interest in the northern regions had been diminished by Commander Peary's discovery of the north pole. However, he did not expect to give up his trip to the north, but to make it about a year later than originally intended. His exact plans for the southward trip were not made public, beyond the fact that his party was to be divided and that only a few would undertake the polar journey.

THE CHARCOT EXPEDITION.

The French antarctic expedition headed by Dr. Jean M. Charcot, which sailed from Havre Aug. 15, 1908, and from Punta Arenas, Chile, Dec. 10, the same year, returned early in February, 1910. The party, which used the steamer Pourquoi Pas, reached 70 degrees south, longitude 128 degrees west. It made no attempt to reach the pole, but contented itself with exploring the region in the vicinity of Adelaide island and Alexander land directly south from Punta Arenas. A hydrographic chart of the eastern side of Adelaide island was made and it was found that the island was seventy miles long instead of only seven, as had been reported. Much new land was discovered. The Pourquoi Pas had many narrow escapes from being crushed in the ice.

BRITISH ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION.

A new British antarctic expedition under command of Capt. R. F. Scott left Cardiff on the steamship Terra Nova for the south polar regions June 15, 1910. The plan, as outlined by Capt. Scott, was to take on petrol for motor sledges, forage for ponies, frozen mutton, motor sledges, twenty ponies and thirty dogs at Lyttelton, New Zealand, and to reach McMurdo sound, South Victoria land, about the end of December. Here a hut, provisions and equipment for a western party were to be landed. This party will include twenty-two to twenty-five persons, who will start south at the end of January, 1911, to lay depots. At the same time the Terra Nova will sail east to land the eastern party on King Edward VII. land. Six or seven men will probably be left here to explore this unknown territory. In the spring the steamer will return to New Zealand. After the southern depots have been laid, Capt. Scott will start, probably in October, 1911, toward the south pole, which he hopes to reach in December. Lieut. E. R. G. B. Evans, R. N., will be second in command and Lieut. Victor Campbell will be in charge of the eastern party. Dr. E. A. Wilson, zoologist and artist, will be in charge of the scientific staff. Others members of the expedition are F. Griffith Taylor and W. H. Thompson, geologists; E. W. Neilson and D. G. Lillie, biologists; Dr. G. C. Simpson, meteorologist; C. S. Wright, chemist; Lieut. H. H. Penckell and Lieut. H. K. Bowes, surveyors; Drs. G. M. Levick and E. L. Atkinson, surgeons. The methods of travel will be practically the same as those adopted by Lieut. Ernest H. Shackleton, when he reached latitude 88 degrees 23 minutes south in 1908-1909.

OTHER ANTARCTIC EXPEDITIONS.

Exploring expeditions to the antarctic regions were planned in 1910 by Lieut. Shirase of the Japanese army, who proposed to make his base of operations at King Edward VII. land and by Lieut. Filchner of Germany, whose plan was to start from a base in the Weddell sea on the side of the antarctic area opposite to that which has been the scene of British operations.

WEATHER FORECASTS AND SIGNALS.

The operations of the weather bureau of the department of agriculture are based on observations of the weather taken at about 200 observatories throughout the United States at the same moment of time and telegraphed daily to Washington, D. C., and to other important cities. These observations, comprising barometric pressure, temperature, precipitation, winds and clouds, are entered upon outline charts of the United States by means of symbols, forming the "daily weather map" from which the forecasts are made. These forecasts are issued every day for every state in the union, and whenever necessary special warnings are sent out of storms, frosts, cold waves, heavy snows and floods. In addition to the main office in Washington, there are subordinate forecast centers in Chicago, New Orleans, Denver, San Francisco and Portland, Ore. Weather forecasts for a week in advance are now sent out from Washington and published each Monday.

The forecasts are first telegraphed to about 2,300 principal distributing points, whence they are further disseminated by telegraph, telephone and through the mail by means of forecast cards, rural free-delivery slips and newspapers. The number of postoffices or addresses receiving the forecasts by weather maps and cards in 1908 was 76,154, and by rural free-delivery slips, 58,008. It is estimated that the total number of persons in the United States to whom the weather forecasts are available is more than 4,000,000.

The pennant above the flag indicates that the wind is expected to blow from the northerly quadrants; below, from southerly quadrants.

By night a red light indicates easterly winds and a white light above a red light westerly winds.

Two red flags, with black centers, displayed one above the other, indicate the expected approach of tropical hurricanes, and also of those extremely severe and dangerous storms which occasionally move across the lakes and northern Atlantic coast. Hurricane warnings are not displayed at night.

THE PAN-AMERICAN UNION.

The Pan-American union was established upon the recommendation of the first international American conference in 1890 for the purpose of maintaining closer relations between the republics of the western hemisphere. Its duties have been broadened since then and it is now a sort of clearing house of information concerning the nations of North, South and Central America. It publishes a monthly bulletin in which are given the latest official data concerning the resources, commerce and other features of the republics. The officers of the union occupy a fine building at the corner of 17th street and Potomac park in Washington, D. C. The structure, which was built with money given by Andrew Carnegie, was dedicated April 26, 1910.

Following are the officers:

Director-General—John Barrett.
 Assistant Director—Francisco J. Yanes.
 Chief Statistician—William C. Wells.
 Chief Clerk—Franklin Adams.
 Chief Translator—Emilio M. Amores.
 Librarian—Charles E. Babcock.

Ohm—Unit of resistance; represents resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury at the temperature of ice, 14.5421 grams in mass, of a cross-sectional area of 1.00003 square millimeters and of the length of 106.3 centimeters.

Ampere—Unit of current; decomposes .0009324 of a gram of water in one second or deposits silver at the rate of .001118 of a gram per second, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water.

Volt—Unit of electro motive force; one volt equals one ampere of current passing through a substance having one ohm of resistance.

Coulomb—Unit of quantity; amount of electricity transferred by a current of one ampere in one second.

Farad—Unit of capacity; capacity of a condenser charged to a potential of one volt by one coulomb. A microfarad is one-millionth of a farad.

Joule—Unit of work; equivalent to energy expended in one second by one ampere current in one ohm resistance.

THERMOMETERS COMPARED.

There are three kinds of thermometers, with varying scales, in general use throughout the world—the Fahrenheit, Reaumur and centigrade. The freezing and boiling points on their scales compare as follows:

Thermometer.	Freezing pt.	Boiling pt.
Fahrenheit	32 degrees	212 degrees
Reaumur	zero	80 degrees
Centigrade	zero	100 degrees

The degrees on one scale are reduced to their equivalents on another by these formulas:

Fahrenheit to Reaumur—Subtract 32, multiply by four-ninths.

Fahrenheit to Centigrade—Subtract 32, multiply by five-ninths.

Reaumur to Fahrenheit—Multiply by nine-fourths, add 32.

Reaumur to Centigrade—Multiply by five-fourths.

Centigrade to Fahrenheit—Multiply by nine-fifths, add 32.

Centigrade to Reaumur—Multiply by four-fifths.

SIMPLE INTEREST TABLE.

NOTE—To find the amount of interest at $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on any given sum, divide the amount given for the same sum in the table at 5 per cent by 2; at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent divide the amount at 7 per cent by 2, etc.

FEDERAL CENSUS OF RELIGIOUS BODIES (1906).

There were in the United States in 1906, the period of the fifth United States census of the religious bodies in this country, according to census bulletin No. 103, issued in September, 1909, 186 religious denominations, 212,230 local religious organizations, 32,936,445 church members and $1,257,575,867 invested in church edifices.

MEMBERSHIP BY SEX.

The census of 1906 collected for the first time statistics of the membership by sex. Of the total number of members returned by sex, 43.1 per cent were male and 56.9 per cent female. For the protestant bodies as a whole the difference was greater, 39.3 per cent being male and 60.7 per cent female. For the Roman catholic church the membership was nearly equally divided between the sexes, 49.3 per cent being male and 50.7 per cent female. This is true also for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, which reports 48.6 per cent male. The largest percentage of males shown for any denomination was that for the Greek Orthodox church, 93.9, which is due to the fact that practically all the Greek immigrants have been males. The Lutheran bodies showed 46.1 per cent males; Disciples, 40 per cent; Methodist and Baptist bodies, 38.5 per cent each; Presbyterian bodies, 37.9 per cent, and Protestant Episcopal church, 35.5 per cent. The denominations showing the smallest percentage of males were the Christian Scientists, 27.6, and the Shakers, 21.3.

The total value of church property reported in 1906 for all denominations was $1,257,575,867, of which $395,942,578 was reported for protestant bodies, $292,638,787 for the Roman catholic church and $28,994,502 for all the remaining bodies. The property includes the buildings owned and used for worship by the organizations reporting, together with the value of their sites and of their furniture, organs, bells, etc. It does not include the value of rented buildings or halls, nor of parsonages, parochial school buildings, theological seminaries, monasteries, convents or the like. The statistics, it may be added, are not complete, as some of the bodies were only partially represented. For example, for the Jewish congregations only 747 organizations, or considerably less than one-half the entire number, reported the value of church property owned by them, and, similarly, for the Church of Christ, Scientist, only 401 organizations, or not much more than three-fifths of the entire number, made a report. For the Roman catholic church only a little more than four-fifths of the total number of organizations made any report of property owned, while the eastern orthodox churches as a whole show a report for only about one-fifth of all their organizations.

The total value of the parsonages of 54,214 organizations reporting in 1906 was $143,495,353.

The Order of the Cincinnati was organized by American and French officers who served in the war of the revolution, for the purpose of perpetuating the remembrance of that event and keeping up the friendships then formed. Membership goes to the eldest male descendant, if worthy; in case there is no direct male descendant, then to male descendants through intervening female descendants. The present membership is about 1,000. George Washington was the first president-general until his decease, and Alexander Hamilton the second.

It stands for the needed and honorable principle of national defense against foreign aggression. The principal feature of the order is the perpetuating of the names, as well as the services, of commissioned officers who served in either the war of the revolution, the war with Tripoli, the war of 1812, the Mexican war or the war with Spain and all future campaigns, recognized by the United States government as war with foreign powers. Veteran companionship is conferred upon such officers and hereditary companionship upon their direct lineal descendants in the male line.

DESTRUCTIVE FOREST FIRES IN 1910.

Forest fires involving the loss of many lives and the destruction of much property occurred in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington, Manitoba and British Columbia in 1910. As early as May 11 fires in northern Wisconsin and Minnesota destroyed thousands of acres of standing timber. They continued through June and July and many towns had narrow escapes from being wiped out. The village of Helmenan, Wis., was the only one, however, that met that fate. In British Columbia the aggregate loss from forest fires in July was not less than $2,000,000.

In the second and third weeks of August great forest fires raged in northern Idaho, western Montana and eastern Oregon and Washington. Many forest rangers, settlers and villagers were trapped by the flames and perished, but the exact number will probably never be known. According to figures compiled in Spokane, Wash., Aug. 25, the victims then numbered 203. They were distributed as follows: United States fire fighters in and near Idaho, 86; Montana, deaths, 13; at Newport, Wash., 3; at Wallace, Idaho, 4; near Avery, Idaho, settlers, 47; at Mullen, Idaho, 2; at Spokane, Wash., 1; on Big Creek, Idaho, 47. No attempt was made to estimate the financial loss, but it certainly amounted to many millions of dollars in timber alone.

In the Rainy river district, on both sides of the boundary line between Minnesota and Manitoba, forest fires devastated a large district during the first week in October. The flames were fanned by a gale and probably about 100 farmers and villagers were burned to death, while many more were made totally destitute. The villages of Beaudette and Spooner and several large sawmills were burned. Millions of dollars' worth of timber was destroyed.

JOHNSON-JEFFRIES FIGHT IN RENO, NEV.

The most important pugilistic event of recent years was the contest in Reno, Nev., July 4, 1910, between James J. Jeffries and Jack Johnson (colored) for the heavy-weight championship of the world. Johnson proved an easy winner in fifteen rounds, the former champion, after six years' absence from the ring, failing to come back to his old form. The fight was originally planned for San Francisco, but Gov. J. N. Gillett forbade it and Reno was selected. The contest was for a purse of $120,000, of which the winner received 60 per cent and the loser 40 per cent. The paid admissions to the fight were 15,760 and the total attendance 18,020. Tickets were sold at from $10 to $50 each, making the total gate receipts $770,775. Including profits from moving pictures, Johnson and Jeffries made more than $100,000 each out of the fight, while the promoters, Tex Rickard and Jack Gleason, made about the same amount.

THE AMERICA'S CUP.

RECORD OF RACES TO DATE.

1851—Aug. 22. In this, the year of the great exhibition in London, the Royal Yacht Club of England offered a cup to the winner of a yacht race around the Isle of Wight. The course was 60 miles in length and was won by the schooner-yacht America, designed by George Steers for John C. Stevens of the New York Yacht club. The America was 94 feet over all, 88 feet on the water line, 22½ feet beam and 11½ feet draft. There was no time allowance and the competing yachts ranged in size from a three-masted 392-ton schooner, the Brilliant, to the 47-ton cutter, the Aurora, which came in second in the race. The time of the America was 10 hours and 34 minutes; that of the Aurora was 24 minutes slower. The cup after that became known as the America's cup and has now been successfully defended for fifty-eight years.

RACE TO MACKINAC ISLAND.

The Chicago Yacht club's seventh annual race from Chicago to Mackinac Island was sailed July 23-24, 1910. William Hale Thompson's Valmore, with a time allowance of 2:36:34, was the winner, making the distance of 331 miles in 31:24:06—a race record for the course. The old record was 37:54:00, made by Vencedor in 1904. The Amorita, owned by Commodore W. L. Baum, was second in 32:11:10. There were eleven starters. Winners of the event to date:

1904—Vencedor.	1908—Valmore.
1905—Mistral.	1909—Valmore.
1906—Vanadis.	1910—Valmore.

SEAWANHAKA CUP.

The yacht Massachusetts retained the Seawanbaka cup by defeating the Canadian challenger, St. Lawrence, in a series of three races sailed July 26, 27 and 28 over a twelve-mile course off Manchester, Mass. The victory was decisive, the American yacht easily winning each of the three contests.

NEW YORK-BERMUDA RACE.

Harold S. Vanderbilt's Vagrant defeated Demarest Lloyd's Shlyessa in a race of 670 nautical miles from New York to Bermuda, starting at 4:45 p. m., July 9. Vagrant finished at 11 a. m., July 13, and the Shlyessa, which had a time allowance of 1:30, at 1 p. m. the same day.

SONDER YACHT RACING.

The President Taft cup, the principal trophy in the international sonder yacht contest between America and Spain at Marblehead, Mass., Aug. 17-20, 1910, was won by the American boat Harpoon in easy style. It finished first in the four races, though voluntarily disqualified in one of them for a foul. Each country was represented by three boats. Those from Spain were last in each race. The Draper cup, contested for at the same place, Aug. 22, was won by the American boat Beaver. The Spanish boats, Chonta and Pampoose, were far astray when the American boats, Beaver and Cima, crossed the line.

THE EMPEROR'S CUP.

The first international ocean yacht race for a cup offered by the emperor of Germany was sailed in 1905. The course was from Sandy Hook, N. J., to the Lizard, England, a distance of approximately 3,000 miles. The Atlantic, which was sailed by Capt. Charles Barr, won the race, arriving at the Lizard at 9:16 p. m., May 29, and beating the best previous record, made by the Endymion, by one day and sixteen and one-half hours. The actual elapsed time was twelve days and four hours, and the best day's run was 341 miles. The Hamburg came in second May 30 and the Valhalla third May 31.

MOTORING.

GENERAL REVIEW.

Many chapters were added to motoring history in 1910, with the United States the center of activity. The season was most remarkable for the great speed made by Barney Oldfield at Daytona, Fla., where the driver of the Benz attained the greatest speed man ever traveled at—a mile at a pace equal to 131.28 miles an hour. The transcontinental record from New York to San Francisco was smashed, a four-cylinder Reo making the trip across in ten days eighteen hours and twelve minutes. The twenty-four hour circular track record also was beaten, a Stearns covering 1,253 miles in the journey twice around the clock on the Brighton Beach track in New York city. The Glidden trophy, hung up in the national reliability run, was won by a Chalmers, driven by Bill Bolger, while the Chicago trophy, given by the Chicago Motor club to the winner of the roadster division of the same tour, was captured by C. H. Van Dervoort in a Moline.

Chicago again tried the road racing game, the national stock chassis road races being run at Elgin, Ill., by the Chicago Motor club, with Mulford in a Lozier winner of the Elgin national cup, Livingston in a National winner of the Illinois trophy, Buck in a Marmon winner of the Kane County trophy and Hearne in a Benz winner of the Fox River cup. The Vanderbilt was remarkable from the fact that the same man who won it in 1909 "came back" and won the 1910 race—Grant in the same six-cylinder Alco he piloted in 1909. Gelaw in a Falar and Emile in a Cole won the Wheatley Hills and the Massapequa trophies, respectively, the two minor events run in connection with the Vanderbilt.

The Fairmount park road race went to Len Zengel in a Chadwick, the finish being remarkable because Zengel only beat Mulford in the Lozier by less than six seconds, the closest road race in the history of the sport. There were so many accidents in connection with the Vanderbilt that the American Grand Prix, which was scheduled for the Long Island motor parkway on Oct. 15, was transferred to Savannah, Ga., for Nov. 12.

Circular track racing was remarkable because of the fight for the mile record, which finally went to Ralph De Palma in the Fiat, who did :48.92 at Syracuse, N. Y. On the speedway the competition was keen. The $10,000 Schebler trophy run at Indianapolis was won by Ray Harroun of Chicago in a Marmon, while the Cobe cup, raced for on the road in 1909, was won as a speedway race by Joe Dawson in a Marmon. The fastest speedway mile was :35.63, made at Indianapolis by Oldfield in a Benz.

VANDERBILT CUP RACE.

The conditions of the Vanderbilt cup race in 1909 were changed. Racing cars were barred and the event was open only to stock cars up to 600 cubic inches piston displacement. This race was run Oct. 30 over the Long Island motor parkway course. It was won by Harry F. Grant in a sixty-horse-power Alco car in 4:25.42, or an average speed for the 278.08 miles of 62.85 miles an hour. In 1910 Grant, in the Alco, again won. Conditions again were changed and the race was open to cars under 600 cubic inches piston displacement. It was finally a free-for-all, although the first five to finish were stock cars.

FOREIGN ROAD RACES.

No longer do the foreigners support road racing on the gigantic scale of former years. Only two or three minor events were run in 1910, the contesting machines being mostly small cars. The James Gordon Bennett, the French Grand Prix, the Florio cup, the Emperor's cup—they're all memories of the days when France almost reigned supreme in the speed world. Those classics are only history now and the records show the following winners of the two most important, the Bennett and the Grand Prix:

THE GLIDDEN TOUR.

The 1910 Glidden tour started from Cincinnati, O., and passed through thirteen states, ending in Chicago, a distance of 2,850 miles. Twenty-six cars started and eleven were running as contestants at the finish. The referee's decision gave the Glidden trophy to the Premier six, driven by Ray McNamara, but the Premier was protested by the Chalmers company, which claimed it did not come fully up to stock-car specifications. The A. A. A. contest board reversed this decision and awarded the trophy to the Chalmers No. 5, driven by Bill Bolger. The Premier company carried the matter to the New York state courts, securing a temporary injunction restraining the A. A. A. from awarding the Glidden trophy to the Chalmers. This injunction later was dissolved by the courts. The contest for the Chicago trophy, awarded by the Chicago Motor club, for the roadster with the best score in the Glidden tour, was won by C. H. Van Dervoort, in a Moline.

ONE-MILE CIRCULAR-TRACK RECORD.

Twice in 1907 was the one-mile record on a circular track beaten. The record was :53, held by Barney Oldfield in a Peerless Green Dragon. Walter Christie in a front-drive racer of his own design cut this to :52 at Minneapolis Sept. 7 and Oct. 17 this was reduced to :51% by Lewis Straug, driving the Christie, at Birmingham, Ala. The fastest track mile is :48½, made at Morris Park, New York, in 1905, by Webb Jay in a White steamer. This mark was not accepted because there is only one turn in the track. In 1903 a successful attack was made upon Strang's record, Ralph De Palma, in a Fiat, reducing it to :51 at Minneapolis on Labor day. At Minneapolis, Sept. 11, 1909, De Palma still further reduced the record, doing :50½ in his Fiat Cyclone. Several times in 1910 the record was beaten and the end of the season found it held by De Palma at :48.92, made at Syracuse, N. Y.

TWENTY-FOUR-HOUR RECORDS.

The world's record for twenty-four hours is 1,581 miles 1,310 yards, an average pace of 65.9 miles an hour, made June 28-29, 1907, by S. F. Edge in a six-cylinder Napier on the three and one-quarter mile cement track at Weybridge, England.

The circular-track twenty-four-hour record was raised to 1,253 miles by Patschke and Poole in a Stearns at Brighton Beach track, New York, Aug. 19-20, 1910. The former record was 1,196 miles, made by Patschke and Mulford, in a Lozier, in 1909.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RECORD.

A record of 10 days 18 hours 12 minutes from New York to San Francisco was made Aug. 8-13, 1910, by L. L. Whitman, driving a four-cylinder Reo, the fastest trip ever made across the continent in a motor car. The record from San Francisco to New York is 15 days 12 hours, made in a Franklin in 1906 by Whitman.

CHICAGO-NEW YORK RECORD.

The record by automobile between Chicago and New York is 39:53:00. It was made by a Franklin twenty-eight horse-power runabout Aug. 21-22, 1907. The route followed was via Elkhart, Cleveland, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Newburgh and along the east side of the Hudson to New York. The distance was 1,050 miles. The previous record was 56:58:00, also made by a Franklin, a six-cylinder car.

CHICAGO COMPETITIONS.

Chicago again was prominent in the promotion of events of national importance. Of course, the greatest of these were the national stock chassis road races at Elgin, run by the Chicago Motor club, which made heroes out of Mulford, Livingstone, Buck and Icarne. The Chicago Motor club also promoted an economy test to Lake Geneva and return earlier in the year, which was won by the Cole. The star of the fifth annual hill climb at Algonquin, Ill., was Arthur W. Greiner of Chicago, who won the Algonquin cup, driving a National. The Chicago Motor club wound up its year with its annual 1,000-mile reliability in November.

The Chicago Automobile club confined its efforts to the annual battle with the Chicago Athletic association. There were two interclub reliability team matches, both won by the Cherry Circle. ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE MAYOR GAYNOR.

Mayor William J. Gaynor of New York was shot and seriously wounded on the morning of Aug. 9, 1910, just after he had boarded the Kaiser Wilhelm steamship to sail for Europe. His assailant was James J. Gallagher, a dismissed city dock watchman. Approaching the mayor, who was standing talking with a group of friends, Gallagher drew a revolver and fired three shots at the executive. Only one took effect, the bullet entering at the back of the neck and lodging in the vault of the pharynx. The mayor was hurried to a hospital, where for several days his condition was regarded as extremely critical. He finally recovered, however, and left the hospital in September. Gallagher, who claimed that Judge Gaynor had "taken away his bread and butter," was arrested immediately after the shooting.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

The library of congress was established in 1800 in the city of Washington, D. C. It was burned in 1814 and in 1851 lost 35,000 volumes by fire. The present library building, which cost $6,347,000, was opened to the public in November, 1897. It is located a short distance east of the capitol and is the largest and finest building of its kind in the world.

The corner stone of the original capitol building was laid by President Washington Sept. 18, 1793. The north wing was finished in 1810 and the south wing, in 1811, a wooden passageway connecting them. The original designs of the structure were made by Dr. William Thornton. The two wings were burned by the British in 1814, but were immediately restored. In 1827 the original building

OCCURRENCES DURING PRINTING.

The following events occurred after many of the forms of the present edition of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book had gone to press:

Orinoco Decision—The Hague arbitration court, Oct. 25, 1910, decided in favor of the Orinoco Steamship company in its claims for damages against Venezuela for violation of a contract. The company was awarded $46,867, with 3 per cent interest since June 16, 1903, and $7,000 costs.

Arbitration for America—Senator Elihu Root of New York was appointed permanent arbitrator representing America at The Hague, Dec. 3, 1910, succeeding Chief Justice Fuller, deceased.

Solicitor-General—Frederick W. Lehmann of St. Louis was appointed solicitor-general of the United States Dec. 3, 1910, succeeding Lloyd W. Bowers, deceased.

Japanese Antarctic Expedition—The Japanese antarctic expedition under Lieut. Shirase left Yokohama Nov. 28, 1910, on the 150-ton schooner Kainan Maru.

British Elections—The British parliament was dissolved Nov. 28 and new elections began at once.

Up to Dec. 15 the liberal government coalition had elected 331 members and the unionist opposition 251. The dissolution was caused by the failure of the parliamentary leaders to agree upon a compromise between the house of lords and the house of commons with respect to the veto power of the former.

Campaign Costs—The republican congressional campaign committee spent $74,373 and the democratic committee $27,771 in the congressional campaign of 1910. Reports were filed by both committees Dec. 8 in accordance with the campaign fund publicity law.

STOCKYARDS FIRE CALAMITY.

Twenty-four men were crushed to death under a falling wall at a fire in Morris & Co.'s meat storage house in the Union stockyards, Chicago, early on the morning of Dec. 22, 1910. The victims included Fire Marshal James Horan, Second Assistant Fire Marshal William J. Burroughs, twenty other city firemen, a private foreman and a railway clerk. The disaster was caused by an explosion due to hot air expansion. The money loss was $750,000.

CHURCH AND STATE IN SPAIN.

May 31, 1910, the government of Spain issued an imperial decree that all religious orders not authorized by the concordat between Spain and the Vatican must be enrolled under the associations law of 1887 or be dissolved. This decree was followed June 11 by another amending the constitution and authorizing the edicts of noncatholic religious societies to display the insignia of public worship. These decrees were issued at the instance of Premier Canalejas, who, as a condition precedent to taking office (Feb. 9), exacted a promise from King Alfonso to agree to a plan of ecclesiastical reform. He approached the Vatican at once on the subject of concordat revision and the ecclesiastical authorities in Rome consented to consider the questions of state support, the holding of property and the rights of the monastic orders.

When the second decree was issued, permitting noncatholic sects to place religious emblems on their houses of worship and to conduct their services publicly on an equal plane of freedom with the catholics, the Vatican insisted that this decree must be withdrawn before the discussion of the concordat could be resumed. This position was resented by the Spanish government as an ultimatum and July 29 it was announced in Madrid that Marquis Emilio de Ojeda, Spanish ambassador to the Vatican, had been recalled. This act was described by Premier Canalejas as "an indefinite suspension of negotiations."

The rupture between the Vatican and the government led to demonstrations of disapproval by some of the clericals and their adherents, who proposed to hold an immense meeting of protest at San Sebastian on Sunday, Aug. 7. This was forbidden by the government, which took strong military precautions to prevent any insurrectionary movements and the meeting was abandoned.

FORESTS AND FORESTRY.

By Herbert A. Smith of the United States Forest Service.

Our forests now cover 550,000,000 acres, or about one-fourth of the United States. Forests publicly owned contain one-fifth of all timber standing. Forests privately owned contain at least four-fifths of the standing timber. The timber privately owned is not only four times that publicly owned, but it is generally more valuable. Forestry is now practiced on 70 per cent of the forests publicly owned and on less than 1 per cent of the forests privately owned, or on only 18 per cent of the total area of forests.

The original forests of the United States contained timber in quantity and variety far beyond that upon any other area of similar size in the world. They covered 850,000,000 acres, with a stand of not less than 5,200,000,000 board feet of merchantable timber, according to present standards of use. There were five great forests regions—the northern, the southern, the central, the Rocky mountain and the Pacific.

The present rate of cutting is three times the annual growth of the forests of the United States. The great pineries of the lake states are nearing exhaustion, and great inroads have been made upon the supply of valuable timber throughout all parts of the country. The heavy demands for timber have been rapidly pushing the great centers of lumber industry toward the south and west. In consequence, the state of Washington has led for several years in lumber production, followed in order by Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Wisconsin and Arkansas. In 1909 the production of yellow pine lumber amounted to sixteen and one-quarter billion feet; the Douglas fir of the northwest held second place with four and three-fourths billion feet, while white pine came third with four and one-half billion feet. We take from our forests yearly including waste in logging and in manufacture 20,000,000,000 cubic feet of wood.

We use in a normal year 30,000,000 cords of firewood, 40,000,000 board feet of lumber, 118,000,000 hewn ties, 1,500,000,000 staves, over 132,000,000 sets of heading, nearly 500,000,000 barrel hoops, 3,000,000 cords of native pulp wood, 165,000,000 cubic feet of round mine timbers and 1,250,000 cords of wood for distillation.

In 1909, 4,002,000 cords of wood were used in the manufacture of paper, of which 794,000 cords were imported from Canada. The demand for pulp wood is making a severe drain on the spruce forests which furnish the principal supply. The forest service of the United States department of agriculture is conducting investigations to determine what other woods, such as scrub pine, white fir, tupelo and the like, can be successfully used.

A larger drain upon our forest resources is made by the demand for railroad ties, of which 123,754,000, equivalent to three and three-quarters billion board feet, were used in 1909. White oak, hitherto the chief source of supply, is not plentiful enough to meet this demand indefinitely, and in many parts of the country the supply of chestnut, cedar and cypress is dwindling; however, seasoning and treating methods are being found, largely through the work of the forest service, by which cheaper and more plentiful woods, such as lodgepole pine in the northwest and loblolly pine in the south, are made fit for use as ties. Timber to the amount of two and one-half billion feet was used in 1907 for mine timbers. A great saving has been effected in the naval stores industry, also largely through the work of the forest service, by the introduction of the so-called "cup" systems of turpentine, in place of the old destructive system of "boxing." The new systems insure a larger product of better quality, and prolong the life of the longleaf pine forests upon which the industry depends.

UNITED STATES FOREST SERVICE.

The forest service is one of the bureaus of the department of agriculture. It has charge of the administration and protection of the national forests, and also promotes the practice of forestry generally through investigations and the diffusion of information.

The work of the government in forestry was initiated by the appointment of Dr. Franklin Hough in 1876 as special agent in the department of agriculture. In 1881 a division of forestry was created in that department. In 1901 this division became the bureau of forestry, and in 1905, when the care of the national forests was given to this bureau, its name became the forest service.

Previously the care of the national forests had been in the hands of the department of the interior. A law authorizing the president to set apart forest reserves was passed in 1891, but no provision for their administration and use was made until 1897. Previous to 1905 the bureau of forestry merely gave expert advice, on request, to the department of the interior concerning the application of forestry to the forest reserves. The change of name from "forest reserves" to "national forests" was made in 1906, to correct the impression that the forests were as "reserves," withdrawn from use. Since the forest service took charge of them the fundamental aim has been to open them to the widest use consistent with their proper protection.

The reserves were set aside as follows: By President Harrison, 13,416,710 acres; by President Cleveland, 25,636,320 acres; by President McKinley, 7,050,089 acres; by President Roosevelt, 148,346,924 acres.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1910, President Taft added to the national forests 453,517 acres, and eliminated from them 2,037,645 acres, making their area at the close of the year 192,931,197 acres. The eliminations threw out land which was found to be better suited for agricultural and other purposes than for forestry. An act of congress, passed in 1907, prohibits any additions by the president to the national forest area in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado.

The following tables show the national forest expenditures and receipts for the fiscal year 1910, compared with those for the fiscal year 1909:

Under the law 25 per cent of the gross receipts are paid to the states in which the national forests are located, to be expended for roads and schools. The amount to be paid to the states in this way from the receipts in 1910 is $506,194.84.

The grazing receipts for 1910 were paid by the holders of 20,692 permits to graze 1,497,570 cattle, horses and hogs, and of 4,395 permits to graze 7,618,352 sheep and goats. The receipts from timber sales were paid by 5,398 purchasers, who cut the equivalent of 379,616,000 board feet of timber. The receipts from special uses were paid by the holders of 4,533 permits, including fifty-two for the use of land in connection with water-power development. In other words, these receipts represent profitable use of the forests by some 30,000 individuals or concerns. To the use for which payment was made must be added the heavy free use of the forests by the public. Figures for free use of timber are as follows:

	Number of permittees.	Cut (board feet).	Value.
1909.....	33,431	105,205,359	169,081.12

In issuing permits for reservoirs, conduits, power houses and transmission lines for commercial power development, the forest service has steadfastly insisted on conditions designed to prevent speculative or perpetual holdings and to secure the full development of available power and the payment of reasonable charges for the use of land.

The total stand of timber on the national forests, exclusive of Alaska, is estimated at over five hundred billion board feet.

The following table shows the total cut of timber from the national forests in the fiscal year 1910:

The average price on the stump for the timber sold in 1910 was $2.44 per thousand board feet.

The value of the public property administered by the forest service is estimated at over $2,000,000,000.

The great areas contained in the national forests have now been brought to a condition where they are beginning to serve the purposes of the west. The conservation of timber and forage through wise use and the protection of stream flow are the means of sustaining many industries which have contributed materially to the prosperity of the country.

At the head of the forest service are Forester Henry S. Graves and Associate Forester A. F. Potter. The work is organized under the following branches: Operation, and also lands, James B. Adams, in charge; silviculture, W. T. Cox, in charge; grazing, A. F. Potter, in charge, and products, William L. Hall, in charge.

The 149 national forests are distributed in six districts, with a district forester in charge of each, and headquarters as follows: District 1 (Montana, northeastern Washington, northern Idaho, northwestern South Dakota, northern Michigan, northern Minnesota and southwestern North Dakota), Missoula, Mont., W. B. Greeley, district forester; district 2 (Colorado, Wyoming, the remainder of South Dakota, Nebraska and western Kansas), Denver, Col., Smith Riley, district forester; district 3 (most of Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, New Mexico and Oklahoma), Albuquerque, N. Mex., A. C. Ringland, district forester; district 4 (Utah, southern Idaho, western Wyoming, eastern and central Nevada and a small portion of northwestern Arizona), Ogden, Utah, E. A. Sherman, district forester; district 5 (California and southwestern Nevada), San Francisco, Cal., F. E. Olmsted, district forester, and district 6 (Washington, Oregon and Alaska), Portland, Ore., C. S. Chapman, district forester.

On July 1, 1910, the force employed by the forest service numbered 3,093. Of these 2,491 were employed upon the national forests and 602 were engaged in administrative, scientific and clerical work at the Washington and district headquarters. Of the employees on the national forests the force engaged principally in protective work numbered 1,853 men, as follows: Forest rangers, 243; assistant forest rangers, 1,050; forest guards, 558; game wardens, 2; hunters and trappers, 1. The protective force was therefore about one man for every 104,000 acres, or 163 square miles. (Prussia has one man for every 1,700 acres and Baden one for every 750.)

BRANCH OF SILVICULTURE.

The branch of silviculture directs the management of the national forests as regards both the systems of cutting mature timber and the work of forest planting, supervises their protection, co-operates with states in developing forest policies adapted to their requirements, co-operates with private forest owners who desire to practice forestry on their lands, and carries on silvicultural investigations of the important tree species of the United States. Its most important work is in connection with the management of the national forests, where the chief problem, after fire protection, is to replace the mature timber as it is sold and cut by young growth of valuable species. During the year ended June 30, 1910, 570,044,000 feet of timber was sold from the national forests at an average price of $2.44 per thousand feet; in addition, 104,796,000 feet, valued at $176,167, was disposed of to settlers who are entitled under the regulations to use wood for their requirements without charge.

In planting within the national forests, the primary object is to produce commercial timber, although in a number of cases planting has been done chiefly with the view of reforesting denuded watersheds. In order to control and regulate the flow of streams directly supplying cities and towns. During the year ended June 30, 1910, 7,400 acres in national forests were sown or planted to trees, chiefly Douglas fir, western yellow pine, Austrian pine and Engelmann spruce. There are forty-five government nurseries which supply the national forests. These have a present stock of about 20,000,000 plants and are capable of supplying 18,000,000 a year. In the east, forest planting has been done mainly in co-operation with states and private owners.

At the request of the states the forest service makes examinations of their forest conditions, makes silvicultural studies of practical importance, suggests remedial legislation for giving the states a wise forest policy, etc. The cost of such work is shared by the states and the service. The service co-operates with private owners by sending its experts to examine timber tracts and report on the proper methods for managing and protecting them. The cost of such an examination is borne by the owner. During 1910 examinations were made of timber tracts aggregating 323,000 acres.

BRANCH OF GRAZING.

The branch of grazing supervises the grazing of live stock upon the national forests, the principal lines of work being: The allotment of grazing privileges, the issuance of grazing permits, the division of the ranges between different classes of stock or their owners and the regulation of the stock grazed under permit upon the ranges, and the development of the forage-producing capacity of the national forests by the restoration of depleted areas through systematic control of the stock grazed upon them or by artificial means, through the eradication of noxious range-destroying rodents and through the institution of new methods of range control. By co-operation with federal and state authorities in the enforcement of quarantine regulations, the national forests have been practically freed from infectious or contagious diseases fatal to live stock, and by an active campaign against predaceous animals destructive to live stock the annual loss from this source within the national forests has been reduced by several hundred thousand dollars.

The number of stock grazed during the last season (1910), under permit and by settlers without permit, was approximately 1,500,000 head of cattle, horses and swine and 7,500,000 head of sheep and goats. The annual productive value of this number of stock is more than $20,000,000. The number of persons holding permits to graze live stock during the last year was in excess of 25,000.

BRANCH OF PRODUCTS.

The branch of products carries on studies, tests and demonstrations to further the more complete utilization of the products of the forest. A forest products laboratory is operated at the University of Wisconsin, where experiments are made to determine the properties of American woods, to ascertain cheap and effective treatments to prevent decay, to test the adaptability of untried woods for specific uses such as paper pulp, to develop uses for the material wasted in sawmill operations and to discover processes of obtaining valuable chemical by-products from the waste which cannot be otherwise utilized. An office of wood utilization is maintained at Chicago to promote the economic use of wood among the timber-consuming industries. Studies are made to find the kind, quantity and cost of timber consumed in different states and regions and also where the material comes from and what amount is lost through waste. The wood-consuming industries are aided in finding the most suitable raw material and in developing methods of utilizing their waste product. In the western states all products work centers in the district offices at Denver, San Francisco and Portland.

DENDROLOGICAL STUDIES.

An important part of the dendrological studies which are carried on by the service is the making of an accurate forest map of the distribution of tree species in the United States, to show the extent, composition and economic possibilities of our forest resources. Others of these studies concern the cedar forests of Texas and important but little known trees indigenous to the United States, the growth of which may profitably extend to new localities for economic purposes. Prominent among the latter are the desert pines of California. An Investigation is being made of the present and probable future supply of western tanbark oak, as well as of other trees the barks of which are used to adulterate tanbark, and the tannin contents of the barks are being determined by the bureau of chemistry. Included also is a study of basket willows. Attention is given especially to the conditions under which high-grade basket rods may be produced. Approved basket willow cuttings are distributed free each spring to applicants interested in willow culture.

The dendrologist also gives technical information about trees, in response to inquiries, including the identification of the wood, seeds, foliage, etc., of native and exotic trees.

FOREST POLICY OF THE STATES.

New York has purchased and set aside 1,600,000 acres in the Adirondack and Catskill mountains as forest preserves, under the control of the forest, fish and game commission of the state. These lands and private lands in the preserve counties are protected from fire by an adequate system of wardens. Unfortunately, the constitution of the state prohibits the cutting of timber from state lands. In 1909 the commission distributed at cost to private owners 1,005,325 forest tree seedlings and the waste and open land on the preserve is being gradually planted to trees under the supervision of trained foresters.

Pennsylvania has purchased more than $20,000 acres of land for state forest reserves, and the forestry commission has the right to purchase additional forest lands at a price not to exceed $5 an acre. The reserves are situated chiefly on the mountains of the central part of the state and located with special reference to protecting the water supply of cities and towns. The state forest reserves are not only protected from fire, but are managed according to forestry principles, the mature timber being cut and sold. A school for training forest rangers for the reserves is maintained at Mont Alto. There is a well-organized forest fire protective system in the state. The state distributes forest trees for planting and gives advice in the management of forest lands to private owners.

Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan have well-organized state forest departments. They have large state forest reserves, exceeding 200,000 acres for each state, which are protected from fire and on which the open land is being planted and the mature timber cut and sold. Each of these states protects the forest land of private owners as well as that of the state forest reserves from fire and distributes tree seedlings for planting to land owners at cost. Ohio, New Hampshire and Vermont also distribute planting material to private owners and give them advice in regard to methods of forest management. The following states have forestry departments which seek to protect from fire by means of an organized warden system all or the greater portion of the forest lands of the state: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland, Oregon and California, while Washington and Idaho provide for such protection through legal associations of land owners. Maine supports a very efficient forest fire service covering the unorganized townships in the northern part of the state. In the remaining townships the selectmen are ex officio wardens. Most of these states also have small state forests, that of New Jersey being 14,000 acres. Other states which have forest officers charged with forest interests are Rhode Island, Indiana, Kansas, Montana, North Carolina and West Virginia. South Carolina, Alabama and Louisiana have recently passed or have under consideration advanced forestry legislation. The recently adopted law of Louisiana is especially noteworthy in that it provides for a forest fire protective organization by means of a tax of $\frac{3}{4}$ of a cent on every 1,000 board feet of lumber sawed in the state.

CONSERVATION OF THE NATIONAL RESOURCES.

NATIONAL CONSERVATION ASSOCIATION.

The National Conservation association, with headquarters in the Colorado building, Washington, D. C., is now the organized head of the conservation movement in the United States. The association came into existence because of an urgent need for an organization open to every man and woman who stood for conservation, which would give them immediate opportunity for united and effective work.

On July 29, 1909, the first step was taken. A group of the men who had led in the fight for conservation met and organized the National Conservation association. Dr. Charles W. Elliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, was made president of the association. Soon after Gifford Pinchot was removed from the government service by President Taft, Dr. Elliot presented his resignation and nominated Mr. Pinchot as his successor. Mr. Pinchot's election as president of the National Conservation association followed, the honorary presidency being accepted by Dr. Elliot.

In a booklet explaining the objects of the association is the following:

"The National Conservation association is fighting for the prompt and orderly development of our natural resources, for the welfare of ourselves and our children, and for the rights of the plain people. The association is bound neither by political considerations nor official connections. It is free to speak the whole truth.

"That conservation means the use of our natural resources for the benefit of us all and not merely for the profit of a few is already household knowledge. The task which the National Conservation association has set itself is to get this principle put into practical effect."

During the 61st congress, second session, the principles for which the association stood were enacted into law in a considerable number of cases and are represented in many bills still awaiting action.

Early in the second session Senator Knute Nelson introduced nine conservation bills drafted in the interior department. For five of these bills substitutes, embodying conservation principles, were prepared by the association, covering all important phases of the conservation programme of the administration. These were introduced by Representative Gronna of North Dakota and are before congress for consideration. The substitute for the withdrawal bill suggested by the association was enacted into law with amendments. The three remaining conservation bills proposed by the administration, which were of relatively small importance, were passed in a form different from that in which they were introduced, and one of them in greatly improved form. The act for issuing $20,000,000 of bonds to hasten the completion of reclamation projects was advocated by the administration.

The association is maintained by annual dues from membership, which is divided into the following classes:

Members.....	$2.00
Active members.....	5.00
Contributing members.....	25.00
Patrons.....	100.00
Life membership.....	1,000.00

The organization of the National Conservation association is as follows:

Gifford Pinchot, president, Washington, D. C.
Charles W. Elliot, honorary president, Cambridge, Mass.

Walter L. Fisher, vice-president, Chicago, Ill.
Thomas R. Shipp, secretary, Washington, D. C.
Overton W. Price, treasurer, Washington, D. C.
Philip P. Wells, counsel, Washington, D. C.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON CONSERVATION.

An amendment to the sundry civil bill, proposed by Representative James A. Tawney of Minnesota, prohibited the national conservation commission from going on with its work under the government, although the commission itself, at the wish of President Taft, continued in existence. Accordingly the joint committee on conservation took up the work of co-operation among the state conservation commissions and the conservation committees of large national organizations. In February, 1910, this committee was consolidated with the National Conservation association.

NATIONAL CONSERVATION CONGRESS.

The second national conservation congress was held in St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 5-8, 1910. Addresses were made by President Taft, Former President Roosevelt, Gifford Pinchot and many others. The keynote of Mr. Taft's speech was that deeds should take the place of words. "The time has come," he said, "for a halt in general rhapsodies over conservation, making the word mean every known good in the world. Such appeals are of doubtful utility and do not direct the public to the specific course that should be taken. Real conservation involves wise, nonwasteful use in the present generation, with every possible means of preservation for succeeding generations. * * * I am fully convinced that the only course for me to pursue is to hold fast to the limitations of the constitution and to regard as sacred the powers of the states."

Mr. Roosevelt maintained that the outcry against the supposed violation of the rights of the various states was raised by those who feared the power of the government would stop the grabbing of resources and who knew the states were impotent to act in the majority of cases.

Resolutions were adopted by the congress declaring that the natural resources should be developed, used and conserved in ways consistent both with current welfare and with the perpetuity of the people. The reclamation service of the federal government and the continuation of the national forests by it were approved. Co-operation between state and federal agencies in the control of water resources and the prompt adoption of a comprehensive plan for developing navigation throughout the rivers and lakes, proceeding in the order of their magnitude and commercial importance, were urged.

Henry W. Wallace of Des Moines, Iowa, was chosen president and Dr. Austin Litchaw of Kansas City, Mo., treasurer. Thomas Shipp was re-elected secretary.

LAND AND WATER-POWER CONSERVATION.

In a special message to congress Jan. 14, 1910, President Taft made the following recommendations:

That public lands be classified according to their principal value or use.

That the control of water-power sites be invested in the government to insure competition and reasonable prices.

That bonds to the amount of $30,000,000 be issued to complete irrigation projects already under way.

That acts be passed to validate action taken by the interior department regarding the disposition of timber lands.

That steps be taken to improve the inland waterways, beginning with the completion of a nine-foot channel in the Ohio river between Pittsburg and Cairo.

THE PINCHOT-BALLINGER CONTROVERSY.

By direction of President Taft, Gifford Pinchot, chief forester of the United States, was summarily discharged from his office by Secretary Wilson of the agricultural department Jan. 7, 1909. The immediate cause of the action was a letter written by Mr. Pinchot to Senator Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa and read by him in the senate Jan. 6. In this letter the forester, by inference, criticised the president for removing L. R. Glavis from the public land office for his conduct in regard to the Cunningham coal land cases in Alaska, admitting that two of the writer's subordinates, Overton W. Price, assistant forester, and Alexander Shaw, assistant law officer, had assisted Glavis in preparing the published charges against the secretary of the interior, Richard A. Ballinger. The letter further declared that the action of Price and Shaw was improper, but that he considered the reprimand which he had administered was sufficient punishment in view of the peculiar value of their services to the government.

In a letter to Mr. Pinchot notifying him of his dismissal, President Taft declared: "Your letter was in effect an improper appeal to congress and the public to excuse in advance the guilt of your subordinates before I could act, and against my decision in the Glavis case before the whole evidence on which that was based could be considered. * * * By your own conduct you have destroyed your usefulness as a helpful subordinate of the government, and it therefore now becomes my duty to direct the secretary of agriculture to remove you from your office as the forester."

The trouble between Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Ballinger began shortly after the latter had been appointed secretary of the interior. While James R. Garfield held that office Mr. Pinchot recommended to the department the withdrawal as ranger sites of small tracts in the public domain outside of the forest reserves with the idea of preserving the national domain from monopolistic exploitation. This policy was approved by Mr. Garfield, but when Mr. Ballinger became secretary he refused to approve the withdrawal of certain lands in Washington and Oregon on the ground that such action would be adding to the forest reserves in those states, thus usurping a power exclusively vested in congress. In this position he was sustained by Attorney-General Wickersham. Mr. Ballinger also restored to entry thousands of acres which Secretary Garfield had withdrawn under what he considered the supervisory authority of the secretary of the interior. Mr. Ballinger denied that such authority existed.

The Cunningham claims, near Katalla, Alaska, covered thirty-three coal entries, comprising 5,230 acres, said by experts to contain more than 63,000,000 long tons of coal besides valuable timber and water power. These claims had been under investigation in 1907 and Special Agent H. T. Jones had reported that in his opinion the entries had been fraudulently made in the interest of the Guggenheim mining syndicate. L. R. Glavis, chief of the field division of the land office in Seattle, who had investigated the claims, learned in January, 1908, that they had been clear listed for patent. He made a protest and the clear listing was suspended while he continued his investigation. Mr. Ballinger was at this time commissioner of the general land office and on March 3, 1908, he urged a committee of the house of representatives to pass a bill introduced by Delegate Carey of Alaska permitting the consolidation of the entries. This bill, amended at the suggestion of Secretary Garfield so as to provide for the consolidation of claims entered by locators solely in their own interest and not as the agents of others, became a law.

When Mr. Ballinger resigned as commissioner of the general land office he became attorney for the Cunningham claimants in this case and filed a brief on their behalf, though it was asserted that in doing so he violated the federal statute prohibiting any officer or employee of the government from acting as attorney in the prosecution of any claim pending in the department with which he was connected within two years after such officer or employee left the government service. In March, 1909, when Mr. Ballinger entered the Taft cabinet, he gave up his connection with the Cunningham cases and turned them over to Assistant Secretary Pierce for decision. In May, 1909, the latter decided in favor of the Cunninghams, but June 12 the decision was overruled by Attorney-General Wickersham. The Cunninghams then fell back upon the old law and the land office ordered Glavis to hurry his investigations. Glavis was later on replaced by Special Land Agent Sheridan, who indorsed the application for a postponement of the trial of the Cunningham cases. The forestry office, at the request of Glavis, had begun an investigation of the whole matter, as the Cunningham group of claims was included in the Chugach national forest reserve. Law Officer Shaw and Assistant Forester Price went to the general land office July 22 and asked to see the record in the cases. Permission was refused at first, but was later granted. The dispute between Glavis and the forestry office on the one hand and Secretary Ballinger on the other became acute and was finally laid before the president, then at his summer home at Beverly, Mass. Ballinger was sustained and, Sept. 13, Mr. Taft wrote a letter authorizing the discharge of Mr. Glavis from the government service.

Mr. Glavis, after his dismissal, wrote a series of articles explaining his side of the controversy, while Mr. Pinchot defended his part in the matter in a number of public speeches. Mr. Ballinger demanded a congressional investigation and Jan. 5, 1910, a joint resolution was introduced for that purpose. It was passed in the house Jan. 7, but with a proviso that the members of the committee should not be appointed by Speaker Cannon, but should be elected. The amendment was carried by the combined vote of twenty-six "insurgent" republicans and 123 democrats, on the plea that it would prevent the appointment of a "whitewashing" committee. The joint resolution was adopted by the senate Jan. 10, with some changes requiring consideration by conference committees of each house. The joint resolution as modified in conference was finally adopted by the senate Jan. 17 and by the house Jan. 18. Under its terms the following committee of investigation was chosen, the senators being appointed by the vice-president and the representatives elected after being named in party caucuses:

Senators—Knute Nelson, Rep., Minnesota, chairman; Frank P. Flint, Rep., California; George Sutherland, Rep., Utah; Elihu Root, Rep., New York; Duncan U. Fletcher, Dem., Florida; William E. Purcell, Dem., North Dakota.
Representatives—Samuel McCall, Rep., Massachusetts; Martin E. Olmsted, Rep., Pennsylvania; Edwin Denby, Rep., Michigan; Edmond H. Madison, Rep., Kansas; James M. Graham, Dem., Illinois; Ollie M. James, Dem., Kentucky.

The inquiry began Jan. 26 and ended May 20. Testimony was given by Louis R. Glavis, Secretary Ballinger, Secretary James Wilson, Gifford Pinchot, F. M. Kerby and others. The committee took the case under advisement and a meeting was later called for Sept. 5 in St. Paul, Minn. The meeting was held there Sept. 7 and another Sept. 9, but the chairman, Senator Nelson, found that no quorum was present. The democratic members of the committee, however, adopted and published a report in which the charges made by Pinchot and Glavis against Secretary Ballinger were sustained in every particular. Mr. Ballinger was found to have betrayed his official trust in conspiring with land grabbers and to have been guilty of duplicity toward President Taft. The report concluded:

"That Richard A. Ballinger has not been true to the trust reposed in him as secretary of the interior, that he is not deserving of public confidence and that he should be requested by the proper authorities to resign his office."

This report was signed by Senators Fletcher and Purcell and Representatives James and Graham. Congressman Madison of Kansas made a separate report, but substantially the same in effect. He found that Mr. Ballinger was not a faithful trustee of the people's interests and recommended his dismissal from office.

Senators Nelson, Sutherland and Root and Representatives McCall, Olmsted and Denby met in Chicago Sept. 13, and after a brief conference issued a statement to the effect that the pretended adoption of a report by a political minority and its publication as if it were the report of the committee exhibited a willingness to sacrifice the rights and injure the reputation of the officers investigated in order to obtain a supposed political advantage in the pending political campaign. "The report of the committee," the statement continued, "cannot be made until Dec. 5, when congress meets, and the meeting called for Sept. 5 was for the purpose of considering and discussing what the report to be made three months thereafter should be. There was, therefore, no haste or pressure for time. The action of the democratic minority in taking advantage of the delay of some members in reaching the meeting was an effort to substitute a prearranged scheme for the orderly deliberation and discussion which the duty of the committee requires."

REPORT OF NATIONAL WATERWAYS COMMISSION.

The national waterways commission created by congress in 1909 made its preliminary report Jan. 24, 1910, giving the results of its investigations and studies both in the United States and in Europe. Among the conclusions reached were the following:

The most important factor in the decrease of water-borne traffic in the United States alongside of and contemporaneously with the great increase in railway traffic is due to the relations existing between these two great agencies for transportation. The most essential requirement for the rehabilitation of water traffic is, in the opinion of the commission, the establishment of harmonious relations between railway and water lines. It is quite as important that there should be co-operation between them as that greater depth of channels should be secured. Where such co-operation can be secured, or suitable railroad service does not exist, the commission would recommend the improvement of waterways which, on expert examination, are found to be of economic value as a means for transportation.

Canals adapted for seagoing ships are only profitable when they connect navigable waters located near each other, such as the Sault Ste. Marie canal; when they save a great sailing distance, as in the case of the Suez and Panama canals, or when they connect large cities near the coast with the ocean, as in the case of the Manchester canal.

The commission regards the present law, providing for preliminary steps before the adoption of projects for improvement, as well adapted to secure the best results. This requires, after legislation by congress, that there shall be a preliminary examination and then a detailed survey by the engineer corps of the army and consideration by a board of review before a plan is adopted.

The commission finds that in the development of waterways on a large scale the decided tendency in other countries is toward a degree of participation by communities and localities especially benefited and is of the opinion that in order to obtain the best results this policy must ultimately be adopted in our own country. Terminal facilities should, at least, be provided by the communities immediately benefited. The commission would recommend that where an equitable division is possible uniform rules be observed for a proper division of the cost between the federal government and minor political divisions.

It is desirable that whenever navigation is improved careful attention be given to such associated objects as bank protection, flood and drought prevention, irrigation and drainage, but it should always be borne in mind that waterway improvements made by the federal government should be restricted to navigation.

The commission recommends the continuance of the progressive policy which has been adopted relating to harbors, but it would advise a division of harbors into classes by depth or by the importance of their ocean or coastwise traffic. The commission is unwilling to recommend the construction of wharves and docks by the government.

The commission strongly recommends the greatest care in the conservation of water power for the use of the people. The consent of the federal government over navigable streams has to do with navigation only, and in the exercise of this jurisdiction the plan commends itself to the commission of inserting in each grant or franchise under which the consent to construct a dam is given a condition that the grantee who constructs the dam must also, whenever necessary to subserve the interests of navigation, construct a lock suited to the locality and to the probable development of traffic, and also furnish power for the proper operation of the lock or locks. Whenever the government constructs dams for purposes of navigation or irrigation, and, as an incident thereto, water power is developed, such power should be utilized and an adequate charge be made therefor.

The commission found little that was new in European methods of improving rivers or in constructing locks and dams. In general it approves of the methods heretofore in use in the United States.

LAKES-TO-GULF DEEP-WATERWAY PROJECT.

ACTION BY ILLINOIS.

Oct. 16, 1907, the legislature of Illinois passed a joint resolution providing for the submission to the electors of the state of an amendment to the constitution permitting the general assembly to provide for the construction of a deep waterway from Lockport to Utica and to authorize the issue of bonds to the amount of $20,000,000 for this purpose. At the election of Nov. 3, 1908, the people approved the proposed amendment by a vote of 692,522 for to 195,177 against. At the regular session of the legislature in 1909 the waterway project was considered, but no agreement could be reached as to the question of going ahead immediately with the work or waiting for federal aid and no bill was passed. The matter was included in the list of subjects to be considered at the extra session of the legislature in the winter and spring of 1909-1910, but no action was taken.

ADVERSE REPORT BY ENGINEERS.

June 10, 1909, the special board appointed under authority of congress to investigate the feasibility of constructing a ship canal from the lakes to the Gulf of Mexico reported that a fourteen-foot channel could be built at a cost of $159,000,000 and eighteen years of labor. It estimated that it would take $128,000,000 to construct such a channel from St. Louis to the mouth of the Mississippi alone. The board reported against building such a channel, maintaining that present and prospective demands of commerce between Chicago and the gulf could be adequately met by a through channel nine feet in depth.

At the fourth lakes-to-the-gulf deep-waterway convention, held in New Orleans, La., Oct. 30-Nov. 1, 1909, President Taft made a speech indorsing the improvement of the waterways of the country generally. He failed, however, to approve of the lakes-to-the-gulf project. In special message to congress Jan. 14, 1910, he recommended that steps be taken to improve the inland waterways, beginning with the completion of a nine-foot channel in the Ohio river, between Pittsburg and Cairo.

LENGTH IN FEET OF CERTAIN MILES.

From circular of hydrographic office, U. S. navy department.

In the United States the nautical mile or knot or sea mile, used for the measurement of distances in ocean navigation, has a length of 6,080.27 feet; in England the nautical mile, corresponding to the "admiralty knot," is 6,080 feet; in France, Germany and Austria the nautical or sea mile has a length of 6,076.23 feet. The geographic mile, which is the length of one minute of longitude of the equator of the terrestrial spheroid, is 6,087.15 feet long. The statute mile, used principally in measurements on land, is 5,280 feet.

AERONAUTICAL PROGRESS IN 1910.

The year 1910 was one of wonderful achievements in the conquest of the air. Records for sustained flight, speed, distance made and altitude reached were constantly being broken both by aeroplanes and dirigible balloons. Aviation meets and exhibitions increased in number and in the quality of the performances. America became almost as enthusiastic as Europe on the subject and many new names were added to the list of skilled airmen. Unfortunately casualties from accidents were many, but they did not have the effect of retarding progress in aviation or of discouraging men from continuing to experiment with flying machines. These were being gradually improved, though they were still far from being perfect as to reliability and safety. Below will be found accounts of some of the more remarkable performances of the year, with the latest available records on both sides of the Atlantic, a list of casualties and a chronological record of aeronautical events in 1910.

LONG-DISTANCE FLIGHTS.

LONDON TO MANCHESTER.

Mr. Grahame-White, in a Farman aeroplane, left London, England, at 5:12 Saturday morning, April 23, 1910, in an attempt to win a prize of $50,000 offered by the Daily Mail for a flight from London to Manchester, a distance of 186 miles. Traveling at an average speed of forty miles an hour he reached Rugby, the first stopping place, at 8:30 o'clock. Resuming his journey he met with rough weather and the motor of his machine developed a defect, which compelled him to descend at Lichfield, 117 miles from London and 69 miles from Manchester. He decided to give up the attempt at this point on account of the bad weather.

Wednesday, April 27, M. Louis Paulhan, the French aviator, who had entered for the Daily Mail prize a few days before, started from London at 5:20 p. m. in a Farman biplane and flew to Lichfield without a stop. It was then 8:10 o'clock and too dark for him to proceed farther. He started again at 4 o'clock the next morning and descended within the limits of Manchester at 5:32 a. m., thus winning the prize.

When Grahame-White heard of M. Paulhan's start Wednesday evening he started in his own machine at 6:30 o'clock, an hour and ten minutes later than his rival. He continued until he reached Roade, sixty miles from London, where he descended. He started again at 2:50 in the morning and at 4 o'clock was only some fifteen miles behind Paulhan, who had resumed his flight at that hour. Grahame-White proceeded until he reached Polesworth, 107 miles from London, when he had to descend. There, learning that the Frenchman had reached Manchester, he gave up the race. Paulhan's average speed while in the air was 44.3 miles an hour and both he and Grahame-White flew at an average elevation of 200 feet. The wind was at right angles to the course and the weather was cold.

CROSSES CHANNEL TWICE.

Capt. Charles Stewart Rolls of the British army, driving a Wright aeroplane, crossed the English channel twice on the evening of June 2, 1910, without alighting. He made the round trip between Dover and Calais in 90 minutes, flying most of the time at an elevation of about 1,000 feet. The distance between the two places is twenty-one miles, making the total overwater flight forty-two miles.

ACROSS THE IRISH SEA.

Robert Lorraine, an actor-aviator, crossed the Irish sea in an aeroplane Sept. 11, 1910, between Holyhead, Wales, and Howth hill, on the north side of Dublin bay, Ireland. The trip was marred by the breakdown of his motor at the finish of his trip. He had reached Howth hill, but found that he was too low to scale it and he had swung around to obtain a higher elevation when a wire broke and his machine fell into the sea sixty yards from land. Lorraine, who wore a life belt, swam to the shore near the Balley lighthouse. The distance covered by the aeroplane was about sixty miles.

FROM PARIS TO LONDON.

One of the most daring aviation feats of the year was the flight of John B. Moisant of Chicago from Paris to London, a distance of 301 miles, with a mechanic as a passenger. He left Issy, a suburb of Paris, at 5:45 p. m., Aug. 16, in a Bierlot machine and arrived at Amiens, eighty-four miles distant, at 7:30 p. m. He stopped there over night and started at 5:10 the next morning (Aug. 17) for Calais, arriving at 7:15 a. m., the distance covered being 118 miles. At 10:45 a. m. he rose again and though a rather strong wind was blowing boldly set his course for Dover on the other side of the channel, a tugboat following part of the way across. He landed at Deal, England, twenty-nine miles from Calais, at 11:15 a. m., and remained there until 4:55 a. m., Aug. 18, when he started for London, seventy miles away. An accident to the motor compelled him to descend at Rainham, four miles from Chatham and about twenty miles from London. In descending a propeller blade was broken and Moisant and his companion were compelled to wait until a duplicate blade could be secured. Aug. 20 and 22 he made attempts to cover the remaining distance to London, but gales of wind were encountered, and after several narrow escapes the aeronaut finally was forced to land so suddenly that his machine was placed out of commission for the time being. After thorough repairs had been made he resumed his flight Sept. 6 and landed at the Crystal palace in the evening.

FIRST FLIGHT ACROSS THE ALPS.

George Chavez, a Peruvian, crossed the Alps by aeroplane for the first time Sept. 23, 1910. The daring feat resulted disastrously, as the aviator fell with his machine near Domodossola and sustained injuries from which he died Sept. 27. He was within thirty feet of the surface when one of the wings of his monoplane collapsed and the machine dropped with Chavez beneath. Both his legs were broken, his left thigh was fractured and he also sustained internal injuries. The start of the trip was made at Brig, on the Swiss side and the route was over the Simplon pass at an altitude of nearly 7,000 feet. The objective point was Milan, Italy, the Italian Aviation society having offered a prize of $20,000 to the aviator who should be the first to make the journey. The difficult and apparently the most dangerous part of the trip was over when the accident occurred and in view of this fact the society awarded $10,000 to M. Chavez two days before he died.

FRENCH CROSS-COUNTRY RACE.

M. Le Blanc won a notable cross-country aeroplane race, which began at Issy, Paris, Aug. 7, 1910, and ended at the same place Aug. 17. The distance of the circuit was approximately 485 miles and the prize was a purse of $20,000 offered by a Paris newspaper. Le Blanc, using a Bierlot monoplane, covered the circuit in 11 hours 55 minutes and 59 seconds, actual flying time. M. Aubrun was second in 13:27:14. Several military aviators acted as escorts. The route was from Issy to Troyes, to Nancy, to Mezières, to Douai, to Amiens, to Issy.

CHICAGO TO SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Walter R. Brookins won a prize of $10,000 offered by The Chicago Record-Herald when he made a flight in a Wright biplane from Washington park, Chicago, to Springfield, Ill., Sept. 29, 1910. The start was made at 9:15 a. m., in the presence of a huge crowd of spectators. The weather was clear and moderately warm with the wind blowing from ten to fifteen miles an hour from the south. Flying east until he reached the Illinois Central railroad at Jackson park, the aviator turned and proceeded in a southwesterly direction along the line all the way to Springfield. A special train, with persons interested in the flight, including Wilbur Wright, the inventor, followed or preceded the aeroplane. Brookins averaged something like thirty miles an hour, and as the train had to stop at many stations he had no difficulty in keeping abreast and at times ahead of it. He came down twice for oil—once at Gilman, after he had traveled 74.76 miles without a halt, and then at Mount Pulaski, where he had completed another stretch of 87.55 miles. He arrived at Springfield at 4:25 p. m. and made a fine landing in the fair grounds, where a great throng of people were awaiting him.

During the flight an altitude varying from 1,000 to 2,500 feet was maintained, the aviator seeking to avoid the uncertain air currents near the ground. At all the cities and towns passed thousands of spectators had assembled, the schools in many cases being dismissed to give the pupils an opportunity to see an aeroplane for the first time. No accident of any kind, except the loss of one of the small wheels under the machine, occurred from start to finish of the flight. It was the best performance of the kind seen up to that time in America. The following table shows the mileage made, the time between the various points and the actual flying time:

SPRINGFIELD TO ST. LOUIS.

Arch Hoxsey, in the same biplane used by Brookins in his flight from Chicago to Springfield, left Springfield at 11:55 a. m., Oct. 8, and, following the Chicago & Alton railway, flew across the country to St. Louis, Mo., crossing the Mississippi river near the mouth of the Missouri. He had difficulty in locating the landing place chosen for him and spent a long time searching for it. He landed at 3:11 p. m. and was then directed where to go. Though he remained in the air three hours and twenty-two minutes, the distance, not counting the time spent in the search for the landing place, was covered in 2 hours and 20 minutes. He flew at an altitude of between 600 and 1,200 feet.

ALBANY TO NEW YORK.

Glenn H. Curtiss won a prize of $10,000 offered by the New York World when he made an aeroplane flight from Albany to New York, Sunday, May 29, 1910. He made the distance of 137 miles in 2 hours and 32 minutes actual flying time, averaging 54.06 miles an hour. He started at 7:03 o'clock in the morning from Van Rensselaer island in the Hudson river, near Albany, and rising to a height of between 500 and 700 feet, steered for the south after having made a slight diversion to the west so as to cross the Albany city limits. Following the course of the river and above it nearly all the time, he flew steadily and so swiftly that a special train engaged for the purpose had great difficulty in keeping him in sight. Catskill was passed at 8:05 and Poughkeepsie at 8:26. He flew over the high bridge at that point and then descended into a meadow three miles farther on. Here he obtained a fresh supply of gasoline and oil, and after an hour's delay he resumed his journey. West Point was reached at 10:02, Yonkers at 10:32 and Inwood, Manhattan island, at 10:35. Inwood was the official landing place within the limits of Manhattan island, and he had thus won the prize. He remained there 1 hour and 7 minutes and then flew to Governor's island. The only time on the whole journey when he came near a mishap was at Storm King, where his machine was struck by a sudden gust of wind, causing it to tilt and drop a short distance until he regained control. The aviator was at times more than 1,000 feet above the surface of the river.

NEW YORK TO PHILADELPHIA AND BACK.

Charles K. Hamilton, in a Curtiss aeroplane, left Governor's island New York, at 7:35 a. m., June 12, 1910, and alighted in aviation field at North Penn Junction, Philadelphia at 9:26 a. m., having covered a distance of eighty-eight miles in 1 hour and 51 minutes without a stop. Starting on the return trip at 11:30 a. m., he had flown approximately seventy miles when the spark plugs of his motor fouled and he was compelled to descend in a swamp near South Amboy, N. J., at 12:55 p. m. The propeller was broken in making the landing, but a new one was secured from Governor's island and, resuming the flight at 6:20 p. m., Mr. Hamilton landed at the starting point at 6:39 p. m. The actual flying time for the round trip of 176 miles was 207 minutes, the average speed on the return part of the journey being 54.96 miles an hour. The aviator by this performance won a prize of $10,000 offered by the New York Times and the Philadelphia Public Ledger for an aeroplane flight from New York to Philadelphia and back within twenty-four hours.

FAILURE OF CHICAGO-NEW YORK RACE.

The Chicago Evening Post and the New York Times offered a prize of $30,000 for an aeroplane flight from Chicago to New York. A number of Curtiss machines were entered and some creditable preliminary work was done at the Hawthorne race-track at Chicago, Oct. 1-8. Only one man made a start, however, and the "race" proved a fizzle. Eugene Ely left Hawthorne Sunday afternoon, Oct. 9, but his engine broke down and he was forced to descend at Beverly Hills, only nine miles away. He started again on Monday, but after a number of mishaps was obliged to give up the race at East Chicago, some twenty miles from Hawthorne.

AVIATION MEETS.

LOS ANGELES.

The first aviation meet of 1910 took place near Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 10-20. The principal contenders were Louis Paulhan of France, using Farman biplanes, and Glenn H. Curtiss, American, who used aeroplanes of the Wright type. Paulhan won all the cross-country, passenger-carrying, altitude and endurance tests, while Curtiss won the prizes for speed, quick starts and good landings. The Frenchman won $15,000 in prizes and the American about $5,000. Following were the principal records made:

Height—Louis Paulhan, 4,165 feet, first; Charles K. Hamilton, 530.5 feet, second; Glenn H. Curtiss, no official height taken, third.

RECORDS FOR HEIGHT.

The records for altitude reached by aeroplane were repeatedly broken in 1910 until a height of nearly two miles above sea level was reached. Jan. 7, at Mourmelon, France, Hubert Latham rose to a height of 3,500 feet, using a monoplane. June 13, at Indianapolis, Ind., Walter R. Brookins, in a Wright biplane, attained an altitude of 4,384½ feet. July 9, at Atlantic City, N. J., the same aviator ascended 6,175 feet, part of the flight being over the ocean. The greater part of the descent was made in a series of circular glides, the engine having stopped for lack of fuel. Aug. 23, at Havre, France, Leon Morane reached a height of 7,054 feet in a monoplane, and Sept. 3, at Deauville, France, he made a record of 8,471 feet. This was excelled Sept. 8, near Paris, by George Chavez, a Peruvian aviator, who went 8,792 feet up in the air in a monoplane.

Oct. 1, at Mourmelon, France, M. Wymalen, a comparatively unknown aviator, again broke the world's record for height by ascending to an altitude of 9,121 feet. He suffered severely from the cold and the carburetor of the engine was frozen, crippling the power of the machine. He rose in a spiral course until his engine stopped, when he was forced to descend.

Oct. 31, at Belmont park, New York, Ralph Johnstone, in a "baby" Wright roadster, 35 horse power, er, attained a height of 9,714 feet, thus exceeding Wymalen's record by 593 feet. The aviator found it exceedingly cold at a height of nearly two miles, but the daring feat was accomplished without any mishap.

Nov. 23, at Philadelphia, J. A. Drexel, in a Bleriot machine, rose to a height of 9,970 feet.

LONGEST SUSTAINED FLIGHTS.

July 10, M. Olleslagers, a Belgian aviator, made a distance of 393 kilometers, or 244.14 miles, in 5 hours 3 minutes 5 seconds at Rheims, France, using a monoplane. This record was surpassed Oct. 23 by Maurice Tabuteau, who remained in the air six hours and covered a distance of 298 miles at the aerodrome in Etampes, France. He was competing for the Michelin cup and used a Farman biplane.

BALLOONING.

WELLMAN'S ATTEMPT TO CROSS ATLANTIC.

Walter Wellman attempted to cross the Atlantic in the dirigible balloon America in October, 1910, but failed owing to the faulty action of the

equilibrator, or drag rope, with which the craft was provided, and too strong adverse winds. The start was made from Atlantic City, N. J., Saturday, Oct. 15, at 8 o'clock a. m., and at about the same hour on Tuesday, Oct. 18, the voyage came to an end at a point 375 miles east of Norfolk, Va., and 250 miles northwest of Bermuda. The balloon was then in danger of collapse and the aeronauts abandoned it when the Royal Mail line steamer Trent hove in sight and picked them up. Mr. Wellman's own story of the flight follows:

"After passing Nantucket on Sunday morning we made, as estimated, 140 miles east-northeast, drifting with a fresh breeze without the motor. In the afternoon the wind was westerly, and at 9 p. m. our approximate position was latitude 42, longitude 67. Here the wind shifted to the northwest and blew thirty miles an hour. The America was drifting twenty-five miles an hour. The equilibrator pulled hard, riding over the seas, jerking and shocking the ship and setting up a rolling motion which threatened total destruction. It was a dreadful night, but the entire crew were calm and cheerful. We were greatly exhausted. One after the other went to sleep expecting to wake up in the ocean, but content to only keep above the water. The equilibrator was dragging the America down and threatening to sweep away the lifeboat, our only hope of saving ourselves. All hands agreed to stick by the ship. We threw over gasoline to lighten the ship.

At 8 a. m. on Monday orders were given to start the motor to try to make Europe or the Azores. The wind held favorable, but soon veered to the northeast. The Azores being impossible with the reduced gasoline. It was decided to try to make Bermuda. We drifted to the southwest at about fifteen miles an hour, reserving the motor and gasoline for a final effort, being resolved to hold the ship as long as possible.

"Monday night we jettisoned more gasoline and part of the machinery which was damaged to keep afloat. During the cold night we realized that it was impossible to keep up much longer. All Monday we kept afloat, and none of us thought of giving up before the last hours unless we met a vessel. The great danger was of the equilibrator's smashing or foundering the lifeboat, which was launched with difficulty in the high wind early Tuesday morning. We saw the Trent when it was two hours away. It was our only course to launch the lifeboat in the morning instead of waiting for night, when no help was near. This maneuver was executed cleverly. Capt. Vanniman brought the America down close to the sea and Simons directed the releasing of the boat.

"The equilibrator struck a glancing blow, half capsizing the boat. The America, the lifeboat's weight being removed, rose high and soon disappeared in the distance. The loss of the airship was witnessed with small regret, because it would never be used again. The heavy equilibrator, retarding and dragging down the ship and interfering with the steering, was the fatal mistake of this campaign. It was a trial worth making. We covered 1,000 miles over rough seas."

It was the longest sustained flight, both as to time and distance ever made by a dirigible, the longest flight ever made over the ocean and one of the most remarkable ever made by any balloon. The only trips that exceeded it in distance were the ones made from France to Russia by Count de la Vaulx in 1900, when 1,193 miles were covered, and by Messrs. Hawley and Post in 1910, when 1,335 miles were made.

The America was originally built for polar work, but had been remodeled and improved. It was a cigar-shaped craft, 228 feet long over all, with a diameter of fifty-two feet. Its lifting capacity when it left Atlantic City was 23,650 pounds. It carried three gasoline engines, two of from eighty to ninety horse power for propulsion and a donkey engine of from ten to twelve horse power. The upward and downward control was managed by mechanism connected with the propellers. Below the car hung the lifeboat made of canvas with a veneer of mahogany and provided with two watertight compartments.

The car was 156 feet long, the floor serving as a tank for gasoline. Strung beneath the car was a 230-foot-long equilibrator, taking the place of the usual drag rope. It consisted of a long steel cable, to which were attached thirty small steel tanks, each carrying seventy-five pounds of gasoline, and forty wooden blocks. The total amount of gasoline carried was 9,000 pounds.

The commander and crew of the America were as follows: Walter Wellman, commander; Melvin Vanniman, chief engineer; F. Murry Simons, navigator; J. E. Irvin, wireless operator, and Albert Louis Loud and John Aubert, assistant engineers.

CONTEST FOR BENNETT CUP.

The fifth international balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett cup and cash prizes was started from St. Louis, Mo., between 4:30 and 5:35 p. m. Monday, Oct. 17, 1910. Ten balloons, each manned by a pilot and aid, took part in the contest, which proved to be the most remarkable on record. The winning craft, the America II, was not heard from until Wednesday, Oct. 26. It had crossed Illinois, Lake Michigan, the state of Michigan, Lake Huron and the province of Ontario, and had landed in the wilderness at a place about fifty-eight miles north of Chicoutimi, in the province of Quebec, Canada. Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post, the pilot and aid, had intended to continue on to Labrador, but at 3:45 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, Oct. 19, a storm compelled them to land on the side of a mountain near Lake Piscocoma. They spent the night in the basket of the balloon and the next morning started on foot for civilization, heading south. Carrying food and blankets, they made their way by compass through the woods until on the fourth day they came to the hut of a trapper. Here they rested for a day and meeting four French-Canadian hunters were carried by them by canoe to St. Ambroise, Saguenay, and thence by wagon to Chicoutimi, where they arrived on the afternoon of the 26th after a solid week spent in the wilderness. The anxiety caused by their prolonged absence was great and arrangements had been made to search the whole of Canada from Lake Superior to Labrador when telegrams announcing their safety were received. The distance covered by their balloon was 1,171 miles, which broke the record of the Bennett race. The crews, landing places and distances made by the balloons taking part in the race were as follows:

America II. (America); Alan R. Hawley, pilot; Augustus Post, aid; landed at Lake Piscocoma, Quebec; distance, 1,171 miles.
Dusseldorf II. (Germany); Hans Gericke, pilot; S. F. Perkins, aid; landed at Kiskiskadee, Quebec; distance, 1,131 miles.
Germania (Germany); Hugo von Abercromb, pilot; August Blackertz, aid; landed at Cocococache, Quebec; distance, 1,079 miles.
Helvetia (Switzerland); Theodore Schaick, pilot; Paul Armbruster, aid; landed at Ville Marie, Quebec; distance, 826 miles.
Harburg III. (Germany); Lieut. Vogt, pilot; W. E. Assmann, aid; landed in Lake Nipissing, Ontario; distance, 766 miles.

AIRSHIP PASSENGER SERVICE.

Regular airship passenger service was temporarily established Wednesday, June 22, 1910, when Count Zeppelin's dirigible balloon, the Deutschland, carrying twenty passengers, made a scheduled trip from Friedrichshafen to Dusseldorf, Germany. The distance of 300 miles was made in nine hours, the average speed being approximately thirty-three miles an hour. The best speed for one hour was forty-three and a half miles. The passengers occupied a mahogany-walled cabin between the gondolas and were provided with lunch from a buffet. They included directors of the company owning the airship and a number of guests. Count Zeppelin himself steered the craft most of the way.

June 28, the Deutschland, carrying thirty-three passengers, was wrecked in a gale of wind near Dusseldorf, but no one was injured. The service was discontinued.

AMERICAN CHAMPIONSHIP.

Thirteen balloons started from the speedway at Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 17, 1910, in a free-for-all American championship race, the three with the largest mileage to participate in the international race at St. Louis. A. R. Hawley of New York, who covered 453 miles in the America, was first; H. E. Honeywell, who made 379 miles in the St. Louis, was second, and J. S. Wade of Cleveland, who made 371 miles in the Buckeye, was third. The race was under the auspices of the Aero Club of America.

PANAMA CANAL LABEL SUITS.

In the United States District court in New York city Jan. 26, 1910, Judge Charles M. Hough quashed the indictment against the Press Publishing company, publisher of the New York World, charging Joseph Pulitzer and others with criminal libel against Theodore Roosevelt. William H. Taft, Elihu Root, Douglas Robinson, Charles P. Taft, W. N. Cromwell and J. P. Morgan in connection with the Panama canal purchase. The indictment was brought March 4, 1909. Judge Hough ruled that the statute upon which it rested was not sufficient in authority, or, in effect, that the court had no jurisdiction in the matter.

Similar proceedings against Delavan Smith and Charles R. Williams of the Indianapolis News were dismissed by Judge A. B. Anderson of the United States District court Oct. 12, 1909.

PENSIONERS FROM REVOLUTION AND WAR OF 1812.

Mrs. Phoebe M. Palmeter, aged 88 years, of Brookfield, N. Y., pensioned by a special act of congress as the daughter of Jonathan Wooley, who served in a New Hampshire company, is the only pensioner on account of the revolutionary war remaining on the roll.

The last widow pensioner of that war was Esther S. Damon of Plymouth Union, Vt., who died Nov. 11, 1906, aged 93 years. The last survivor of the war of the revolution was Daniel F. Bakeman, who died at Freedom, Cattaraugus county, New York, April 5, 1889, aged 109 years 6 months and 8 days.

The last surviving pensioned soldier of the war of 1812 was Hiram Cronk of Ava, N. Y., who died May 13, 1905, aged 105 years and 16 days.

MANCHURIAN NEUTRALIZATION PROPOSAL.

Late in December, 1909, the American secretary of state, Philander C. Knox, sent a note to the governments of China, Japan, Russia, Great Britain, France and Germany, proposing that the railroads of Manchuria be turned over to China and placed under the control of an international syndicate, which should develop them for commercial instead of political purposes, thus assuring the neutrality of the province. In the communication, which was made public Jan. 5, 1910, Mr. Knox explained that his proposal had in view the maintenance of the "open-door" policy in Manchuria. The suggestion, which became generally known as the "Manchurian neutrality proposition," was rejected by Japan Jan. 21, and subsequently by Russia, on the ground that the plan would be of no advantage to the powers immediately concerned. Japan further declared that it adhered strictly to its pledges of an open door and equal opportunities in Manchuria.

CHINESE RAILWAY LOAN AND AMERICA.

Secretary Knox's neutralization proposition had its origin in the agreement which Edwin H. Conger, the American minister in Peking, made with the Chinese government in 1904, that Americans should have the privilege of subscribing to the loan for the building of the Szechuen railway. In March, 1909, the Chinese government contracted for a loan of $27,500,000 for this project from bankers in England, France and Germany. The American government then made urgent representations to the Peking government on the subject and succeeded in having the terms of the loan rearranged, but final action was not taken until after Secretary Knox's neutralization proposition had been made and rejected. May 24, 1910, the Szechuen railway loan agreement was signed in Paris, France, by the representatives of financial groups in the United States, France, Great Britain and Germany. The amount of the loan was fixed at $30,000,000 and it was announced that the basis of the agreement was absolute equality between the four groups, both as to the loan itself and as to the tender of supplies.

Oct. 27, 1910, arrangements were concluded for an additional loan of $50,000,000 by a syndicate of New York financiers to the Chinese government.

July 5, 1909, congress passed the following joint resolution:

Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States in congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein): That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the constitution:

"Article XVI. The congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever sources derived, without apportionment among the several states and without regard to any census or enumeration."

Up to the close of 1910 the amendment had been ratified by the following states:

Alabama.	Mississippi.
Georgia.	Oklahoma.
Illinois.	South Carolina.
Maryland.

The Kentucky legislature failed to act on the amendment, while the lawmakers of Louisiana, Massachusetts, New York and Rhode Island refused to adopt it.

CHICAGO'S CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE Y. M. C. A.

In March, 1910, the officers and friends of the Young Men's Christian association in Chicago started a campaign to raise $350,000 in ten days. It began March 30 and ended April 12, when a total of $354,038.74 had been raised. The contributors, who represented every walk in life from persons of great wealth to newsboys, numbered 6,864. It was the culminating effort of a two-years' campaign to secure an anniversary fund of $1,000,000. The sum actually secured was $1,185,212.74. It is being devoted to the general work of the association in Chicago, constructing new and caring for old buildings, paying off debts and extending the activities of the various Y. M. C. A. departments located in each division of the city.

DISTURBANCES IN CHINA.

Changsha, capital of the province of Hunan, China, was the scene of serious riots beginning April 13, 1910. Originally the outbreak was caused by a famine due to a corner in rice, but an active anti-foreign propaganda led to attacks on missionaries and their property. Several missions, which were located near the rice shops, were burned by mobs and all the foreigners in the city were compelled to take refuge on vessels in the harbor.

All of the foreign-owned buildings in the city, including the consulates, met the same fate. Several Chinese officials were killed while trying to subdue the rioters. The disturbance extended to other places in the province, but the greatest damage was done in the capital. The arrival of a number of gunboats in the harbor finally put a stop to the rioting toward the end of April.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKES UNLAWFUL.

In a decision handed down by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., March 12, 1910, the injunction issued by Judge Alston G. Dayton of West Virginia in the suit of the Hitchman Coal and Coke company against the United Mine Workers of America was sustained and made permanent. The company alleged that on April 1, 1906, a strike was inaugurated by its employes in response to a call issued by the United Mine Workers of America, who designed to compel coal operators in other sections to accede to their demands. The strike was therefore a sympathetic one, the firm in question having complied with all the terms and conditions laid down by the miners. The Appellate court's decision was, in effect, that such strikes are unlawful.

DEATH OF COUNT LEO TOLSTOY.

Count Leo Tolstoy, the famous Russian author and philosopher, died at Astapova, Russia, Nov. 20, 1910. The count, who was 82 years old, left his home at Yasnaya Polyana early in November accompanied only by Dr. Makovsky, for the purpose of ending his days in solitude, to which he more and more inclined during his latter years. His pilgrimage led him to the religious establishment at Shamardine, in the province of Kaluga, where he remained as the guest of his sister Marie, who is a nun in the cloister.

Learning that his retreat had been discovered, he insisted upon proceeding on his journey to the Caucasus, where he hoped to spend his last days close to the Tolstoin colony on the shores of the Black sea. On the railroad journey the count was overcome with exhaustion and the cold, and Dr. Makovsky was compelled to have him transferred to the flag station at Astapova, where he was made as comfortable as possible in the rude wooden building.

For five days he had remained suffering first from bronchitis and later from inflammation of the lungs. Specialists were called from Moscow and other places, but notwithstanding their utmost efforts the heart of the great Russian responded but feebly to the restoratives and stimulants administered. The attacks of heart failure increased alarmingly and many hours before the end the physicians had given up all hope.

Count Tolstoy was born at Yasnaya Polyana Aug. 28, 1828. He was educated in Kazan university, served in the Crimean war and then entered upon a literary and philanthropical career. Among his best known works are: The Cossacks, Sevastopol Sketches, War and Peace, Anna Karenina, My Confession, What I Believe, The Power of Darkness, Which Is Art, Resurrection, The Slavery of Our Times, and On Life. He renounced property in copyright, land and money in 1895-1896, and was excommunicated by the Russian synod in 1901. Since his religious crisis in 1878-1879 he insisted upon living the same kind of a life as the humblest of the peasants on his estate.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST PACKING CORPORATIONS.

IN CHICAGO.

Jan. 25, 1910, Judge Kenesaw M. Landis of the United States District court in Chicago impaneled a grand jury to investigate the so-called "beef combine" among the meat packers. Witnesses were summoned and the inquiry continued until March 21, when an indictment was returned charging the National Packing company and ten of its subsidiary corporations with conspiracy in violation of the Sherman antitrust law. On the same date a bill in equity was filed by District Attorney Edwin W. Sims in the United States Circuit court, Chicago, against the National Packing company and subsidiary concerns and against its directors. It charged the packers with criminal conspiracy in fixing the prices of live stock and dressed meat and demanded the dissolution of the National Packing company and its allied concerns. It also asked that the individual defendants and their agents be prohibited from exercising any control over the corporations involved except such as might be necessary to wind up their affairs. The companies against which indictments were voted were:

National Packing company of New Jersey.
G. H. Hammond company of Michigan.
Fowler Packing company of Kansas.
United Dressed Beef company of New York.
St. Louis Dressed Beef and Provision company of Missouri.
Hammond Packing company of Illinois.
Omaha Packing company of Illinois.
Anglo-American Provision company of Illinois.
Western Packing company of Colorado.
Colorado Packing and Provision company of Colorado.

New York Butchers' Dressed Meat company of New York.
Individuals and corporations mentioned in bill for injunction:

J. Ogden Armour, president of Armour & Co.
Louis F. Swift, president of Swift & Co.
Edward Morris, president of Morris & Co.
Edward Tilden, president of the National Packing company.
Edward F. Swift, vice-president of Swift & Co.
Charles H. Swift, director National Packing company.
Swift & Co., Libby, McNeill & Libby.
Arthur Meeker, general manager and director Armour & Co., director National Packing company.
Thomas E. Wilson, vice-president Morris & Co., director National Packing company.
L. H. Heyman, director National Packing company, also Morris & Co.
Thomas J. Connors, general superintendent Armour & Co., director National Packing company.
Frank A. Fowler, director National Packing company and Swift & Co.
L. A. Carton, treasurer Swift & Co., director National Packing company.
Armour & Co.
Swift & Co.
Morris & Co.
Continental Packing company.

Upon a demurrer by counsel for the National Packing company and subsidiary concerns Judge Kenesaw M. Landis decided, June 23, that the indictment was invalid because it did not charge that during the last three years the defendants had been engaged in interstate commerce. He therefore sustained the demurrer, but at the same time ordered a special grand jury for July 14 to make a new investigation. This was concluded Sept. 12, when the following ten packers were indicted as individuals: J. Ogden Armour, Louis F. Swift, Edward Morris, Edward Tilden, Arthur Meeker, Edward F. Swift, Charles H. Swift, Louis H. Heyman, Thomas J. Connors, Francis A. Fowler. Three indictments were returned against each defendant, reciting the following violations of the Sherman antitrust law:

1. Combination in restraint of trade by the ten defendants, who are alleged to have used the National Packing company as the medium of their operations, the Swift, Armour and Morris interests holding stock therein—70,000 and 60,000 and 20,000 shares, respectively.

2. Conspiracy in restraint of trade, practically the same facts being set out as in the first indictment, except that "conspiracy" instead of a "combination" is alleged.

3. Monopoly of the trade in fresh meats by these unlawful means: Elimination of competition in the purchase of cattle and the sale of fresh meats; conducting the business of the National Packing company in harmony in all respects with the business of the Swift, Armour and Morris concerns; removing the New York Butchers' Dressed Meat company from the field of competition by purchasing stock in that corporation until the control of it had been obtained.

INDICTMENTS IN NEW JERSEY.

Six corporations and twenty-one individuals engaged in the cold-storage business in Jersey City, Hoboken and Bayonne were indicted for conspiracy by the Hudson county (New Jersey) grand jury, Feb. 25, 1910, the indictments being returned in the state Supreme court in Jersey City. The corporations involved were: The National Packing company, Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Morris & Co., Hammond Packing company and G. H. Hammond & Co. The individuals indicted, nearly all directors or former directors of the National Packing company, were: A. W. Armour, Kansas City, Mo.; J. Ogden Armour, Chicago, Ill.; James E. Bathgate, Jr., New York, N. Y.; L. A. Carton, Chicago, Ill.; Thomas J. Connors, Chicago, Ill.; F. V. Cooper, Jersey City, N. J.; Henry P. Darlington, Chicago, Ill.; George H. Edwards, New York, N. Y.; F. A. Fowler, Chicago, Ill.; A. A. Fuller, New York, N. Y.; D. E. Hartwell, New York, N. Y.; L. H. Heyman, Chicago, Ill.; Arthur Meeker, Chicago, Ill.; Edward Morris, Chicago, Ill.; Ira Nelson Morris, Chicago, Ill.; L. B. Patterson, Chicago, Ill.; Charles H. Swift, Chicago, Ill.; Edward F. Swift, Chicago, Ill.; Louis F. Swift, Chicago, Ill.; Edward Tilden, Chicago, Ill.; and Thomas E. Wilson, Chicago, Ill. The corporations were all Chicago concerns.

The indictment charged that the defendants met in Jersey City, March 1, 1908, and conspired to corner and limit the necessary and reasonable supply of meats and poultry for the consumption of the people of Hudson county so as to produce an artificial scarcity and to increase the market prices of the foodstuffs.

WRECK OF PERE MARQUETTE CAR FERRY.

The Pere Marquette car ferry steamer No. 18, bound from Ludington, Mich., to Milwaukee, Wis., sank in Lake Michigan between 6 and 8 o'clock Friday morning, Sept. 3, 1910, when about thirty miles off Sheboygan, Wis. Two passengers and thirty-one of the officers and crew were drowned; thirty-three persons were rescued by car ferry No. 17, which had been summoned to the scene by a wireless call for help. The exact cause of the disaster could not be ascertained. The weather at the time it occurred was good and only a moderate sea was running.

The structure was highly inflammable and escape by the stairways was cut off before many of the employees could reach them. There were two narrow fire escapes, the lower platforms of which were twenty-five feet from the sidewalk. More than fifty of the employees were taken to hospitals to be treated for their injuries.

LORIMER ELECTION INVESTIGATION.

The election of William Lorimer, republican, of Chicago, to the United States senate by a combination of republicans and democrats in the Illinois legislature May 26, 1909, resulted in 1910 in investigations by the grand juries of Cook and Sangamon counties and an inquiry by the committee on privileges and elections of the United States senate. Public attention was first called to the matter by a confession made by Representative Charles A. White of O'Fallon, Ill., and published in the Chicago Tribune, April 30, to the effect that he and others had been paid cash for voting for Mr. Lorimer for senator. May 6 Representative Lee O'Neill Brown of Ottawa, leader of the democratic minority in the house, was indicted on the charge of bribery, it being alleged that he had paid $850 to Representative Charles A. White in Chicago, June 16, 1909, on a contract and for his vote for William Lorimer as United States senator. On the same date the grand jury indicted Representative Robert E. Wilson of Chicago, democrat, and Representative Michael S. Link of Mitchell, democrat, on the charge of perjury in connection with their testimony as to the alleged division of a legislative "jack pot" at the Southern hotel in St. Louis, July 15, 1909.

May 7 statements were made by Representatives Michael S. Link and H. C. J. Beckemeyer which were held to be corroborative of Representative White's legislative-bribery story. By so doing Mr. Link purged himself of the charge of perjury.

May 27 State Senator D. W. Holstlaw, democrat, representing the 42d senatorial district, was indicted by the grand jury of Sangamon county on two counts, charging him with perjury in testimony given by him in the Springfield investigation of legislative bribery. The following day he made certain admissions to the grand jury, one of them being that State Senator John Broderick, democrat, of Chicago, had paid him $2,500 after he had cast his vote for Lorimer for senator. As a result of his testimony the following men were indicted: State Senator John Broderick of Chicago, charged with bribery.

State Senator Stanton C. Pemberton of Oakland, charged with conspiracy to commit bribery.
State Senator D. W. Holstlaw of Iuka, charged with conspiracy to commit bribery.

Representative Joseph S. Clark of Vandalia, charged with conspiracy to commit bribery.

The indictment against Senator Holstlaw was not pressed. In a signed note to the public he made this statement:

"I voted for William Lorimer for United States senator and received therefor $2,500. I also received $700, which was given to me without explanation with the statement that it was coming to me. I was promised $1,500 for my connection with the letting of the furniture contract."

The furniture contract referred to was one for supplying the statehouse with new desks to replace others that were declared to be perfectly good. Senator Holstlaw resigned as senator June 3.

Lee O'Neill Browne was placed on trial before Judge McSurely in the Superior court of Cook county June 7, and the case went to the jury June 24. After being out 115 hours and 20 minutes the jury reported that it was unable to agree and was discharged. It was said that eight stood for conviction and four for acquittal. Mr. Browne was again placed on trial the second time Aug. 1 and was acquitted by the jury Sept. 9.

In response to a request by Mr. Lorimer, the United States senate adopted the following resolution June 20:

"Resolved, That the committee on privileges and elections of the senate, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized and directed to investigate certain charges against William Lorimer, a senator from the state of Illinois, and to report to the senate whether, in the election of said William Lorimer as a senator of the United States from said state of Illinois, there were used or employed corrupt methods or practices; that said committee or subcommittee be authorized to sit during the sessions of the senate and during any recess of the senate or of congress, to hold its sessions at such place or places as it shall deem most convenient for the purposes of the investigation, to employ a stenographer, to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and that the expenses of the inquiry shall be paid from the contingent fund of the senate upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the committee."

June 21 the following subcommittee was appointed to make a thorough investigation of the Illinois senatorial bribery scandal: Republican senators—J. C. Burrows, Michigan, chairman; W. P. Dillingham, Vermont; Robert J. Gamble, South Dakota; Weldon B. Fraker, Tennessee; Thomas H. Faynter, Kentucky; Joseph H. Johnston, Alabama. Senator Dillingham was unable to serve and Senator Morgan G. Bulkeley of Connecticut was appointed to take his place. The committee met in Chicago and, after some delay, began the taking of testimony Sept. 26. Senator Lorimer was represented by Attorneys Elbridge Haney and P. H. O'Donnell and his accusers by Attorney Alfred S. Austrian. The committee continued the investigation in Chicago until Oct. 8, when it adjourned. It met in Washington and Dec. 12 decided that the charges were not sustained.

DEATH OF MRS. MARY BAKER EDDY.

Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, discoverer and founder of Christian science and author of its textbook, "Science and Health, with Key to the Scriptures," passed away at 10:45 p. m., Saturday, Dec. 3, 1910, at her home on Beacon street, Chestnut Hill, Mass. Her illness was of brief duration and was attributed to old age. She was born in Bow, N. H., July 16, 1821. Christian science was proclaimed by her in 1866 and the textbook of the new faith was published in 1875. The First Church of Christ, Scientist, was formed in Boston in 1879 and two years later Mrs. Eddy was ordained as its pastor.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

To the Senate and House of Representatives: During the past year the foreign relations of the United States have continued upon a basis of friendship and good understanding.

The year has been notable as witnessing the pacific settlement of two important international controversies before the permanent court of The Hague. The arbitration of the fisheries dispute between the United States and Great Britain, which has been the source of nearly continuous diplomatic correspondence since the fisheries convention of 1818, has given an award which is satisfactory to both parties. This arbitration is particularly noteworthy not only because of the eminently just results secured, but also because it is the first arbitration held under the general arbitration treaty of April 4, 1908, between the United States and Great Britain, and disposes of a controversy the settlement of which has resisted every other resource of diplomacy, and which for nearly ninety years has been the cause of friction between two countries whose common interest lies in maintaining the most friendly and cordial relations with each other.

The United States was ably represented before the tribunal. The complicated history of the questions arising made the issue depend more than ordinarily in such cases upon the care and skill with which our case was presented, and I should be wanting in proper recognition of a great patriotic service if I did not refer to the lucid historical analysis of the facts and the signal ability and force of argument—six days in length—presented to the court in support of our case by Mr. Elihu Root. As secretary of state Mr. Root had given close study to the intricate facts bearing on the controversy, and by diplomatic correspondence had helped to frame the issues. At the solicitation of the secretary of state and myself Mr. Root, though burdened by his duties as senator from New York, undertook the preparation of the case as leading counsel, with the condition, imposed by himself, that in view of his position as senator he should not receive any compensation.

The tribunal constituted at The Hague by the governments of the United States and Venezuela has completed its deliberations and has rendered an award in the case of the Orinoco Steamship company against Venezuela. The award may be regarded as satisfactory since it has, pursuant to the contentions of the United States, recognized a number of important principles making for a judicial attitude in the determining of international disputes.

FOR COURT OF NATIONS.

In view of grave doubts which have been raised as to the constitutionality of The Hague convention for the establishment of an international prize court, now before the senate for ratification because of that provision of the convention which provides that there may be an appeal to the proposed court from the decisions of national courts, this government proposed, in an identic circular note addressed to those powers who had taken part in the London maritime conference, that the powers signatory to the convention, if confronted with such difficulty, might insert a reservation to the effect that appeals to the international prize court in respect to decisions of its national tribunals should take the form of a direct claim for compensation; that the proceedings thereupon to be taken should be in the form of a trial de novo, and that judgment of the court should consist of compensation for the illegal capture, irrespective of the decision of the national court whose judgment had thus been internationally involved. As the result of an informal discussion it was decided to provide such procedure by means of a separate protocol, which should be ratified at the same time as the prize-court convention itself.

Accordingly, the government of the Netherlands, at the request of this government, proposed under date of May 24, 1910, to the powers signatory to The Hague convention, the negotiation of a supplemental protocol embodying stipulations providing for this alternative procedure. It is gratifying to observe that this additional protocol is being signed without objection by the powers signatory to the original convention, and that there is every reason to believe that the international prize court will soon be established.

The identic circular note also proposed that the international prize court when established should be endowed with the functions of an arbitral court, of justice under and pursuant to the recommendation adopted by the last Hague conference. The replies received from the various powers to this proposal inspire the hope that this also may be accomplished within the reasonably near future.

It is believed that the establishment of these two tribunals will go a long way toward securing the arbitration of many questions which have heretofore threatened and at times destroyed the peace of nations.

LIMIT OF ARMAMENTS.

Appreciating these enlightened tendencies of modern times, the congress at its last session passed a law providing for the appointment of a commission of five members "to be appointed by the president of the United States to consider the expediency of utilizing existing international agencies for the purpose of limiting the armaments of the nations of the world by international agreement, and of constituting the combined navies of the world an international force for the preservation of universal peace, and to consider and report upon any other means to diminish the expenditures of government for military purposes and to lessen the probabilities of war."

I have not as yet made appointments to this commission because I have invited and am awaiting the expressions of foreign governments as to their willingness to co-operate with us in the appointment of similar commissions or representatives who would meet with our commissioners and by joint action seek to make their work effective.

Several important treaties have been negotiated with Great Britain in the last twelve months. A preliminary diplomatic agreement has been reached regarding the arbitration of pecuniary claims which each government has against the other. This agreement limits the schedules of claims annexed, will, as soon as the schedules are arranged, be submitted to the senate for approval.

An agreement between the United States and Great Britain with regard to the location of the international boundary line between the United States and Canada in Passamaquoddy bay and the middle of Grand Manan channel was reached in a treaty concluded May 21, 1910, which has been ratified by both governments and proclaimed, thus making unnecessary the arbitration provided for in the previous treaty of April 11, 1908.

The convention concluded Jan. 11, 1909, between the United States and Great Britain, providing for the settlement of international differences between the United States and Canada, including the apportionment between the two countries of certain of the boundary waters and the appointment of commissioners to adjust certain other questions, has been ratified by both governments and proclaimed.

The work of the international fisheries commission appointed in 1908, under the treaty of April 11, 1908, between Great Britain and the United States, has resulted in the formulation and recommendation of uniform regulations governing the fisheries of the boundary waters of Canada and the United States for the purpose of protecting and increasing the supply of food fish in such waters. In completion of this work the regulations agreed upon require congressional legislation to make them effective and for their enforcement in fulfillment of the treaty stipulations.

REVOLUTION IN PORTUGAL.

In October last the monarchy in Portugal was overthrown, a provisional republic was proclaimed and there was set up a de facto government which was promptly recognized by the government of the United States for purposes of ordinary intercourse pending formal recognition by this and other powers of the governmental entity to be duly established by the national sovereignty.

A disturbance among the native tribes of Liberia in a portion of the republic during the early part of this year resulted in the sending, under the treaty of 1892, of an American vessel of war to the disaffected district, and the Liberian authorities, assisted by the good offices of the American naval officers, were able to restore order. The negotiations which have been undertaken for the amelioration of the conditions found in Liberia by the American commission, whose report I transmitted to congress on March 25 last, are being brought to conclusion, and it is thought that within a short time practical measures of relief may be put into effect through the good offices of this government and the cordial co-operation of other governments interested in Liberia's welfare.

To return the visit of the special embassy sent to announce the accession of his majesty Mehmed V., emperor of the Ottomans, I sent to Constantinople a special ambassador who, in addition to this mission of ceremony, was charged with the duty of expressing to the Ottoman government the value attached by the government of the United States to increased and more important relations between the countries and the desire of the United States to contribute to the larger economic and commercial development due to the new regime in Turkey.

The rapid development now beginning in that ancient empire and the marked progress and increased commercial importance of Bulgaria, Roumania and Servia make it particularly opportune that the possibilities of American commerce in the near east should receive due attention.

The national skopshina having expressed its will that the principality of Montenegro be raised to the rank of kingdom, the prince of Montenegro on Aug. 15 last assumed the title of king of Montenegro. It gave me pleasure to accord to the new kingdom the recognition of the United States.

CHINA CENTER OF INTEREST.

The center of interest in far eastern affairs during the past year has again been China.

It is gratifying to note that the negotiations for a loan to the Chinese government for the construction of the trunk railway lines from Hankow southward to Canton and westward through the Yangtze valley, known as the Hukuang loan, were concluded by the representatives of the various financial groups in May last and the results approved by their respective governments. The agreement, already initiated by the Chinese government, is now awaiting formal ratification. The basis of the settlement of the terms of this loan was one of exact equality between America, Great Britain, France and Germany in respect to financing the loan and supplying materials for the proposed railways and their future branches.

The application of the principle underlying the policy of the United States in regard to the Hukuang loan, viz., that the internationalization of the foreign interest in such of the railways of China as may be financed by foreign countries, was suggested on a broader scale by the secretary of state in a proposal for internationalization and commercial neutralization of all the railways of Manchuria. While the principle which led to the proposal of this government was generally admitted by the powers to whom it was addressed, the governments of Russia and Japan apprehended practical difficulties in the execution of the larger plan which prevented their ready adherence. The question of constructing the Chinchow-Aigun railway by means of an international loan to China is, however, still the subject of friendly discussion by the interested parties.

The policy of this government in these matters has been directed by a desire to make the use of American capital in the development of China an instrument in the promotion of China's welfare and material prosperity without prejudice to her legitimate rights as an independent political power.

This policy has recently found further exemplification in the assistance given by this government to the negotiations between China and a group of American bankers for a loan of $50,000,000 to be employed chiefly in currency reform. The confusion which has from ancient times existed in the monetary usages of the Chinese has been one of the principal obstacles to commercial intercourse with that people. The United States in its treaty of 1903 with China obtained a pledge from the latter to introduce a uniform monetary code, and the following year, at the request of China, this government sent to Peking a member of the international exchange commission, to discuss with the Chinese government the best methods of introducing the reform.

In 1903 China sent a commissioner to the United States to consult with American financiers as to the possibility of securing a large loan with which to inaugurate the new currency system, but the death of their majesties, the empress dowager and the emperor of China, interrupted the negotiations, which were not resumed until a few months ago, when this government was asked to communicate to the bankers concerned the request of China for a loan of $50,000,000 for the purpose under review. A preliminary agreement between the American group and China has been made covering the loan.

For the success of this loan and the contemplated reforms which are of the greatest importance to the commercial interests of the United States and the civilized world at large, it is realized that an expert will be necessary, and this government has received assurances from China that such an adviser, who shall be an American, will be engaged.

It is a matter of interest to Americans to note the success which is attending the efforts of China to establish gradually a system of representative government. The provincial assemblies were opened in October, 1909, and in October of the present year a consultative body, the nucleus of the future national parliament, held its first session at Peking.

The further been marked by two important international agreements relating to far-eastern affairs. In the Russo-Japanese agreement relating to Manchuria, signed July 4, 1910, this government was gratified to note an assurance of continued peaceful conditions in that region and the readjustment of the policies with respect to China, to which the United States, together with all other interested powers, are alike solemnly committed.

The treaty annexing Korea to the empire of Japan, promulgated Aug. 29, 1910, marks the final step in a process of control of the ancient empire by her powerful neighbor that has been in progress for several years past. In communicating the fact of annexation the Japanese government gave to the government of the United States assurances of the full protection of the rights of American citizens in Korea under the changed conditions.

Friendly visits of many distinguished persons from the far east have been made during the year. Chief among these were their imperial highnesses Princes Tsai-tao and Tsai-Hsun of China and his imperial highness Prince Higashi Fushimi and Prince Tokugawa, president of the house of peers of Japan. The secretary of war has recently visited Japan and China in connection with his tour to the Philippines, and a large delegation of American business men are at present traveling in China. This exchange of friendly visits has had the happy effect of even further strengthening our friendly international relations.

SISTER REPUBLICS CELEBRATE.

During the last year several of our southern sister republics celebrated the 100th anniversary of their independence. In honor of these events special embassies were sent from this country to Argentina, Chile and Mexico, where the gracious reception and splendid hospitality extended to them manifest the cordial relations and friendship existing between these countries and the United States, relations which I am happy to believe have never before been upon so high a plane and so solid a basis as at present.

The congressional commission appointed under a concurrent resolution to attend the festivities celebrating the centennial anniversary of Mexican independence, together with a special ambassador, were received with the highest honors and with the greatest cordiality, and returned with the report of the hearty hospitality and warm reception of President Diaz and the Mexican people, which left no doubt of the desire of the immediately neighboring republic to continue the mutually beneficial and intimate relations which I feel sure the two governments will ever cherish.

At the fourth pan-American conference, which met in Buenos Aires during July and August last, after seven weeks of harmonious deliberation three conventions were signed providing for the regulation of trade marks, patents and copyrights, which, when ratified by the different governments, will go far toward furnishing to American authors, patentees and owners of trade marks the protection needed in localities where heretofore it has been either lacking or inadequate. Further, a convention for the arbitration of pecuniary claims was signed and a number of important resolutions passed. The conventions will in due course be transmitted to the senate and the report of the delegation of the United States will be communicated to the congress for its information. The special cordiality between representative men from all parts of America which was shown at this conference cannot fail to react upon and draw still closer the relations between the countries which took part in it.

The international bureau of American republics is doing a broad and useful work for pan-American commerce and comity. Its duties were much enlarged by the international conference of American states at Buenos Aires and its name was shortened to the more practical and expressive term of Pan-American Union. Located now in its new building, which was specially dedicated April 26 of this year to the development of friendship, trade and peace among the American nations, it has improved instrumentalities to serve the twenty-two republics of this hemisphere.

I am glad to say that the action of the United States in its desire to remove imminent danger of war between Peru and Ecuador growing out of a boundary dispute, with the co-operation of Brazil and the Argentine Republic as joint mediators with this government has already resulted successfully in preventing war. The government of Chile, while not one of the mediators, lent effective aid in furtherance of a preliminary agreement likely to lead on to an amicable settlement, and it is not doubted that the good offices of the mediating powers and the conciliatory co-operation of the governments directly interested will finally lead to a removal of this perennial cause of friction between Ecuador and Peru. The inestimable value of cordial co-operation between the sister republics of America for the maintenance of peace in this hemisphere has never been more clearly shown than in this mediation, by which three American governments have given to this hemisphere the honor of first invoking the most far-reaching provisions of The Hague convention for the pacific settlement of international disputes.

There has been signed by the representatives of the United States and Mexico a protocol submitting to the United States-Mexican boundary commission (whose membership for the purpose of this case is to be increased by the addition of a citizen of Canada) the question of sovereignty over the Chamizal tract, which lies within the present physical boundaries of the city of El Paso, Tex. The determination of this question will remove a source of no little annoyance to the two governments.

The republic of Honduras has for many years been burdened with a heavy bonded debt held in Europe, the interest on which long ago fell in arrears. Finally conditions were such that it became imperative to refund the debt and place the finances of the republic upon a sound basis. Last year a group of American bankers undertook to do this and to advance funds for railway and other improvements contributing directly to the country's prosperity and commerce—an arrangement which has long been desired by this government. Negotiations to this end have been under way for more than a year, and it is now confidently believed that a short time will suffice to conclude an arrangement which will be satisfactory to the foreign creditors, eminently advantageous to Honduras and highly creditable to the judgment and foresight of the Honduran government. This is much to be desired, since, as recognized by the Washington conventions, a strong Honduras would tend immensely to the progress and prosperity of Central America.

During the past year the Republic of Nicaragua has been the scene of internecine struggle. Gen. Zelaya, for seventeen years the absolute ruler of Nicaragua, was throughout his career the disturber of Central America and opposed every plan for the promotion of peace and friendly relations between the five republics. When the people of Nicaragua were finally driven into rebellion by his lawless exactions he violated the laws of war by the unwarranted execution of two American citizens who had regularly enlisted in the ranks of the revolutionists.

This and other offenses made it the duty of the American government to take measures with a view to ultimate reparation and for the safeguarding of its interests. This involved the breaking off of all diplomatic relations with the Zelaya government for the reasons laid down in a communication from the secretary of state, which also notified the contending factions in Nicaragua that this government would hold each to strict accountability for outrages on the rights of American citizens. American forces were sent to both coasts of Nicaragua to be in readiness should occasion arise to protect Americans and their interests and remained there until the war was over and peace had returned to that unfortunate country. These events, together with Zelaya's continued exactions, brought him so clearly to the bar of public opinion that he was forced to resign and to take refuge abroad.

In the above-mentioned communication of the secretary of state to the charge d'affaires of the Zelaya government the opinion was expressed that the revolution represented the wishes of the majority of the Nicaraguan people. This has now been proved beyond doubt by the fact that since the complete overthrow of the Madriz government and the occupation of the capital by the forces of the revolution all factions have united to maintain public order and, as a result of discussion with an agent of this government, sent to Managua at the request of the provisional government, comprehensive plans are being made for the future welfare of Nicaragua, including the rehabilitation of public credit. The moderation and conciliatory spirit shown by the various factions give ground for the confident hope that Nicaragua will soon take its rightful place among the law-abiding and progressive countries of the world.

It gratifies me exceedingly to announce that the Argentine Republic some months ago placed with American manufacturers a contract for the construction of two battleships and certain additional naval equipment. The extent of this work and its importance to the Argentine Republic make the placing of the bid an earnest of friendly feeling toward the United States.

TARIFF ISSUES ADJUSTED.

The new tariff law, in section 2, respecting the maximum and minimum tariffs of the United States, which provisions came into effect on April 1, 1910, imposed upon the president the responsibility of determining prior to that date whether or not any undue discrimination existed against the United States and its products in any country of the world with which we sustained commercial relations.

In the case of several countries instances of apparent undue discrimination against American commerce were found to exist. These discriminations were removed by negotiation. Prior to April 1, 1910, when the maximum tariff was to come into operation with respect to importations from all those countries in whose favor no proclamation applying the minimum tariff should be issued by the president, 134 such proclamations were issued. This series of proclamations embraced the entire commercial world, and hence the minimum tariff of the United States has been given universal application, thus testifying to the satisfactory character of our trade relations with foreign countries. Marked advantages to the commerce of the United States were obtained through these tariff settlements. Foreign nations are fully cognizant of the fact that under section 2 of the tariff act the president is required, whenever he is satisfied that the treatment accorded by him to the products of the United States is not such as to entitle them to the benefits of the minimum tariff of the United States, to withdraw those benefits by proclamation, giving ninety days' notice, after which the maximum tariff will apply to their dutiable products entering the United States. In its general operation this section of the tariff law has thus far proved a guaranty of continued commercial peace, although there are, unfortunately, instances where foreign governments deal arbitrarily with American interests within their jurisdiction in a manner injurious and inequitable.

The policy of broader and closer trade relations with the dominion of Canada, which was initiated in the adjustment of the maximum and minimum provisions of the tariff act of August, 1909, has proved mutually beneficial. It justifies further efforts for the readjustment of the commercial relations of the two countries so that their commerce may follow the channels natural to contiguous countries and be commensurate with the steady expansion of trade and industry on both sides of the boundary line. The reciprocation on the part of the dominion government of the sentiment which was expressed by this government was followed in October by the suggestion that it would be glad to have the negotiations, which had been temporarily suspended during the summer, resumed. In accordance with this suggestion the secretary of state, by my direction, dispatched two representatives of the department of state as special commissioners to Ottawa to confer with representatives of the dominion government. They were authorized to take such steps for formulating a reciprocal trade agreement as might be necessary and to receive and consider any proposition which the dominion government might care to submit.

Pursuant to the instructions issued conferences were held by these commissioners with officials of the dominion government at Ottawa in the early part of November. The negotiations were conducted on both sides in a spirit of mutual accommodation. The discussion of the common commercial interests of the two countries had for its object a satisfactory basis for a trade arrangement which offers the prospect of a freer interchange for the products of the United States and of Canada. The conferences were adjourned to be resumed in Washington in January, when it is hoped that the aspiration of both governments for a mutually advantageous measure of reciprocity will be realized.

All these tariff negotiations so vital to our commerce and industry and the duty of jealousy guarding the equitable and just treatment of our products, capital and industry abroad, devolve upon the department of state.

The Argentine battleship contracts, like the subsequent important one for Argentine railway equipment, and those for Cuban government vessels, were secured for our manufacturers largely through the good offices of the department of state.

The efforts of that department to secure for citizens of the United States equal opportunities in the markets of the world and to expand American commerce have been most successful. The volume of business obtained in new fields of competition and upon new lines is already very great and congress is urged to continue to support the department of state in its endeavors for further trade expansion.

Our foreign trade merits the best support of the government and the most earnest endeavor of our manufacturers and merchants, who, if they do not already in all cases need a foreign market, are certain soon to become dependent on it. Therefore, now is the time to secure a strong position in this field.

I cannot leave this subject without emphasizing the necessity of such legislation as will make possible and convenient the establishment of American banks and branches of American banks in foreign countries. Only by such means can our foreign trade be favorably financed, necessary credits be arranged and proper avail be made of commercial opportunities in foreign countries, and most especially in Latin America.

DEMANDS MERCHANT MARINE.

Another instrumentality indispensable to the unhampered and natural development of American commerce is merchant marine. All maritime and commercial nations recognize the importance of this factor. The greatest commercial nations, our competitors, jealously foster their merchant marine. Perhaps nowhere is the need for rapid and direct mail, passenger and freight communication quite so urgent as between the United States and Latin America. We can secure in no other quarter of the world such immediate benefits in friendship and commerce as would flow from the establishment of direct lines of communications with the countries of Latin America adequate to meet the requirements of a rapidly increasing appreciation of the reciprocal dependence of the countries of the western hemisphere upon each other's products, sympathies and assistance.

I alluded to this most important subject in my last annual message; it has often been before you and I need not recapitulate the reasons for its recommendation. Unless prompt action be taken the completion of the Panama canal will find this the only great commercial nation unable to avail in international maritime business of this great contribution to the means of the world's commercial intercourse.

Quite aside from the commercial aspect, unless we create a merchant marine, where can we find the seafaring population necessary as a natural naval reserve and where could we find, in case of war, the transports and subsidiary vessels without which a naval fleet is arms without a body? For many reasons I cannot too strongly urge upon the congress the passage of a measure, by mail subsidy or other subvention, adequate to guarantee the establishment and rapid development of an American merchant marine, the restoration of the American flag to its ancient place upon the seas.

Of course such aid ought only to be given under condition of publicity of each beneficiary's business and accounts which would show that the aid received was needed to maintain the trade and was properly used for that purpose.

With our increasing international intercourse it becomes incumbent upon me to repeat more emphatically than ever the recommendation which I made in my inaugural address, that congress shall at once give to the courts of the United States jurisdiction to punish as a crime the violation of the rights of alien consular service treaty with the United States in order that the general government of the United States shall be able, when called upon by a friendly nation, to redeem its solemn promise by treaty to secure to the citizens or subjects of that nation resident in the United States freedom from violence and due process of law in respect to their life, liberty and property.

DIPLOMATIC MERIT PLAN.

I also, and for the same general reasons, strongly commend to the favorable action of the congress the enactment of a law applying to the diplomatic and consular service the principles embodied in section 1753 of the revised statutes of the United States, in the civil-service act of Jan. 16, 1883, and the executive orders of June 27, 1906, and of Nov. 26, 1909.

The excellent results which have attended the partial application of civil-service principles to the diplomatic and consular services are an earnest of the benefit to be wrought by a wider and more permanent extension of those principles to both branches of the foreign service. The marked improvement in the consular service during the four years since the principles of the civil-service act were applied to that service in a limited way, and the good results already noticeable from a similar application of civil-service principles to the diplomatic service a year ago, convince me that the enactment into law of the general principles of the existing executive regulations could not fail to effect further improvement of both branches of the foreign service, offering as it would by its assurance of permanency of tenure and promotion on merit an inducement for the entry of capable young men into the service and an incentive to those already in to put forth their best efforts to attain and maintain that degree of efficiency which the interests of our international relations and commerce demand.

During many years past appeals have been made from time to time to congress in favor of government ownership of embassy and legation premises abroad. The arguments in favor of such ownership have been many and oft repeated and are well known to the congress. The acquisition by the government of suitable residences and offices for its diplomatic officers, especially in the capitals of the Latin-American states and of Europe, is so important and necessary to an improved diplomatic service that I have no hesitation in urging upon the congress the passage of some measure similar to that favorably reported by the house committee on foreign affairs on Feb. 14, 1910 (report No. 438), that would authorize the gradual and annual acquisition of premises for diplomatic use.

The work of the diplomatic service is devoid of partisanship; its importance should appeal to every American citizen and should receive the generous consideration of the congress.

ECONOMY THE WATCHWORD.

Every effort has been made by each department chief to reduce the estimated cost of his department for the ensuing fiscal year ending June 30, 1912. I say this in order that congress may understand that these estimates thus made present the smallest sum which will maintain the departments, bureaus and offices of the government and meet its other obligations under existing law, and that a cut of these estimates would result in embarrassing the executive branch of the government in the performance of its duties. This remark does not apply to the river and harbor estimates, except to those for expenses of maintenance and the meeting obligations under authorized contracts, nor does it apply to the public building bill nor to the navy building programme. Of course, as to these congress could withhold any part or all of the estimates for them without interfering with the discharge of the ordinary obligations of the government or the performance of the functions of its departments, bureaus and offices.

The final estimates for the year ending June 30, 1912, as they have been sent to the treasury on Nov. 29 of this year, for the ordinary expenses of the government, including those for public buildings, rivers and harbors, and the navy building programme, amount to $630,494,013.12. This is $52,964,887.36 less than the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911, is $16,883,153.44 less than the total estimates, including supplemental estimates, submitted to congress by the treasury for the year 1911, and is $5,574,659.39 less than the original estimates submitted by the treasury for 1911.

These figures do not include the appropriations for the Panama canal, the policy in respect to which ought to be, and is, to spend as much each year as can be economically and effectively expended in order to complete the canal as promptly as possible, and, therefore, the ordinary motive for cutting down the expenses of the government does not apply to appropriations for this purpose. It will be noted that the estimates for the Panama canal for the ensuing year are more than $56,000,000, an increase of $20,000,000 over the amount appropriated for this year—a difference due to the fact that the estimates for 1912 include something over $19,000,000 for the fortification of the canal.

Against the estimated expenditures of $630,494,013.12, the treasury has estimated receipts for next year at $680,000,000, making a probable surplus of ordinary receipts over ordinary expenditures of about $50,000,000, or, taking into account the estimates for the Panama canal, which are $56,920,847.69, and which will ultimately be paid in bonds, it will leave a deficit for the next year of about $7,000,000, if congress shall conclude to fortify the canal. The cost of the fortifications is about $19,000,000. Should there be no appropriations this year for fortifications, then there would be even including the Panama canal appropriations, a surplus of about $12,000,000, according to the treasury estimates.

A table showing in detail the estimates and the comparisons referred to follows: [See page 414.]

TREASURY REFORMS.

The treasury department is one of the original departments of the government. With the changes in the monetary system made from time to time and with the creation of national banks, it was thought necessary to organize new bureaus and divisions, which were added in a somewhat haphazard way and resulted in a duplication of duties which might well now be ended.

This lack of system and economic co-ordination has attracted the attention of the head of that department, who has been giving his time for the last two years, with the aid of experts and by consulting his bureau chiefs, to its reformation; he has abolished 400 places in the civil service without at all injuring its efficiency, and at the risk of being tedious, but merely to illustrate the character of the reforms that are possible, I shall comment on a number of changes that are being made or ought to be made by legislative aid.

The auditing system in vogue is as old as the government and the methods used are antiquated. There are six auditors and seven assistant auditors for the nine departments, and under the present system the only function which the auditor of a department exercises is to determine, on accounts presented by disbursing officers, that the object of the expenditure was within the law and the appropriation made by congress for the purpose on its face, and that the calculations in the accounts are correct. He does not examine the merits of the transaction or determine the reasonableness of the price paid for the articles purchased, nor does he furnish any substantial check upon disbursing officers and the heads of departments for their sufficient promptness to enable the government to recoup itself in full measure for unlawful expenditure.

A careful plan is being devised and will be presented to congress with the recommendation that the force of auditors and employees under them be greatly reduced, thereby effecting substantial economy. But this economy will be small compared with the larger economy that can be effected by consolidation and change of methods. The possibilities in this regard have been shown in the reduction of expenses and the importance of methods and efficiency in the office of auditor for the post-office department, who, without in the slightest degree impairing the comprehensiveness and efficiency of his work, has cut down the expenses of his office $120,000 a year.

Again, in the collection of the revenues, especially the customs revenue, very great improvement has been effected, and further improvements are contemplated. By the detection of frauds in weighing sugar upward of $3,400,000 has been recovered from the beneficiaries of the fraud, and an entirely new system free from the possibilities of such abuse has been devised. The department has perfected the method of collecting duties at the port of New York so as to save the government upward of $10,000,000 or $11,000,000, and the same spirit of change and reform has been infused into the other customs offices of the country.

The methods used at many places are archaic. There would seem to be no reason at all why the surveyor of the port, who really acts for the collector, should not be a subordinate of the collector at a less salary and directly under his control, and there is but little reason for the existence of the naval officer, who is a kind of local auditor. His work is mainly an examination of accounts, which is conducted again in Washington and which results in no greater security to the government. The naval officers in the various ports are presidential appointees, many of them drawing good salaries, and those offices should be abolished or with reduced force made part of the central auditing system.

There are entirely too many customs districts and too many customs collectors. These districts should be consolidated and the collectors in charge of them, who draw good salaries, many of them out of proportion to the collections made, should be abolished or treated as mere branch offices, in accordance with the plan of the treasury department, which will be presented for the consideration of congress. As an illustration, the cost of collecting $1 of revenue at typical small ports like the port of York, Me., was $50.04. At the port of Annapolis, Md., it cost $309.41 to collect $1 of revenue; at Natchez, $52.76; at Alexandria, Va., $122.49.

It is not essential to the preventing of smuggling that customs districts should be increased in number. The violation of the customs laws can be as easily prevented and much more economically by the revenue cutter service and by the use of the special agent traveling force of the treasury department. A reorganization of the special customs agents has been perfected with a view to retaining only those who have special knowledge of the customs laws, regulations and usual methods of evasion, and with this improvement there will be no danger to the government from the recommended consolidation and abolition of customs districts.

An investigation of the appraising system now in vogue in New York city has shown underappraisal and a sacrifice of the interests of the government, which is in the course of being remedied by reorganization and the employment of competent experts. Prosecutions have been instituted growing out of the frauds there discovered and are now awaiting hearing in the federal courts.

Very great improvements have been made in respect to the mints and assay offices. Diminished appropriations have been asked for those whose continuance is unnecessary, and this year's estimate of expenses is $326,000 less than two years ago. There is an opportunity for further saving in the abolition of several mints and assay offices that have now become unnecessary. During the last year 100 unnecessary employees have been dropped from the Philadelphia mint. Modern machinery has been installed there, more and better work has been done and the appropriations have been consequently diminished.

In the bureau of engraving and printing great economies have been effected. Useless divisions have been abolished with the result of saving $440,000 this year in the total expenses of the bureau, despite increased business.

The treasurer's office and that of the division of public moneys in part cover the same functions, and this is also true of the office of the register and the division of loans and currency. Plans for the elimination of the duplication in these offices will be presented to congress.

The office of the comptroller of the currency is one most important in the preservation of proper banking methods in the national banking system of the United States, and the present comptroller has impressed his subordinates with the necessity of so conducting their investigations as to establish the principle that every bank failure is unnecessary because proper inspection and notice of threatening conditions to the responsible directors and officers can prevent it.

In our public buildings we still suffer from the method of appropriation, which has been so much criticised in connection with our rivers and harbors. Some method should be devised for control.

ling the supply of public buildings, so that they will harmonize with the actual needs of the government. Not only are buildings appropriated for by congress which are not needed and buildings left unappropriated for by congress which are needed, but when it comes to the actual construction there has been in the past too little study of the building plans and sites with a view to the actual needs of the government. Postoffice buildings which are in effect warehouses for the economical handling of transportation of thousands of tons of mail have been made monumental structures, and often located far from the convenient and economical spot. In the actual construction of the buildings a closer scrutiny of the methods employed by the government architects or by architects employed by the government have resulted in decided economies. It is hoped that more time will give opportunity for a more thorough reorganization.

The last public building bill carried authorization of the ultimate expenditure of $33,011,500, and I approved it because of the many good features it contained. Just as I approved the river and harbor bill, but it was drawn upon a principle that ought to be abandoned. It seems to me that the wiser method of preparing a public building bill would be the preparation of a report by the commission of government experts, whose duty it should be to report to congress the government's needs in the way of the construction of public buildings in every part of the country, just as the army engineers make report with reference to the utility of proposed improvements in rivers and harbors, with the added function which I have recommended for the army engineers of including in their recommendation the relative importance of the various projects found to be worthy of approval and execution.

PRaises THE TARIFF BILL.

As the treasury department is the one through which the income of the government is collected and its expenditures are disbursed, this seems a proper place to consider the operation of the existing tariff bill, which became a law Aug. 6, 1909. As an income-producing measure, the existing tariff bill has never been exceeded by any customs bill in the history of the country.

The corporation excise tax, proportioned to the net income of every business corporation in the country, has worked well. The tax has been easily collected. Its prompt payment indicates that the incidence of the tax has not been heavy. It offers, moreover, an opportunity for knowledge by the government of the general condition and business of all corporations, and that means by far the most important part of the business of the country. In the original act provision was made for the publication of the returns. This provision was subsequently amended by congress and the matter left to the regulation of the president. I have directed the issue of the needed regulations and have made it possible for the public generally to know from an examination of the record the returns of all corporations the stock of which is listed on any public stock exchange or is offered for sale to the general public by advertisement or otherwise. The returns of those corporations whose stock is not so listed or offered for sale are directed to be open to the inspection and examination of creditors and stockholders of the corporation whose record is sought. The returns of all corporations are subject to the inspection of any government officer or to the examination of any court in which the return made by the corporation is relevant and competent evidence.

The schedules of the rates of duty in the Payne tariff act have been subjected to a great deal of criticism, some of it just, more of it unfounded, and to much misrepresentation. The act was adopted in pursuance of a declaration by the party which is responsible for it that a customs bill should be a tariff for the protection of home industries, the measure of the protection to be the difference between the cost of producing the imported article abroad and the cost of producing it at home, together with such addition to that difference as might give a reasonable profit to the home producer. The basis for the criticism of this tariff is that in respect to a number of the schedules the declared measure was not followed, but a higher difference retained or inserted by way of undue discrimination in favor of certain industries and manufactures. Little, if any, of the criticism of the tariff has been directed against the protective principle, more stated, but the main body of the criticism has been based on the charge that the attempt to conform to the measure of protection was not honestly and sincerely adhered to.

The time in which the tariff was prepared undoubtedly was so short as to make it impossible for the congress and its experts to acquire the information necessary strictly to conform to the declared measure. In order to avoid criticism of this kind in the future and for the purpose of more nearly conforming to the party promise, congress at its last session made provision, at my request, for the continuance of a board created under the authority of the maximum and minimum clause of the tariff bill and authorized this board to expend the money appropriated under my direction for the ascertainment of the cost of production at home and abroad of the various articles included in the schedules of the tariff. The tariff board thus appointed and authorized has been diligent in preparing itself for the necessary investigations.

The hope of those who have advocated the use of this board for tariff purposes is that the question of the rate of a duty imposed shall become more of a business question and less of a political question, to be ascertained by experts of long training and accurate knowledge. The halt in business and the shock to business, due to the announcement that a new tariff bill is to be prepared and put in operation, will be avoided by treating the schedules one by one as occasion shall arise for a change in the rates of each, and only after a report upon the schedule by the tariff board competent to make such report. It is not likely that the board will be able to make a report during the present session of congress on any of the schedules, because a proper examination involves an enormous amount of detail and a great deal of care, but I hope to be able at the opening of the new congress, or at least during the session of that congress, to bring to its attention the facts in regard to those schedules in the present tariff that may prove to need amendment.

The carrying out of this plan, of course, involves the full co-operation of congress in limiting the consideration in tariff matters to one schedule at a time, because if a proposed amendment to a tariff bill is to involve a complete consideration of all the schedules and another revision, then we shall only repeat the evil from which the business of this country has in times past suffered most grievously by stagnation and uncertainty, pending a resettlement of a law affecting all business directly or indirectly, and the effect of which no wise business man would ignore in new projects and new investments. I cannot too much emphasize the importance and benefit of the plan above proposed for the treatment of the tariff. It facilitates the removal of noteworthy defects in an important law without a disturbance of business prosperity, which is even more important to the happiness and the comfort of the people than the elimination of instances of injustice in the tariff.

The inquiries which the members of the tariff board made during the last summer into the methods pursued by other governments with reference to the fixing of tariffs and the determination of their effect upon trade show that each government maintains an office or bureau, the officers and employees of which have made their life work the study of tariff matters, of foreign and home prices and cost of articles imported and the effect of the tariff upon trade, so that whenever a change is thought to be necessary in the tariff law this office is the source of the most reliable information as to the propriety of the change and its effect. I am strongly convinced that we need in this government just such an office and that it can be secured by making the tariff board already appointed a permanent tariff commission, with such duties, powers and emoluments as it may seem wise to congress to give. It has been proposed to enlarge the board from three to five. The present number is convenient, but I do not know that an increase of two members would be objectionable.

Whether or not the protective policy is to be continued and the degree of protection to be accorded to our home industries are questions which the people must decide through their chosen representatives, but whatever policy is adopted it is clear that the necessary legislation should be based on an impartial, thorough and continuous study of the facts.

FAVORS CURRENCY STUDY.

The method of impartial scientific study by experts as a preliminary to legislation, which we hope to see minutely adopted as our fixed national policy with respect to the tariff, rivers and harbors, waterways and public buildings, is also being pursued by the nonpartisan monetary commission of congress. An exhaustive and most valuable study of the banking and currency systems of foreign countries has been completed.

A comparison of the business methods and institutions of our powerful and successful commercial rivals with our own is sure to be of immense value. I urge upon congress the importance of a nonpartisan and disinterested study and consideration of our banking and currency system. It is idle to dream of commercial expansion and of the development of our markets on a scale that measures up to our matchless opportunities unless we can lay a solid foundation in a sound and enduring banking and currency system. The problem is not partisan, is not sectional—it is national.

ARMY SMALL FOR NATION.

The war department has within its jurisdiction the management of the army, and, in connection therewith, the coast defenses; the government of the dependencies of the Philippines and of Porto Rico; the recommendation of plans for the improvement of harbors and waterways and their execution when adopted; and, by virtue of an executive order, the supervision of the construction of the Panama canal.

The army of the United States is a small body compared with the total number of people for the preservation of whose peace and good order it is a last recourse. The army now numbers about 80,000 men, of whom about 18,000 are engaged in the coast artillery and detailed to the management and use of the guns in the forts and batteries that protect our coasts. The rest of the army, or about 60,000, is the mobile part of our national forces and is divided into thirty-one regiments of infantry, including the Porto Rican regiment, fifteen regiments of cavalry, six regiments of field artillery, a corps of ordnance, of engineers and of signal, a quartermaster's department, a commissary department and a medical corps.

The general plan for an army of the United States at peace should be that of a skeleton organization, with an excess of trained officers and thus capable of rapid enlargement by enlistments, to be supplemented in emergency by the national militia and a volunteer force. In some measure this plan has been adopted in the very large proportion of cavalry and field artillery as compared with infantry in the present army and on a peace basis. An infantry force can be trained in six months; a cavalry or a light artillery force not under one and one-half or two years; hence the importance of having ready a larger number of the more skilled soldiers.

The militia system, for which congress by the constitution is authorized to provide, was developed by the so-called Dick law, under which the discipline, the tactics, the drill, the rank, the uniform and the various branches of the militia are assimilated as far as possible to those of the regular army. Under the militia law, as the constitution provides, the governors of the states appoint the militia officers, but, by appropriations from congress, states have been induced to comply with the rules of assimilation between the regular army and the militia, so that now there is a force, the efficiency of which differs in different states, which could be incorporated under a single command with the regular army, and which for some time each year receives the benefit of drill and maneuvers under conditions approximating actual military service, under the supervision of regular army officers.

In the army of the United States, in addition to the regular forces and the militia forces which may be summoned to defense of the nation by the president, there is also the volunteer force, which made up a very large part of the army in the civil war, and which in any war of long continuance would become its most important constituent. There is an act which dates from the civil war, known as the volunteer act, which makes provision for the enlistment of volunteers in the army of the United States in time of war. This was found to be so defective in the Philippine war that a special act for the organization of volunteer regiments to take part in that war was adopted, and it was much better adapted to the necessities of the case.

There is now pending in congress a bill repealing the present volunteer act and making provision for the organization of volunteer forces in time of war which is admirably adapted to meet the exigencies which would be then presented. The passage of the bill would not entail a dollar's expense upon the government at this time or in the future, until war comes, but when war does come the methods therein directed are in accordance with the best military judgment as to what they ought to be, and the act would prevent the necessity for the discussion of new legislation and the delays incident to its consideration and adoption. I earnestly urge the passage of this volunteer bill.

I further recommend that congress establish a commission to determine as early as practicable a comprehensive policy for the organization, mobilization and administration of the regular army, the organized militia and the volunteer forces in the event of war.

One of the great difficulties in the prompt organization and mobilization of militia and volunteer forces is the absence of competent officers of the rank of captain to teach the new army, by the unit of the company, the business of being soldiers and of taking care of themselves so as to render effective service. This need of army officers can only be supplied by provisions of law authorizing the appointment of a greater number of army officers than are needed to supply the commands of regular army troops now enlisted in the service. There are enough regular army officers to command the troops now enlisted, but congress has authorized and the department has followed the example of congress and exercised the authority conferred by detailing these army officers to duty other than that of the command of troops. For there are a large number of army officers assigned to duty with military colleges or in colleges in which military training is given. Then a large number of officers are assigned to general staff duty, and there are various other places to which army officers can be and are legally assigned which take them away from their regiments and companies.

In order that the militia of each state should be properly drilled and made more like the regular army, regular army officers should be detailed to assist the adjutant-general of each state in the supervision of the state militia, but this is impossible unless provision is made by congress for a very considerable increase in the number of company and field officers of the army. A bill was pending in the last session of congress for this purpose, and I earnestly hope that, in the interest of the proper development of a republican army, an army small in the time of peace, but possible of prompt and adequate enlargement in time of war, shall become possible under the laws of the United States.

A bill, the strong argument for which can be based on the ground quite similar to that of the increased-officers bill, is the bill for the increase of sixty in the army engineers. The army engineers are largely employed in the expenditure of the moneys appropriated for the improvement of rivers and harbors. This, in addition to their military duties which include the construction of fortifications, both of our coasts and in our dependencies, together with the number used in the Panama canal work, requires many more engineers than the army has, and this shortness of supply in such officers delays important river and harbor work and important fortification work. I earnestly recommend the passage of this bill, which passed the house at the last session and is now pending in the senate.

TO STRENGTHEN PHILIPPINES.

I have directed that the estimates for appropriation for the improvement of coast defenses in the United States should be reduced to a minimum, while those for the completion of the needed fortifications at Corregidor in the Philippine islands and at Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian islands should be expedited as much as possible. The proposition to make Olongapo and Subig bay the naval base for the Pacific was given up, and it is to be treated merely as a supply station, while the fortifications in the Philippines are to be largely confined to Corregidor island and the adjacent islands which command the entrance to Manila bay and which are being rendered impregnable from land and sea attack. The Pacific naval base has been transferred to Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian islands. This necessitates the heavy fortification of the harbor and the establishment of an important military station near Honolulu. I urge that all the estimates made by the war department for these purposes be approved by congressional appropriation.

During the last summer, at my request, the secretary of war visited the Philippine islands and has described his trip in his report. He found the islands in a state of tranquility and growing prosperity, due largely to the change in the tariff laws, which has opened the markets of America to the products of the Philippines and has opened the Philippine markets to American manufactures. The rapid increase in the trade between the two countries is shown in the following table:

PROSPERITY IN PORTO RICO.

The year has been one of prosperity and progress in Porto Rico. Certain political changes are embodied in the bill "To provide a civil government for Porto Rico and for other purposes," which passed the house of representatives on June 15, 1910, at the last session of congress, and is now awaiting the action of the senate.

The importance of those features of this bill relating to public health and sanitation cannot be overestimated. The removal from politics of the judiciary by providing for the appointment of the municipal judges is excellent, and I recommend that a step further be taken by providing therein for the appointment of secretaries and marshals of these courts.

I believe that the provision in the bill for a partially elective senate, the number of elective members being progressively increased, is unwise, and that the composition of the senate as provided in the bill as introduced in the house far better meets conditions existing in Porto Rico. This is an important measure, and I recommend its early consideration and passage.

I have already expressed my opinion to congress in respect to the character of the river and harbor bills which should be enacted into law, and I have exercised as much power as I have under the law in directing the chief of engineers to make his reports to congress conform to the needs of the committee framing such a bill in determining which of the proposed improvements is the more important and ought to be completed first, and promptly.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

At the instance of Col. Goethals, the army engineer officer in charge of the work on the Panama canal, I have just made a visit to the isthmus to inspect the work done and to consult with him on the ground as to certain problems which are likely to arise in the near future. The progress of the work is most satisfactory. If no unexpected obstacle presents itself the canal will be completed well within the time fixed by Col. Goethals, to wit, Jan. 1, 1915, and within the estimate of cost, $375,000,000.

Press reports have reached the United States from time to time giving accounts of slides of earth of very large yardage in the Culebra cut and elsewhere along the line, from which it might be inferred that the work has been much retarded and that the time for completion has been necessarily postponed.

The report of Dr. Hayes of the geological survey, whom I sent within the last month to the isthmus to make an investigation, shows that this section of the canal zone is composed of sedimentary rocks of rather weak structure and subject to almost immediate disintegration when exposed to the air. Subsequent to the deposition of these sediments, igneous rocks, harder and more durable, have been thrust into them, and being cold at the time of their intrusion united but indifferently with the sedimentary rock at the contacts. The result of these conditions is that as the cut is deepened, causing unbalanced pressures, slides from the sides of the cut have occurred. These are in part due to the dawning of surface soil and decomposed sedimentary rocks upon inclined surfaces of the underlying uncomposited rock and in part to the crushing of structurally weak beds under excessive pressure.

These slides occur on one side or the other of the cut through a distance of four or five miles, and now that their character is understood allowance has been made in the calculations of yardage for the amount of slides which will have to be removed and the greater slope that will have to be given to the bank in many places in order to prevent their recurrence. Such allowance does not exceed 10,000,000 yards. Considering that the number of yards removed from this cut on an average of each month through the year is 1,300,000 and that the total material to be excavated, including slides, is about 30,000,000 yards, it is seen that this addition to the excavation does not offer any great reason for delay.

While this feature of the material to be excavated in the cut will not seriously delay or obstruct the construction of a canal of the lock type, the increase of excavation due to such slides in the cut made eighty-five feet deeper for a sea-level canal would certainly have been so great as to delay its completion to a time beyond the patience of the American people.

Among questions arising for present solution is the decision whether the canal shall be fortified. I have already stated to the congress that I strongly favor fortification and I now reiterate this opinion and ask your consideration of the subject in the light of the report already before you made by a competent board.

If, in our discretion, we believe modern fortifications to be necessary to the adequate protection and policing of the canal, then it is our duty to construct them. We have built the canal. It is our property. By convention we have indicated our desire for, and, indeed, undertaken its universal and equal use. It is also well known that one of the chief objects in the construction of the canal has been to increase the military effectiveness of our navy.

Failure to fortify the canal would leave the attainment of both these aims in the position of rights and obligations which we should be powerless to enforce and which could never in any other way be absolutely safeguarded against a desperate and irresponsible enemy.

Another question which arises for consideration and possible legislation is the question of tolls in the canal. This question is necessarily affected by the probable tonnage which will go through the canal. It is all a matter of estimate, but one of the government commission in 1900 investigated the question and made a report. He concluded that the total tonnage of the vessels employed in commerce that could use the isthmian canal in 1914 would amount to 6,843,805 tons net register, and that this traffic would increase 25.1 per cent per decade; that it was not probable that all the commerce included in the totals would at once abandon the routes at present followed and make use of the new canal, and that it might take some time, perhaps two years, to readjust trade with reference to the new conditions which the canal would establish. He did not include, moreover, the tonnage of war vessels, although it is to be inferred that such vessels would make considerable use of the canal. In the matter of tolls he reached the conclusion that a dollar a net ton would not drive business away from the canal, but that a higher rate would do so.

In determining what the tolls should be we certainly ought not to insist that for a good many years to come they should amount to enough to pay the interest on the investment of $400,000,000 which the United States has made in the construction of the canal. We ought not to do this, first, because the benefits to be derived by the United States from this expenditure are not to be measured solely by a return upon the investment. If it were, then the construction might well have been left to private enterprise. It was because an adequate return upon the money invested could not be expected immediately, or in the near future, and because there were peculiar political advantages to be derived from the construction of the canal, that it necessarily fell to the government to advance the money and perform the work.

In addition to the benefit to our naval strength the canal trade greatly increases the trade facilities of the United States. It will undoubtedly cheapen the rates of transportation of all freight between the eastern and western seaboard and it will greatly increase that trade by reason of the reduction in its cost. Then, if we are to have a world canal and if we are anxious that the routes of the world's trade shall be through the Panama canal, we must recognize that we have an active competitor in the Suez canal. Then, too, there are other means of crossing the isthmus—by the Tehuantepec railroad and by other railroads and freight routes in Central America to the Atlantic side.

In all these cases the question whether the Panama canal is to be used and its tonnage increased will be determined mainly by the charge for its use. My own impression is that the tolls ought not to exceed $1 per net ton. On Jan. 1, 1911, the tolls in the Suez canal are to be 7 francs and 25 centimes for one net ton by Suez canal measurement, which is a modification of Danube measurement. A dollar a ton will secure under the figures above a gross income from the Panama canal of nearly $7,000,000. The cost of maintenance and operation is estimated to exceed $3,000,000. Ultimately, of course, with the normal increase in trade, the income will approximate the interest charge upon the investment.

On the whole I should recommend that within certain limits the president be authorized to fix the tolls of the canal and adjust them to what seems to be commercial necessity.

The inquiries already made of the chief engineer of the canal show that the present consideration of this question is necessary in order that the commerce of the world may have time to adjust itself to the new conditions resulting from the opening of this new highway.

The next question that arises is as to the maintenance, management and general control of the canal after its completion. It should not be premised that it is an essential part of our naval establishment to have the coal, oil and other ship supplies, a dry dock and repair shop, conveniently located with reference to naval vessels passing through the canal. Now, if the government for naval purposes is to undertake to furnish these conveniences to the navy—and they are conveniences equally required by commercial vessels—here, would seem to be strong reasons why the government should take over and include in its management the furnishing, not only to the navy but to the public, dry-dock and repair-shop facilities and the sale of coal, oil and other ship supplies.

The maintenance of a lock canal of this enormous size in a sparsely populated country and in the tropics, where the danger from disease is always present, requires a large and complete and well-trained organization with full police powers, exercising the utmost care. The visitor to the canal who is impressed with the wonderful freedom from tropical diseases on the isthmus must not be misled as to the constant vigilance that is needed to preserve this condition. The vast machinery of the locks, the necessary amount of dredging, the preservation of the banks of the canal from slides, the operation and the maintenance of the equipment of the railway will all require a force, not, of course, to be likened in any way to the present organization for construction, but a skilled body of men who can keep in a state of usefulness this great instrument of commerce. Such an organization makes it easy to include within its functions the furnishing of dry docks, fuel, repairs and supply facilities to the trade of the world. These will be more essential at the isthmus of Panama than they are at Port Said or Suez, because there are no depots for coal, supplies and other commercial necessities within thousands of miles of the isthmus.

Another important reason why these auxiliary duties may well be undertaken by the government is the opportunity for discrimination between the patrons of the canal that is offered where private concessions are granted for the furnishing of these facilities. Nothing would create greater prejudice against the canal than the suspicion that certain lines of traffic were favored in the furnishing of supplies or that the supplies were controlled by any large interest that might have a motive for increasing the cost of the use of the canal. It may be added that the termini are not ample enough to permit the fullest competition in respect to the furnishing of these facilities and necessities to the world's trade, even if it were wise to invite such competition, and the granting of the concession would necessarily, under these circumstances, take on the appearance of privilege or monopoly.

I cannot close this reference to the canal without suggesting as a wise amendment to the interstate-commerce law a provision prohibiting interstate-commerce railroads from owning or controlling ships engaged in the trade through the Panama canal. I believe such a provision may be needed to save to the people of the United States the benefits of the competition in trade between the eastern and western seabards which this canal was constructed to secure.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

The duties of the department of justice have been greatly increased by legislation of congress enacted in the interest of the general welfare of the people and extending its activities into avenues plainly within its constitutional jurisdiction, but which it has not been thought wise or necessary for the general government heretofore to occupy.

I am glad to say that under the appropriations made for the department the attorney-general has so improved its organization that a vast amount of litigation of a civil and criminal character has been disposed of during the current year. This will explain the necessity for slightly increasing the estimates for the expenses of the department. His report shows the recoveries made on behalf of the government, of duties fraudulently withheld, public lands improperly patented, fines and penalties for trespassing, prosecutions and convictions under the antitrust law and prosecutions under the interstate-commerce law. I invite especial attention to the prosecutions under the federal law of the so-called "bucket shops" and of those schemes to defraud in which the use of the mail is an essential part of the fraudulent conspiracy, prosecutions which have saved ignorant and weak members of the public and are saving them hundreds of millions of dollars. The violations of the antitrust law present perhaps the most important litigation before the department and the number of cases filed shows the activity of the government in enforcing that statute.

NATIONAL INCORPORATION.

In a special message last year I brought to the attention of congress the propriety and wisdom of enacting a general law providing for the incorporation of industrial and other companies engaged in interstate commerce, and I renew my recommendation in that behalf.

I invite the attention of congress to the great number of claims which, at the instance of congress, have been considered by the Court of Claims and decided to be valid claims against the government. The delay that occurs in the payment of the money due under the claims injures the reputation of the government as an honest debtor, and I earnestly recommend that those claims which come to congress with the judgment and approval of the Court of Claims should be promptly paid.

One great crying need in the United States is cheapening the cost of litigation by simplifying judicial procedure and expediting final judgment. Under present conditions the poor man is at a woeful disadvantage in a legal contest with a corporation or a rich opponent. The necessity for the reform exists both in United States courts and in all state courts. In order to bring it about, however, it naturally falls to the general government by its example to furnish a model to all states. A legislative commission appointed by joint resolution of congress to revise the procedure in the United States courts has as yet made no report.

Under the law the Supreme court of the United States has the power and is given the duty to frame the equity rules of procedure which are to obtain in the federal courts of first instance. In view of the heavy burden of pressing litigation which that court has had to carry, with one or two of its members incapacitated through ill health, it has not been able to take up problems of improving the equity procedure, which has practically remained the same since the organization of the court in 1789. It is reasonable to expect that, with all the vacancies upon the court filled, it will take up the question of cheapening and simplifying the procedure in equity in the courts of the United States. The equity business is much the more important in the federal courts, and I may add much the more expensive. I am strongly convinced that the best method of improving judicial procedure at law is to empower the Supreme court to do it through the medium of the rules of the court, as in equity. This is the way in which it has been done in England, and thoroughly done. The simplicity and expedition of procedure in the English courts to-day make a model for the reform of other systems.

Several of the lord chancellors of England and of the chief justices have left their lasting impress upon the history of their country by their constructive ability in proposing and securing the passage of remedial legislation effecting law reforms. I cannot conceive any higher duty that the Supreme court could perform than in leading the way to a simplification of procedure in the United States courts.

No man ought to have, as a matter of right, a review of his case by the Supreme court. He should be satisfied by one hearing before a court of first instance and one review by a court of appeals. The proper and chief usefulness of the Supreme court, and especially of the Supreme Court of the United States, is, in the cases which come before it, so to expound the law, and especially the fundamental law—the constitution—as to furnish precedents for the inferior courts in future litigation and for the executive officers in the construction of statutes and the performance of their legal duties. Therefore, any provisions for review of cases by the Supreme court that cast upon that court the duty of passing on questions of evidence and the construction of particular forms of instrument, like indictments, or wills, or contracts, decisions not of general application or importance, merely clog and burden the court and render more difficult its higher function, which makes it so important a part of the framework of our government. The Supreme court is now carrying an unnecessary burden of appeals of this kind, and I earnestly urge that it be removed.

The statutes respecting the review by the Supreme Court of the United States of decisions of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia ought to be so amended as to place that court in the same position with respect to the review of its decisions as that of the various United States Circuit Courts of Appeals. The act of March 2, 1907, authorizing appeals by the government from certain judgments in criminal cases where the defendant has not been put in jeopardy, within the meaning of the constitution, should be amended so that such appeals should be taken to the Circuit Courts of Appeals instead of to the Supreme court in all cases except those involving the construction of the constitution or the constitutionality of a statute, with the same power in the Supreme court to review on certiorari as is now exercised by that court over determinations of the several Circuit Courts of Appeals.

Appeals in copyright cases should reach final judgment in the Courts of Appeals instead of the Supreme court, as now. The decision of the Courts of Appeals should be made final also in all cases wherein jurisdiction rests on both diverse citizenship and the existence of a federal question, and not as now be reviewable in the Supreme court when the case involves more than $1,000.

Appeals from the United States court in Porto Rico should also run to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the third circuit instead of to the Supreme court. These suggested changes would, I am advised, relieve the Supreme court of the consideration of about eighty cases annually, and would be in harmony with the theory of review which led to the establishment of the Circuit Court of Appeals and which I have stated above. The American Bar association has had before it the question of reducing the burden of litigation involved in reversals on review and new trials or rehearing and in frivolous appeals and habeas corpus and criminal cases. Their recommendations have been embodied in bills now pending in congress. The recommendations are not radical, but they will accomplish much if adopted into law, and I earnestly recommend the passage of the bills embodying them.

INJUNCTION CURB ADVOCATED.

I wish to renew my urgent recommendation made in my last annual message in favor of the passage of a law which shall regulate the issuing of injunctions in equity without notice. In accordance with the best practice now in vogue in the courts of the United States, I regard this of especial importance, first, because it has been promised, and, second, because it will deprive those who now complain of certain alleged abuses in the improper issuing of injunctions without notice of any real ground for further amendment and will take away all semblance of support for the extremely radical legislation they propose, which will be most pernicious if adopted, will sap the foundations of judicial power and legalize that cruel social instrument, the secondary boycott.

I further recommend to congress the passage of the bill now pending for the increase in the salaries of the federal judges, by which the chief justice of the Supreme court shall receive $17,500 and the associate justices $17,000; the Circuit judges, constituting the Circuit Court of Appeals, shall receive $10,000 and the District judges $9,000. These judges exercise a wide jurisdiction and their duties require of them a profound knowledge of the law, great ability in the dispatch of business and care and delicacy in the exercise of their jurisdiction so as to avoid conflict whenever possible between the federal and the state courts. The positions they occupy ought to be filled by men who have shown the greatest ability in their professional work at the bar, and it is the poorest economy possible for the government to pay salaries so low for judicial service as not to be able to command the best talent of the legal profession in every part of the country. The cost of living is such, especially in the large cities, that even the salaries fixed in the proposed bill will enable the incumbents to accumulate little, if anything, to support their families after their death. Nothing is so important to the preservation of our country and its beloved institutions as the maintenance of the independence of the judiciary, and next to the life tenure an adequate salary is the most material contribution to the maintenance of independence on the part of our judges.

POSTAL BANK SYSTEM.

At its last session congress made provision for the establishment of savings banks by the postoffice department of this government, by which under the general control of trustees, consisting of the postmaster-general, the secretary of the treasury and the attorney-general, the system could be begun in a few cities and towns, and enlarged to cover within its operations as many cities and towns and as large a part of the country as seemed wise. The initiation and establishment of such a system has required a great deal of study on the part of the experts in the postoffice and treasury departments, but a system has now been devised which is believed to be more economical and simpler in its operation than any similar system abroad. Arrangements have been perfected so that savings banks will be opened in some cities and towns on Jan. 1, and there will be a gradual extension of the benefits of the plan to the rest of the country.

As I have said, the postoffice department is a great business department, and I am glad to note the fact that under its present management principles of business economy and efficiency are being applied. For many years there has been a deficit in the operations of the postoffice department, which has been met by appropriation from the treasury. The appropriation estimated for last year from the treasury over and above the receipts of the department was $17,500,000. I am glad to record the fact that of that $17,500,000 estimated for $11,500,000 were saved and returned to the treasury.

The personal efforts of the postmaster-general secured the effective cooperation of the thousands of postmasters and other postal officers throughout the country in carrying out his plans of reorganization and retrenchment. The result is that the postmaster-general has been able to make his estimate of expenses for the present year so low as to keep within the amount the postal service is expected to earn.

It is gratifying to report that the reduction in the deficit has been accomplished without any curtailment of postal facilities. On the contrary, the service has been greatly extended during the year in all its branches. A principle which the postmaster-general has recommended and sought to have enforced in respect to all appointments has been that those appointees who have rendered good service should be reappointed. This has greatly strengthened the interest of postmasters throughout the country in maintaining efficiency and economy in their offices, because they believed generally that this would secure for them a further tenure.

Upon the recommendation of the postmaster-general I have included in the classified service all assistant postmasters, and I believe that this giving a secure tenure to those who are the most important subordinates of postmasters will add much to the efficiency of their offices and an economical administration. A large number of the fourth-class postmasters are now in the classified service. I think it would be wise to put in the classified service the first, second and third class postmasters. It is more logical to do this than to classify the fourth-class postmasters, for the reason that the fourth-class postoffices are invariably small and the postmasters are necessarily men who must combine some other business with their postmastership, whereas the first, second and third class postmasters are paid a sufficient amount to justify the requirement that they shall have no other business and that they shall devote their attention to their postoffice duties.

To classify first, second and third class postmasters would require the passage of an act changing the method of their appointment so as to take away the necessity for the advice and consent of the senate. I am aware that this is inviting from the senate a concession in respect to its quasi-executive power that is considerable, but I believe it to be in the interest of good administration and efficiency of service. To make this change would take the postmasters out of politics; would relieve congressmen who now are burdened with the necessity of making recommendations for these places of a responsibility that must be irksome and can create nothing but trouble; and it would result in securing from postmasters greater attention to business, greater fidelity and consequently greater economy and efficiency in the postoffices which they conduct.

The unrestricted manner in which the franking privilege is now being used by the several federal services and by congress has laid it open to serious abuses, a fact clearly established through investigations recently instituted by the department. While it has been impossible without a better control of franking to determine the exact expense to the government of the practice, there can be no doubt that it annually reaches into the millions. It is believed that many abuses of the franking system could be prevented, and consequently a marked economy effected, by supplying through the agencies of the postal service official envelopes and stamps for the free mail of the government, all such envelopes and stamps to be issued on requisition to the various branches of the federal service requiring them, and such records to be kept of all official stamp supplies as will enable the postoffice department to maintain a proper postage account covering the entire volume of free government mail.

As the first step in the direction of this reform special stamps and stamped envelopes have been provided for use instead of franks in the free transmission of the official mail resulting from the business of the new postal savings system. By properly recording the issuance of such stamps and envelopes accurate records can be kept of the cost to the government of handling the postal savings mail, which is certain to become an important item of expense and one that should be separately determined. In keeping with this plan it is hoped that congress will authorize the substitution of special official stamps and stamped envelopes for the various forms of franks now used to carry free of postage the vast volume of departmental and congressional mail matter.

During the past year methods of accounting similar to those employed in the most progressive of our business establishments have been introduced in the postal service and nothing has so impeded the department's plans in this regard as the impossibility of determining with any exactness how far the various expenses of the postal service are increased by the present unrestricted use of the franking privilege. It is believed that the adoption of a more exact method of dealing with this problem as proposed will prove to be of tremendous advantage in the work of placing the postal service on a strictly businesslike basis.

In my last annual message I invited the attention of congress to the inadequacy of the postal rate imposed upon second-class mail matter in so far as that includes magazines and showed by figures prepared by experts of the postoffice department that the government was rendering a service to the magazines costing many millions in excess of the compensation paid. An answer was attempted to this by the representatives of the magazines and a reply was filed to this answer by the postoffice department. The utter inadequacy of the answer, considered in the light of the reply of the postoffice department, I think must appeal to any fair-minded person. Whether the answer was all that could be said in behalf of the magazines is another question. I agree that the question is one of fact, but I insist that if the fact is as the experts of the postoffice department show, that we are furnishing to the owners of magazines a service worth millions more than they pay for it, then justice requires that the rate should be increased. The increase in the receipts of the department resulting from this change may be devoted to increasing the usefulness of the department in establishing a parcels post and in reducing the cost of first-class postage to 1 cent.

It has been said by the postmaster-general that a fair adjustment might be made under which the advertising part of the magazine should be charged for at a different and higher rate from that of the reading matter. This would relieve many useful magazines that are not circulated at a profit and would not shut them out from the use of the mails by a prohibitory rate.

PARCELS POST ADVOCATED.

With respect to the parcels post, I respectfully recommend its adoption on all rural-delivery routes, and that eleven pounds—the international limit—be made the limit of carriage in such post, and this with a view to its general extension when the income of the postoffice will permit it and the postal savings banks shall have been fully established. The same argument is made against the parcels post that was made against the postal savings bank—that it is introducing the government into a business which ought to be conducted by private persons, and is paternalism. The postoffice department has a great plant and a great organization, reaching into the most remote hamlet of the United States, and with this machinery it is able to do a great many things economically that if a new organization were necessary it would be impossible to do without extravagant expenditure. That is the reason why the postal savings bank can be carried on at a small additional cost, and why it is possible to incorporate at a very inconsiderable expense a parcels post in the rural-delivery system. A general parcels post will involve much greater outlay.

NAVY OFFICERS AS AIDS.

In the last annual report of the secretary of the navy and in my annual message attention was called to the new detail of officers in the navy department by which officers of flag rank were assigned to duty as aids to the secretary in respect to naval operations, personnel, inspection and material. This change was a substantial compliance with the recommendation of the commission on naval reorganization, headed by Mr. Justice Moody, and submitted to President Roosevelt on Feb. 26, 1909. Through the advice of this committee of line officers the secretary is able to bring about a proper co-ordination of all the branches of the naval department with greater military efficiency. The secretary of the navy recommends that this new organization be recognized by legislation and thus made permanent. I concur in the recommendation.

The secretary, in view of the conclusions of a recent court of inquiry on certain phases of marine-corps administration, recommends that the major-general commandant of the marine corps be appointed for a four years' term, and that officers of the adjutant and inspector's department be detailed from the line. He also asks for legislation to improve the conditions now existing in the personnel of officers of the navy, particularly with regard to the age and experience of flag officers and captains, and points out that it is essential to the highest efficiency of the navy that the age of our officers be reduced and that flag officers particularly should gain proper experience as flag officers in order to enable them properly to command fleets. I concur in the secretary's recommendations.

I commend to your attention the report of the secretary on the change in the system of cost accounting in navy yards and also to the history of the naval-supply fund and the present conditions existing in regard to that matter. Under previous practice and what now seems to have been an erroneous construction of the law the supply fund of the navy was increased from $2,700,000 to something over $14,000,000, and a system of accounting was introduced which prevented the striking of a proper balance and a knowledge of the exact cost of maintaining the naval establishment. The system has now been abandoned and a naval-supply account established by law July 1, 1910. The naval-supply fund of $2,700,000 is now on deposit in the treasury to the credit of the department.

The secretary recommends that the naval-supply account be made permanent by law and that the $2,700,000 of the naval-supply fund be covered into the treasury as unnecessary, and I ask for legislative authority to do this. This sum when covered into the treasury will be really a reduction in recorded naval cost for this year. The estimates of the navy department are $5,000,000 less than the appropriations for the same purpose last year, and included in this is the building programme of the same amount as that submitted for your consideration last year. It is merely carrying out the plan of building two battleships a year, with a few needed auxiliary vessels. I earnestly hope that this programme will be adopted.

The secretary of the navy has given personal examination to every navy yard and has studied the uses of the navy yards with reference to the necessities of our fleet. With a fleet considerably less than half the size of that of the British navy we have shipyards more than double the number, and there are several of these shipyards expensively equipped with modern machinery, which, after investigation, the secretary of the navy believes to be entirely useless for naval purposes. He asks authority to abandon certain of them and to move their machinery to other places where it can be made of use.

In making these recommendations the secretary is following directly along progressive lines which have been adopted in our great commercial and manufacturing consolidations in this country; that is, of displacing unnecessary and inadequate plants and discontinuing their existence where it has been demonstrated that it is unprofitable to continue their maintenance at an expense not commensurate to their product.

The secretary points out that the most important naval base in the West Indies is Guantanamo, in the southeastern part of Cuba. Its geographical situation is admirably adapted to protect the commercial paths to the Panama canal and he shows that by the expenditure of less than half a million dollars, with the machinery which he shall take from other navy yards, he can create a naval station at Guantanamo of sufficient size and equipment to serve the purpose of an emergency naval base. I earnestly join in the recommendation that he be given the authority which he asks. I am quite aware that such action is likely to arouse local opposition, but I conceive it to be axiomatic that in legislating in the interest of the navy, and for the general protection of the country by the navy, mere local pride or pecuniary interest in the establishment of a navy yard or station ought to play no part. The recommendation of the secretary is based upon the judgment of impartial naval officers, entirely uninfluenced by any geographical or sectional considerations.

I unite with the secretary in the recommendation that an appropriation be made to construct a suitable crypt at Annapolis for the custody of the remains of John Paul Jones.

TRIBUTE TO PEARY.

The complete success of our country in arctic exploration should not remain unnoticed. For centuries there has been friendly rivalry in this field of effort between the foremost nations and between the bravest and most accomplished men. Expeditions to the unknown north have been encouraged by enlightened governments and deserved honors have been granted to the daring men who conducted them. The unparalleled achievement of Peary in reaching the north pole April 6, 1909, approved by critical examination of the most expert scientists, has added to the distinction of our navy, to which he belongs, and reflects credit upon his country. His unique success has received generous acknowledgment from scientific bodies and institutions of learning in Europe and America. I recommend fitting recognition by congress of the great achievement of Robert Edwin Peary.

The secretary of the interior recommends a change of the law in respect to the procedure in adjudicating claims for lands, by which appeals can be taken from the decisions of the department to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia for a judicial consideration of the rights of the complainant. This change finds complete analogy in the present provision for appeals from the decisions of the commissioner of patents. The judgments of the court in such cases would be of decisive value to land claimants generally and to the department of the interior in the administration of the law, would enable claimants to bring into court the final consideration of issues to the title to government land and would, I think, obviate a good deal of the subsequent litigation that now arises in our western courts. The bill is pending, I believe, in the house, having been favorably reported from the committee on public lands, and I recommend its enactment.

One of the difficulties in the interior department and in the land office has been the delays attendant upon the consideration by the land office and the secretary of the interior of claims for patents of public lands to individuals. I am glad to say that under the recent appropriations of the congress and the earnest efforts of the secretary and his subordinates, these arrears have been disposed of, and the work of the department has been brought more nearly up to date in respect to the pending business than ever before in its history. Economies have been effected where possible without legislative assistance, and these are shown in the reduced estimates for the expenses of the department during the current fiscal year and during the year to come.

CONSERVATION OF RESOURCES.

The subject of the conservation of the public domain has commanded the attention of the people within the last two or three years.

There is no need for radical reform in the methods of disposing of what are really agricultural lands. The present laws have worked well. The enlarged homestead law has encouraged the successful farming of lands in the semiarid regions.

The total sum already accumulated in the fund provided by the act for the reclamation of arid lands has about $69,449,058.76, and of this all but $6,241,058.76 has been allotted to the various projects, of which there are thirty. Congress at its last session provided for the issuing of certificates of indebtedness not exceeding $20,000,000, to be redeemed from the reclamation fund when the proceeds of lands sold and from the water rents should be sufficient. Meantime, in accordance with the provisions of the law, I appointed a board of army engineers to examine the projects and to ascertain which are feasible and worthy of completion. That board has made a report upon the subject, which I shall transmit in a separate message within a few days.

In September last a conservation congress was held at St. Paul, at which I delivered an address on the subject of conservation so far as it was within the jurisdiction and possible action of the federal government. In that address I assembled from the official records the statistics and facts as to what had been done in this behalf in the administration of my predecessor and in my own, and indicated the legislative measures which I believed to be wise in order to secure the best use, in the public interest, of what remains of our national domain. There was in this address a very full discussion of the reasons which led me to the conclusions stated. For the purpose of saving in an official record a comprehensive resume of the statistics and facts gathered with some difficulty in that address and to avoid their repetition in the body of this message, I venture to make the address an accompanying appendix. The statistics are corrected to Nov. 15 last.

For the reasons stated in the conservation address, I recommend:

1. That the limitation now imposed upon the executive which forbids his reserving more forest lands in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Colorado and Wyoming, be repealed.
2. That the coal deposits of the government be leased after advertisement inviting competitive bids, for terms not exceeding fifty years, with a minimum rental and royalties upon the coal mined, to be readjusted every ten or twelve years, and with conditions as to maintenance which will secure proper mining and as to assignment which will prevent combinations or monopolies from getting control of the coal in any one district or market. I do not think that coal measures under 2,500 acres of surface would be too large an amount to lease to any one lessee.

The secretary of the interior thinks there are difficulties in the way of leasing public coal lands, which objections he has set forth in his report, the force of which I freely concede. I entirely approved his stating at length in his report the objections in order that the whole subject may be presented to congress, but after a full consideration I favor a leasing system and recommend it.

3. That the law should provide the same separation in respect to government phosphate lands of surface and mineral rights that now obtains in coal lands and that power to lease such lands upon terms and limitations similar to those above recommended for coal leases, with an added condition enabling the government to regulate and if need be to prohibit the export to foreign countries of the product.

4. That the law should allow a prospector for oil or gas to have the right to prospect for two years over a certain tract of government land, the right to be evidenced by a license for which he shall pay a small sum; and that upon discovery a lease may be granted upon terms securing a minimum rental and proper royalties to the government, and also the conduct of the oil or gas well in accord with the best method of husbanding the supply of oil in the district. The period of the leases should not be as long as those of coal, but they should contain similar provisions as to assignment to prevent monopolistic combinations.

5. That water-power sites be directly leased by the federal government, after advertisement and bidding, for not exceeding fifty years, upon a proper rental and with a condition fixing rates charged to the public for units of electric power, both rental and rates to be readjusted equitably every ten years by arbitration or otherwise, with suitable provisions against assignment to prevent monopolistic combinations, or that the law shall provide that upon application made by the authorities of the state where the water-power site is situated, it may be patented to the state upon condition that the state shall dispose of it under terms like those just described, and shall enforce those terms, or upon failure to comply with the condition the water-power site and all the plant and improvement on the site shall be forfeited and revert to the United States, the president being given the power to declare the forfeiture and to direct legal proceedings for its enforcement. Either of these methods would, I think, accomplish the proper public purpose in respect to water-power sites, but one or the other should be promptly adopted.

I earnestly urge upon congress that at this session general conservation legislation of the character indicated be adopted. At its last session this congress took most useful and proper steps in the cause of conservation by allowing the executive, through withdrawals to suspend the action of the existing laws in respect to much of the public domain. I have not thought that the danger of disposing of coal lands in the United States under the present laws in large quantities was so great as to call for their withdrawal, because under the present provisions it is reasonably certain that the government will receive the real value of the land. But in respect to oil lands or phosphate lands and of gas lands in the United States, and in respect to coal lands in Alaska, I have exercised the full power of withdrawal with the hope that the action of congress would follow promptly and prevent that tying up of the resources of the country in the western and less-settled portion and in Alaska, which means stagnation and retrogression.

The question of conservation is not a partisan one and I sincerely hope that even in the short time of the present session consideration may be given to those questions which have now been much discussed, and that action may be taken upon them.

GOVERNMENT OF ALASKA.

With reference to the government of Alaska, I have nothing to add to the recommendations I made in my last message on the subject. I am convinced that the migratory character of the population, its unequal distribution, and its smallness of number, which the new census shows to be about 50,000, in relation to the enormous expanse of the territory, make it altogether impracticable to give to those people who are in Alaska to-day, and may not be there a year hence, the power to elect a legislature to govern an immense territory to which they have a relation so little permanent. It is far better for the development of the territory that it be committed to a commission to be appointed by the executive, with limited legislative powers sufficiently broad to meet the local needs, than to continue the present insufficient government with few remedial powers, or to make a popular government where there is not proper foundation upon which to rest it.

The suggestion that the appointment of a commission will lead to the control of the government by corporate and selfish and exploiting interests has not the slightest foundation in fact. Such a government worked well in the Philippines, and would work well in Alaska, and those who are really interested in the proper development of that territory for the benefit of the people who live in it and the benefit of the people of the United States, who own it, should support the institution of such a government.

I have been asked to recommend that the credit of the government be extended to aid the construction of railroads in Alaska. I am not ready now to do so. A great many millions of dollars have already been expended in the construction of at least two railroads, and if laws be passed providing for the proper development of the resources of Alaska, especially for the opening up of the coal lands, I believe that the capital already invested will induce the investment of more capital sufficient to complete the railroad building, and to furnish cheap coal not only to Alaska, but the whole Pacific coast. The passage of a law permitting the leasing of government coal lands in Alaska after public competition, and the appointment of a commission for the government of the territory, with enabling powers to meet the local needs, will lead to an improvement in Alaska and the development of her resources that is likely to surprise the country.

Our national parks have become so extensive and involve so much detail of action in their control that it seems to me there ought to be legislation creating a bureau for their care and control. The greatest natural wonder of this country and the surrounding territory should be included in another national park. I refer to the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.

PENSIONS SHOULD BE LIBERAL.

The uniform policy of the government in the matter of granting pensions to those gallant and devoted men who fought to save the life of the nation in the perilous days of the great civil war has always been of the most liberal character. Those men are now rapidly passing away. The best obtainable official statistics show that they are dying at the rate of something over 3,000 a month, and, in view of their advancing years, this rate must inevitably, in proportion, rapidly increase. To the man who risked everything on the field of battle to save the nation in the hour of its direst need we owe a debt which has not been and should not be computed in a begrudging or parsimonious spirit. But while we should be actuated by this spirit to the soldier himself, care should be exercised not to go to absurd lengths, or distribute the bounty of the government to classes of persons who may, at this late day, from a mere mercenary motive, seek to obtain some legal relation with an old veteran now tottering on the brink of the grave. The true spirit of the pension laws is to be found in the noble sentiments expressed by Mr. Lincoln in his last inaugural address, wherein, in speaking of the nation's duty to its soldiers when the struggle should be over, he said we should "care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and orphans."

GREAT WEALTH ON FARMS.

The report of the secretary of agriculture invites attention to the stupendous value of the agricultural products of this country, amounting in all to $8,926,000,000 for this year. This amount is larger than that of 1909 by $305,000,000. The existence of such a crop indicates a good prospect for business throughout the country. A notable change for the better is commented upon by the secretary in the fact that the south, especially in those regions where the boll weevil has interfered with the growth of cotton, has given more attention to the cultivation of corn and other cereals, so that there is a greater diversification of crops in the south than ever before—and all to the great advantage of that section.

The report contains a most interesting account of the activities of the department in its various bureaus, showing how closely the agricultural progress in this country is following along the lines of improvement recommended by the department through its publications and the results of its experiment stations in every state, and by the instructions given through the agricultural schools aided by the federal government and following the general curriculum urged by the head and bureau chiefs of the department.

PURE FOOD AS A FEATURE.

The activities of the department have been greatly increased by the enactment of recent legislation, by the pure-food act, the meat-inspection act, the cattle-transportation act and the act concerning the interstate shipment of game. This department is one of those the scope of whose actions is constantly widening and therefore it is impossible under existing legislation to reduce the cost and their estimates below those of preceding years.

An interesting review of the results of an examination made by the department into statistics and prices shows that on the average since 1891 farm products have increased in value 72 per cent, while the things which the farmer buys for use have increased but 12 per cent, an indication that present conditions are favorable to the farming community.

LOSS BY FOREST FIRES.

I have already referred to the forests of the United States and their extent, and have urged, as I do again, the removal of the limitation upon the power of the executive to reserve other tracts of land in six western states in which withdrawal for this purpose is now forbidden. The secretary of agriculture gives a very full description of the disastrous fires that occurred during the last summer in the national forests. A drought more intense than any recorded in the history of the west had introduced a condition into the forests which made fires almost inevitable, and locomotive sparks, negligent campers and in some cases incendiaries furnished the needed immediate cause. At one time the fires were so extended that they covered a range of a hundred miles and the secretary estimates that standing timber of the value of $25,000,000 was destroyed. Seventy-six persons in the employ of the forest service were killed and many more injured, and I regret to say that there is no provision in the law by which the expenses for their hospital treatment or of their internment could be met out of public funds. The Red Cross contributed $1,000 and the remainder of the necessary expenses was made up by private contribution, chiefly from the force of the forest service and its officials. I recommend that suitable legislation be adopted to enable the secretary of agriculture to meet the moral obligations of the government in this respect.

The specific fund for fighting fires was only about $135,000, but there existed discretion in the secretary in case of an emergency to apply other funds in his control to this purpose, and he did so to the extent of nearly a million of dollars, which will involve the presentation of a deficiency estimate for the current fiscal year of over $900,000. The damage done was not, therefore, due to the lack of an appropriation by congress available to meet the emergency, but the difficulty of fighting it lay in the remote points where the fires began and where it was impossible, with the roads and trails as they now exist, promptly to reach them. Proper protection necessitates, as the secretary points out, the expenditure of a good deal more money in the development of roads and trails in the forests, the establishment of lookout stations and telephone connection between them and places where assistance can be secured.

The amount of reforestation shown in the report of the forest service—only about 15,000 acres, as compared with the 150,000,000 acres of national forests—seems small, and I am glad to note that in this regard the secretary of agriculture and the chief of the forest service are looking forward to far greater activity in the use of available government land for this purpose.

Progress has been made in learning by experiment the best methods of reforesting. Congress is appealed to now by the secretary of agriculture to make the appropriations needed for enlarging the usefulness of the forest service in this regard. I hope that congress will approve and adopt the estimate of the secretary for this purpose.

COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

The secretary of the department of commerce and labor has had under his immediate supervision the application of the merit system of promotion to a large number of employees, and his discussion of this method of promotions, based on actual experience, I commend to the attention of congress.

The taking of the census has proceeded with promptness and efficiency. The secretary believes, and I concur, that it will be more thorough and accurate than any census which has heretofore been taken, but it is not perfect. The motive that prompts men with a false civic pride to induce the padding of census returns in order to increase the population of a particular city has been strong enough to lead to fraud in respect to a few cities in this country, and I have directed the attorney-general to proceed with all the vigor possible against those who are responsible for these frauds. They have been discovered and they will not interfere with the accuracy of the census, but it is of the highest importance that official inquiry of this sort should not be embarrassed by fraudulent conspiracies in some private or local interest.

The reorganization of the lighthouse board has effected a very considerable saving in the administration, and the estimates for that service for the present year are $428,000 less than for the preceding year. In addition three tenders, for which appropriations were made, are not being built because they are not at present needed for the service. The secretary is now asking for a large sum for the addition of lights and other aids to the commerce of the seas, including a number in Alaska. The trade along that coast is becoming so important that I respectfully urge the necessity for following his recommendation.

The commissioner of corporations has just completed the first part of a report on the lumber industry in the United States. This part does not treat of the question of a trust or combination in the manufacture of lumber, a subject to be dealt with later. The commissioner does find, however, a condition in the ownership of the standing timber of the United States, other than the government timber, that calls for serious attention. The direct investigation made by the commissioner covered an area which contains 80 per cent of the privately owned timber of the country. His report shows that one-half of the timber in this area is owned by 200 individuals and corporations; that 14 per cent is owned by three corporations, and that there is very extensive interownership of stock, as well as other circumstances, all pointing to friendly relations among those who own a majority of this timber, a relationship which might lead to a combination for the maintenance of a price that would be very detrimental to the public interest and would create the necessity of removing all tariff obstacles to the free importations of lumber from other countries.

I am glad to note in the secretary's report the satisfactory progress which is being made in respect to the preservation of the seals of the Pribiloff islands. Very active steps are being taken by the department of state to secure an arrangement which shall protect the Pribiloff herd from the losses due to pelagic sealing. Meantime the government has secured seal pelts of the bachelor seals (the killing of which does not interfere with the maintenance of the herd), from the sale of which next month it is expected to realize about $450,000, a sum largely in excess of the rental paid by the lessee of the government under the previous contract.

The coast and geodetic survey has been engaged in surveying the coasts of the Philippine archipelago. This is heavy work, because of the extended character of the coast line in those islands, but I am glad to note that about half of the needed survey has been completed. So large a part of the coast line of the archipelago has been unsurveyed as to make navigation in the neighborhood of a number of the islands, and especially on the east side, particularly dangerous.

LABOR WARS SETTLED.

The commissioner of labor has been actively engaged in composing the differences between employers and employees engaged in interstate transportation, under the Erdman act, jointly with the chairman of the interstate-commerce commission. I cannot speak in too high terms of the success of these two officers in conciliation and settlement of controversies which, but for their interposition, would have resulted disastrously to all interests.

I invite attention to the very serious injury caused to all those who are engaged in the manufacture of phosphorus matches. The diseases incident to this are frightful, and as matches can be made from other materials entirely innocuous, I believe that the injurious manufacture could be discouraged and ought to be discouraged by the imposition of a heavy federal tax. I recommend the adoption of this method of stamping out a very serious abuse.

Since 1868 it has been the declared purpose of this government to favor the movement for an eight-hour day by a provision of law that none of the employees employed by or on behalf of the government should work longer than eight hours in every twenty-four. The first declaration of this view was not accompanied with any penal clause and with no provision for its enforcement, and though President Grant, by a proclamation, twice attempted to give it his sanction and to require the officers of the government to carry it out, the purpose of the framers of the law was ultimately defeated by a decision of the Supreme court holding that the statute as drawn was merely a direction of the government to its agents and did not invalidate a contract made in behalf of the government which provided in the contract for labor for a day of longer hours than eight. Thereafter in 1892 the present eight-hour law was passed, which provides that the services and employment of all laborers and mechanics who are now or may hereafter be employed by the government of the United States, by the District of Columbia or by any contractor or subcontractor on any of the public works of the United States and of the said District of Columbia are hereby restricted to eight hours in any one calendar day, and it shall be unlawful, etc., etc.

This law has been construed to limit the application of the requirement to those who are directly employed by the government or to those who are employed upon public works situate upon land owned by the United States. This construction prevented its application to government battle-ships and other vessels built in private shipyards and to heavy guns and armor plate contracted for and made in private establishments.

The proposed act provides that no laborer or mechanic doing any part of the work contemplated by a contract with the United States in the employ of the contractor or any subcontractor shall be required or permitted to work more than eight hours a day in any one calendar day.

It seems to me from the past history that the government has been committed to a policy of encouraging the limitation of the day's work to eight hours in all works of construction initiated by itself, and it seems to me illogical to maintain a difference between government work done on government soil and government work done in a private establishment, when the work is of such large dimensions and involves the expenditure of much labor for a considerable period so that the private manufacturer may adjust himself and his establishment to the special terms of employment that he must make with his workmen for this particular job. To require, however, that every small contract of manufacture entered into by the government should be carried out by the contractor with men working at eight hours would be to impose an intolerable burden upon the government by limiting its sources of supply and excluding altogether the great majority of those who would otherwise compete for its business.

The proposed act recognizes this in the exceptions which it makes to contracts "for transportation by land or water, for the transmission of intelligence and for such materials or articles as may usually be sought in the open market, whether made to conform to particular specifications or not, or for the purpose of supplies for the government, whether manufactured to conform to particular specifications or not."

I recommend that instead of enacting the proposed bill, the meaning of which is not clear and definite and might be given a construction embarrassing to the public interest, the present act be enlarged by providing that public works shall be construed to include not only buildings and work upon public ground, but also ships, armor and large guns when manufactured in private yards or factories.

One of the great difficulties in enforcing this eight-hour law is that its application under certain emergencies becomes exceedingly oppressive and there is a great temptation to subordinate officials to evade it. I think that it would be wiser to allow the president, by executive order, to declare an emergency in special instances in which the limitation might not apply and, in such cases, to permit the payment by the government of extra compensation for the time worked each day in excess of eight hours. I may add that my suggestions in respect to this legislation have the full concurrence of the commissioner of labor.

In view of the keen, widespread interest now felt in the United States in a system of compensation for industrial accidents to supplant our present thoroughly unsatisfactory system of employers' liability (a subject the importance of which congress has already recognized by the appointment of a commission), I recommend that the international congress on industrial insurance be invited to hold its meeting in 1913 in Washington and that an appropriation of $10,000 be made to cover the necessary expenses of organizing and carrying on the meeting.

IMMIGRATION.

The immigration into this country is increasing each year. A large part of it comes through the immigrant station at Ellis island in the city of New York. An examination of the station and the methods pursued satisfies me that a difficult task is there performed by the commissioner and his force with common sense, the strictest fairness and with the most earnest desire to enforce the law equitably and mercifully. It has been proposed to enlarge the accommodations so as to allow more of the immigrants to come by that port. I do not think it wise policy to do this. I have no objection to—on the contrary, I recommend—the construction of additional buildings for the purpose of facilitating a closer and more careful examination of each immigrant as he comes in, but I deprecate the enlargement of the buildings and of the force for the purpose of permitting the examination of more immigrants per day than are now examined. If it is understood that no more immigrants can be taken in at New York than are now taken in and the steamship companies thus are given a reason and a motive for transferring immigrants to other ports, we can be confident that they will be better distributed through the country and that there will not be that congestion in the city of New York which does not make for the better condition of the immigrant or increase his usefulness as a new member of this community. Everything which tends to send the immigrant west and south into rural life helps the country. I concur with the secretary in his recommendations as to the amendments to the immigration law in increasing the fine against the companies for violation of the regulations and in giving greater power to the commissioner to enforce more care on the part of the steamship companies in accepting immigrants. The recommendation of the secretary, in which he urges that the law may be amended so as to discourage the separation of families, is, I think, a good one.

BUREAU OF HEALTH.

In my message of last year I recommended the creation of a bureau of health in which should be embraced all those government agencies outside of the war and navy departments which are now directed toward the preservation of public health or exercise functions germane to that subject. I renew this recommendation. I greatly regret that the agitation in favor of this bureau has aroused a counter agitation against its creation, on the ground that the establishment of such a bureau is to be in the interest of a particular school of medicine. It seems to me that this assumption is wholly unwarranted, and that those responsible for the government can be trusted to secure in the personnel of the bureau the appointment of representatives of all recognized schools of medicine, and in the management of the bureau entire freedom from narrow prejudice in this regard.

By an act passed by congress the president was authorized to expend $1,000,000 to construct the needed work to prevent injury to the lands of the Imperial valley from the overflow of the Colorado river. I appointed a competent engineer to examine the locality and to report a plan for construction. He has done so. In order to complete the work it is necessary to secure the consent of Mexico, for part of the work must be constructed in Mexican territory. Negotiations looking to the securing of such authority are quite near success. The Southern Pacific Railroad company proposes to assist us in the work by lending equipment and by the transportation of material at cost price, and it is hoped that the work may be completed before any danger shall arise from the spring floods in the river. The work is being done under the supervision of the secretary of the interior and his consulting engineer, Gen. Marshall, late chief of engineers, now retired.

This leads me to invite the attention of congress to the claim made by the Southern Pacific Railroad company for an amount expended in a similar work of relief called for by a flood and great emergency. This work, as I am informed, was undertaken at the request of my predecessor and under promise to reimburse the railroad company. It seems to me the equity of this claim is manifest and the only question involved is the reasonable value of the work done. I recommend the payment of the claim in a sum found to be just.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The government of the District of Columbia is a good government. The police force, while perhaps it might be given, or acquire, more military discipline in bearing and appearance, is nevertheless an efficient body of men, free from graft, and discharges its important duties in this capital of the nation effectively. The parks and the streets of the city and the district are generally kept clean and in excellent condition. The commissioners of the district have its affairs well in hand, and, while not extravagant, are constantly looking to those municipal improvements that are expensive, but that must be made in a modern growing city like Washington.

While all this is true, nevertheless the fact that Washington is governed by congress, and that the citizens are not responsible and have no direct control through popular election in district matters, properly subjects the government to inquiry and criticism by its citizens, manifested through the public press and otherwise. Such criticism should command the careful attention of congress. Washington is the capital of the nation and its maintenance as a great and beautiful city under national control every lover of his country has much at heart, and it should present in every way a model in respect of economy of expenditure, of sanitation, of tenement reform, of thorough public instruction, of the proper regulation of public utilities, of sensible and extended charities, of the proper care of criminals and of youth needing reform, of healthful playgrounds and opportunity for popular recreation and of a beautiful system of parks. I am glad to think that progress is being made in all these directions, but I venture to point out certain specific improvements toward these ends which congress in its wisdom might adopt. Speaking generally, I think there ought to be more concentration of authority in respect to the accomplishment of some of these purposes, with more economy of expenditure.

Attention is invited to the peculiar situation existing in regard to the parks of Washington. The park system proper, comprising some 343 different areas, is under the office of public buildings and grounds, which, however, has nothing to do with the control of Rock Creek park, the zoological park, the grounds of the department of agriculture, the botanic garden, the grounds of the capitol and other public grounds which are regularly open to the public and ought to be part of the park system. Exclusive of the grounds of the Soldiers' home and of Washington barracks, the public grounds used as parks in the District of Columbia comprise over 3,100 acres, under ten different controlling officials or bodies. This division of jurisdiction is most unfortunate.

Large sums of money are spent yearly in beautifying and keeping in good condition these parks and the grounds connected with government buildings and institutions. The work done on all of them is of the same general character—work for which the office of public buildings and grounds has been provided by congress with a special organization and equipment, which are lacking for the grounds not under that office. There can be no doubt that if all work of care and improvement upon the grounds belonging to the United States in the District of Columbia were put, as far as possible, under one responsible head, the result would not only be greater efficiency and economy in the work itself, but greater harmony in the development of the public parks and gardens of the city.

Congress at its last session provided for two more parks, called the Meridian Hill and Matrose parks, and the district commissioners have also included in their estimates a sum to be used for the acquisition of much-needed park land adjoining the zoological park, known as the Klinge Ford tract. The expense of these three parks, included in the estimates of the commissioners, aggregates $900,000. I think it would lead to economy if the improvement and care of all these parks and other public grounds above described should be transferred to the office of public buildings and grounds, which has an equipment well and economically adapted to carrying out the public purpose in respect to improvements of this kind.

To prevent encroachments upon the park area it is recommended that the erection of any permanent structure on any lands in the District of Columbia belonging to the United States be prohibited except by specific authority of congress.

I have already in previous communications to congress referred to the importance of acquiring for the District of Columbia at least a part of the territory on the other side of the Potomac in Virginia, which was originally granted for the district by the state of Virginia and then was retroceded by act of congress in 1846. It is very evident from conferences that I have had with the senators and representatives from Virginia that there is no hope of a regranting by the state of the land thus given back, and I am frank to say that in so far as the tract includes the town of Alexandria and land remote from the Potomac river there would be no particular advantage in bringing that within national control. But the land which lies along the Potomac river above the railroad bridge and across the Potomac, including

Arlington cemetery, Fort Myer, the government experiment farm, the village of Rosslyn and the Palisades of the Potomac, reaching to where the old district line intersects the river, is very sparsely settled and could be admirably utilized for increasing the system of the parks of Washington.

It has been suggested to me by the same Virginia senators and representatives that if the government were to acquire for a government park the land above described, which is not of very great value, the present law of Virginia would itself work the creation of federal jurisdiction over it, and if that were not complete enough the legislature of Virginia would in all probability so enlarge the jurisdiction as to enable congress to include it within the control of the government of the District of Columbia and actually make it a part of Washington. I earnestly recommend that steps be taken to carry out this plan.

There are a sufficient number of corporations enjoying the use of public utilities in the District of Columbia to justify and require the enactment of a law providing for their supervision and regulation in the public interest consistent with the vested rights secured to them by their charters.

A part of these corporations, to wit, the street railways, have been put under the control of the interstate-commerce commission, but that commission recommends that the power be taken from it, and intimates broadly that its other and more important duties make it impossible for it to give the requisite supervision. It seems to me wise to place this general power of supervision and regulation in the district commissioners. It is said that their present duties are now absorbing and would prevent the proper discharge by them of these new functions, but their present jurisdiction brings them so closely and frequently in contact with these corporations and makes them to know in such detail how the corporations are discharging their duties under the law and how they are serving the public interest that the commissioners are peculiarly fitted to do this work, and I hope that congress will impose it upon them by intrusting them with powers in respect to such corporations similar to those of the public-utilities commission of New York city or similar boards in Massachusetts.

I do not think the present control of the school system of Washington commends itself as the most efficient and economical and thorough instrument for the carrying on of public instruction. The expenses of the schools of Washington as compared with those of other cities similarly situated are shown by the following table: See page 427.

The cost of education in the District of Columbia is thus seen to be excessive as compared with the cost in other cities of similar size, and it is not apparent that the results are in general more satisfactory. The average cost per pupil per day in Washington is about 38 cents, while the average cost in thirteen other American cities fairly comparable with Washington in population and standard of education is about 25.5 cents. For each dollar spent in salaries of school teachers and officers in the district about 4.4 days of instruction per pupil are given, while in the thirteen cities above referred to each dollar expended for salaries affords on the average 6.8 days of instruction. For the current fiscal year the estimates of the board of education amounted to about three-quarters of the entire revenue locally collected for district purposes.

If I may say so, there seems to be a lack of definite plan in the expansion of the school system and the erection of new buildings and of proper economy in the use of these buildings that indicates the necessity for the concentration of control. All plans for improvement and expansion in the school system are with the school board, while the limitation of expenses is with the district commissioners. I think it would be much better to put complete control and responsibility in the district commissioners, and then provide a board of school visitors, to be appointed by the Supreme court of the district or by the president, from the different school districts of Washington, who, representing local needs, shall meet and make recommendations to the commissioners and to the superintendent of education—an educator of ability and experience, who should be an appointee of and responsible to the district commissioners.

Among the items for permanent improvements appearing in the district estimates for 1912 is one designed to substitute for Willow Tree alley, notorious in the records of the police and health departments, a playground with a building containing baths, a gymnasium and other helpful features, and I hope congress will approve this estimate. Fair as Washington seems with her beautiful streets and shade trees, and free, as the expanse of territory which she occupies would seem to make her, from slums and insanitary congestion of population, there are centers in the interior of squares where the very poor, and the criminal classes as well, huddle together in filthy and noisome surroundings, and it is of primary importance that these nuclei of disease and suffering and vice should be removed, and that there should be substituted for them small parks as breathing spaces, and model tenements having sufficient air space and meeting other hygienic requirements. The estimate for the reform of Willow Tree alley, the worst of these places in the city, is the beginning of a movement that ought to attract the earnest attention and support of congress, for congress cannot escape its responsibility for the existence of these human pest holes.

The estimates for the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1912 provide for the repayment to the United States of $616,000, one-fourth of the floating debt that will remain on June 30, 1911. The bonded debt will be reduced in 1912 by about the same amount. The District of Columbia is now in an excellent financial condition. Its own share of indebtedness will, it is estimated, be less than $6,000,000 on June 30, 1912, as compared with about $9,000,000 on June 30, 1909. The bonded debt, owed half and half by the United States and the district, will be extinguished by 1924 and the floating debt of the district probably long before that time.

The revenues have doubled in the last ten years, while the population during the same period has increased but 13.78 per cent. It is believed that, if due economy be practiced, the district can soon emerge from debt, even while financing its permanent improvements with reasonable rapidity from current revenues. To this end I recommend the enactment into law of a bill now before congress—and known as the Judson bill—which will insure the gradual extinguishment of the district's debt, while at the same time requiring that the many permanent improvements needed to complete a fitting capital city shall be carried on from year to year and at a proper rate of progress with funds derived from the rapidly increasing revenues.

I renew my recommendation that the claims of the depositors in the Freedmen's bank be recognized and paid by the passage of the pending bill on that subject.

I also renew my recommendation that steps be taken looking to the holding of a negro exposition in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the issuing by Mr. Lincoln of the emancipation proclamation.

CIVIL SERVICE.

The civil-service commission has continued its useful duties during the year. The necessity for the maintenance of the provisions of the civil-service law was never greater than to-day. Officers responsible for the policy of the administration and their immediate personal assistants or deputies should not be included within the classified service; but, in my judgment, public opinion has advanced to the point where it would support a bill providing a secure tenure during efficiency for all purely administrative officials. I entertain the profound conviction that it would greatly aid the cause of efficient and economical government and of better politics if congress could enact a bill providing that the executive shall have the power to include in the classified service all local offices under the treasury department, the department of justice, the postoffice department, the interior department and the department of commerce and labor, appointments to which now require the confirmation of the senate, and that upon such classification the advice and consent of the senate shall cease to be required in such appointments. By their certainty of tenure, dependent on good service, and by their freedom from the necessity for political activity, these local officers would be induced to become more efficient public servants.

The civil-service law is an attempt to solve the problem of the proper selection of those who enter the service. A better system under that law for promotions ought to be devised, but, given the selected employee, there remains still the question of promoting his efficiency and his usefulness to the government, and that can be brought about only by a careful comparison of unit work done by the individual and a pointing out of the necessity for improvement in this regard where improvement is possible.

The increase in the activities and in the annual expenditures of the federal government has been so rapid and so great that the time has come to check the expansion of government activities in new directions until we have tested the economy and efficiency with which the government of to-day is being carried on. The responsibility rests upon the head of the administration. He is held accountable by the public, and properly so. Despite the unselfish and patriotic efforts of the heads of departments and others charged with responsibility of government, there has grown up in this country a conviction that the expenses of government are too great.

The fundamental reason for the existence undetected of waste, duplication and bad management is the lack of prompt, accurate information. The president of a private corporation doing so vast a business as the government transacts would, through competent specialists, maintain the closest scrutiny on the comparative efficiency and the comparative costs in each division or department of the business. He would know precisely what the duties and the activities of each bureau or division are in order to prevent overlapping. No adequate machinery at present exists for supplying the president of the United States with such information respecting the business for which he is responsible. For the first time in the history of the government congress in the last session supplied this need and made an appropriation to enable the president to inquire into the economy and efficiency of the executive departments, and I am now assembling an organization for the purpose.

At the outset I find comparison between departments and bureaus impossible for the reason that in no two departments are the estimates and expenditures displayed and classified alike. The first step is to reduce all to a common standard for classification and judgment, and this work is now being done. When it is completed the foundation will be laid for a businesslike national budget and for such a just comparison of the economy and efficiency with which the several bureaus and divisions are conducted as will enable the president and the heads of departments to detect waste, eliminate duplication, encourage the intelligent and effective civil servants, whose efforts too often go unnoticed, and secure the public service at the lowest possible cost.

The committee on appropriations of congress have diligently worked to reduce the expenses of government and have found their efforts often blocked by lack of accurate information containing a proper analysis of requirements and of actual and reasonable costs. The result of this inquiry should enable the executive in his communications to congress to give information to which congress is entitled and which will enable it to promote economy.

I have requested the head of each department to appoint committees on economy and efficiency in order to secure full co-operation in the movement by the employees of the government themselves. I urge the continuance of the appropriation of $100,000 requested for the fiscal year 1912.

My experience leads me to believe that while government methods are much criticised, the bad results—if we do have bad results—are not due to lack of zeal or willingness on the part of the civil servants. On the contrary, I believe that a fine spirit of willingness to work exists in the personnel, which, if properly encouraged, will produce results equal to those secured in the best-managed private enterprises. In handling government expenditure the aim is not profit—the aim is the maximum of public service at the minimum of cost. We wish to reduce the expenditures of the government and we wish to save money to enable the government to go into some of the beneficial projects which we are debarred from taking up now because we ought not to increase our expenditures.

At a later date I shall send to congress a special message on this general subject.

CIVIL PENSIONS.

It is impossible to proceed far in such an investigation without perceiving the need of a suitable means of eliminating from the service the superannuated. This can be done in one of two ways, either by straight civil pension or by some form of contributory plan.

Careful study of experiments made by foreign governments shows that three serious objections to the civil pension payable out of the public treasury may be brought against it by the taxpayer, the administrative officer and the civil employee, respectively. A civil pension is bound to become an enormous, continuous and increasing tax on the public exchequer; it is demoralizing to the service, since it makes difficult the dismissal of incompetent employees after they have partly earned their pension, and it is disadvantageous to the main body of employees themselves, since it is always taken into account in fixing salaries, and only the few who survive and remain in the service until pensionable age receive the value of their deferred pay. For this reason, after a half century of experience under a most liberal pension system, the civil servants of England succeeded, about a year ago, in having the system so modified as to make it virtually a contributory plan with provision for refund of their theoretical contributions.

The experience of England and other countries shows that neither can a contributory plan be successful human nature being what it is, which does not make provision for the return of contributions, with interest, in case of death or resignation before pensionable age. Followed to its logical conclusion this means that the simplest and most independent solution of the problem for both employees and the government is a compulsory savings arrangement, the employee to set aside from his salary a sum sufficient, with the help of a liberal rate of interest from the government, to purchase an adequate annuity for him on retirement, this accumulation to be alienably his and claimable if he leaves the service before reaching the retirement age or by his heirs in case of his death. This is the principle upon which the Gillett bill now pending is drawn.

The Gillett bill, however, goes further and provides that the government shall contribute to the pension fund of those employees who are now so advanced in age that their personal contributions will not be sufficient to create their annuities before reaching the retirement age. In my judgment this provision should be amended so that the an-nilities of those employes shall be paid out of the salaries appropriated for the positions vacated by retirement, and that the difference between the annuities thus granted and the salaries may be used for the employment of efficient clerks at the lower grades. If the bill can be thus amended I recommend its passage, as it will initiate a valuable system and ultimately result in a great saving in the public expenditures.

INTERSTATE-COMMERCE LAW.

There has been time to test the benefit and utility of the amendments to the interstate-commerce law contained in the act approved June 18, 1910. The law as enacted did not contain all the features which I recommended. It did not specifically denounce as unlawful the purchase by one of two parallel and competing roads of the stock of the other. Nor did it subject to the restraining influence of the interstate-commerce commission the power of corporations engaged in operating interstate railroads to issue new stock and bonds; nor did it authorize the making of temporary agreements between railroads, limited to thirty days, fixing the same rate for traffic between the same places.

I do not press the consideration of any of these objects upon congress at this session. The object of the first provision is probably generally covered by the antitrust law. The second provision was in the act referred to the consideration of a commission to be appointed by the executive and to report upon the matter to congress. That commission has been appointed and is engaged in the investigation and consideration of the question submitted under the law. It consists of President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale university as chairman, Frederick C. Strauss, Frederick N. Judson, Prof. B. H. Meyer and Walter L. Fisher, with William E. S. Griswold as secretary.

The third proposal led to so much misconstruction of its object, as being that of weakening the effectiveness of the antitrust law, that I am not disposed to press it for further consideration. It was intended to permit railroad companies to avoid useless rate cutting by a mere temporary acquiescence in the same rates, for the same service over competing railroads, with no obligation whatever to maintain those rates for any time.

The protection of railroad employes from personal injury is a subject of the highest importance and demands continuing attention. There have been two measures pending in congress, one for the supervision of boilers and the other for the enlargement of dangerous clearances. Certainly some measures ought to be adopted looking to a prevention of accidents from these causes. It seems to me that with respect to boilers a bill might well be drawn requiring and enforcing by penalty a proper system of inspection by the railway companies themselves which would accomplish our purpose. The entire removal of outside clearances would be attended by such enormous expense that some other remedy must be adopted. By act of May 6, 1910, the interstate-commerce commission is authorized and directed to investigate accidents, to report their causes and its recommendations. I suggest that the commission be requested to make a special report as to injuries from outside clearances and the best method of reducing them.

VALUATION OF RAILROADS.

The interstate-commerce commission has recommended appropriations for the purpose of enabling it to enter upon a valuation of all railroads. This has always been within the jurisdiction of the commission, but requisite funds have been wanting. Statistics of the value of each railroad would be valuable for many purposes, especially if we ultimately enact any limitations upon the power of the interstate railroads to issue stocks and bonds, as I hope we may. I think, therefore, that in order to permit a correct understanding of the facts, it would be wise to make a reasonable appropriation to enable the interstate-commerce commission to proceed with due dispatch to the valuation of all railroads. I have no doubt that railroad companies themselves can and will greatly facilitate this valuation and make it much less costly in time and money than has been supposed.

Forged and fraudulent bills of lading purporting to be issued against cotton some months since resulted in losses of several millions of dollars to American and foreign banking and cotton interests. Foreign bankers then notified American bankers that after Oct. 31, 1910, they would not accept bills of exchange drawn against bills of lading for cotton issued by American railroad companies, unless American bankers would guarantee the integrity of the bills of lading. The American bankers rightly maintained that they were not justified in giving such guarantees, and that, if they did so, the United States would be the only country in the world whose bills were so discredited and whose foreign trade was carried on under such guaranties.

The foreign bankers extended the time at which these guaranties were demanded until Dec. 31, 1910, relying upon us for protection in the meantime, as the money which they furnished to move our cotton crop is of great value to this country.

For the protection of our own people and the preservation of our credit in foreign trade I urge upon congress the immediate enactment of a law under which one who, in good faith, advances money or credit upon a bill of lading issued by a common carrier upon an interstate or foreign shipment can hold the carrier liable for the value of the goods described in the bill at the valuation specified in the bill, at least to the extent of the advances made in reliance upon it. Such liability exists under the laws of many of the states. I see no objection to permitting two classes of bills of lading to be issued: (1) Those under which a carrier shall be absolutely liable, as above suggested, and (2) those with respect to which the carrier shall assume no liability except for the goods actually delivered to the agent issuing the bill. The carrier might be permitted to make a small separate specific charge in addition to the rate of transportation for such guaranteed bill, as an insurance premium against loss from the added risk, thus removing the principal objection which I understand is made by the railroad companies to the imposition of the liability suggested, viz., that the ordinary transportation rate would not compensate them for the liability assumed by the absolute guaranty of the accuracy of the bills of lading.

I further recommend that a punishment of fine and imprisonment be imposed upon railroad agents and shippers for fraud or misrepresentation in connection with the issue of bills of lading issued upon interstate and foreign shipments.

Except as above, I do not recommend any amendment to the interstate-commerce law as it stands. I do not now recommend any amendment to the antitrust law. In other words, it seems to me that the existing legislation with reference to the regulation of corporations and the restraint of their business has reached a point where we can stop for a while and witness the effect of the vigorous execution of the laws on the statute books in restraining the abuses which certainly did exist and which roused the public to demand reform. If this test develops a need for further legislation, well and good, but until then let us execute what we have. Due to the reform movements of the present decade, there has undoubtedly been a great improvement in business methods and standards.

The great body of business men of this country, those who are responsible for its commercial development, now have an earnest desire to obey the law and to square their conduct of business to its requirements and limitations.

These will doubtless be made clearer by the decisions of the Supreme court in cases pending before it.

I believe it to be in the interest of all the people of the country that for the time being the activities of government, in addition to enforcing the existing law, be directed toward the economy of administration and the enlargement of opportunities for foreign trade, the conservation and improvement of our agricultural lands, the building up of home industries and the strengthening of confidence of capital in domestic investment.

The White House, Dec. 6, 1910.

CENTER OF POPULATION AND ITS MEDIAN POINT.

The center of population is the center of gravity of the population of the country, each individual being assumed to have the same weight. What is known as the median point is the point of intersection of the line dividing the population equally north and south with the line dividing it equally east and west. The center of population in 1900 was at a point six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind., or north latitude 39 degrees and 9.5 minutes and west longitude 85 degrees 48.9 minutes. The median point in 1900 was at Spartanburg, Ind., or latitude 34 degrees 4 minutes and 22 seconds and longitude 84 degrees 51 minutes and 29 seconds.

The center of area of the United States, excluding Alaska and Hawaii and other recent acquisitions, is in northern Kansas, in approximate latitude 39 degrees 55 minutes and approximate longitude 98 degrees 50 minutes. The center of population is therefore about three-fourths of a degree south and more than thirteen degrees east of the center of area.

Note—The total population of the United States, with all its possessions, was estimated by the director of the census in December, 1910, to be 101,161,000. This includes the Philippines, which in 1903 had a population of 7,635,426; the island of Guam, the Samoan islands and the Panama canal zone.

THIRTEENTH UNITED STATES CENSUS.

The act passed at the extra session of the 61st congress and approved July 2, 1909, for the taking of the thirteenth and subsequent censuses provides that a census shall be taken of the population, agriculture, manufactures and mines and quarries of the United States in 1910 and every ten years thereafter, and that it shall include each state and territory on the mainland, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico. All reports are to be made within three years from July 1, 1909, the time being known as the decennial census period. An assistant director, a geographer, a chief statistician and other officers and clerks in addition to the regular force in the census office are provided for.

The annual compensation of the officials of the census office during the decennial census period shall be as follows: Director, $7,000; assistant director, $5,000; chief statisticians, $3,000 each; chief clerk, $2,500; disbursing clerk, $2,875; appointment clerk, $2,500; geographer, $2,500; chiefs of division, $2,000 each.

The additional clerks and other employees provided for must pass a civil-service examination, which shall be open to all applicants without regard to politics. Such examination shall be held in such places in each state as may be designated by the civil-service commission.

The thirteenth census was restricted to inquiries relating to population, agriculture, manufactures, mines and quarries. The schedules relating to population included for each inhabitant the name, relationship to head of family, color, sex, age, conjugal condition, place of birth, place of birth of parents, number of years in United States, citizenship, occupation, whether or not employer or employee, and, if employee, whether or not employed at the date of enumeration and the number of months unemployed during the preceding calendar year, whether or not engaged in agriculture, school attendance, literacy and tenure of home and whether or not a survivor of the union or Confederate army or navy; and the name and address of each blind or deaf and dumb person; and for the enumeration of institutions shall include paupers, prisoners, juvenile delinquents, insane, feeble-minded, blind, deaf and dumb and inmates of benevolent institutions.

The results of the enumeration of the population of the states and territories and of the principal cities were announced in the course of the year and, so far as given up to Dec. 15, will be found in this issue of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book. The figures are official, but are subject to some slight corrections. The population of the states by counties will be found in connection with the election tables.

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

September 17, 1787.

PREAMBLE. We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America:

ARTICLE I.

Section I. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a congress of the United States, which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives.

Section II. 1. The house of representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several states, and the electors in each state shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

2. No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained to the age of 25 years and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state in which he shall be chosen.

3. Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states which may be included within this union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three-fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the congress of the United States, and with in every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of representatives shall not exceed one for every 30,000, but each state shall have at least one representative, and until such enumeration shall be made the state of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three; Massachusetts, eight; Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, one; Connecticut, five; New York, six; New Jersey, four; Pennsylvania, eight; Delaware, one; Maryland, six; Virginia, ten; North Carolina, five; South Carolina, five, and Georgia, three.

4. When vacancies happen in the representation from any state the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

5. The house of representatives shall choose their speaker and other officers and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

Section III. 1. The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, chosen by the legislature thereof, for six years, and each senator shall have one vote.

2. Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election they shall be divided, as equally as may be, into three classes. The seats of the senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year; of the second class, at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one-third may be chosen every second year, and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any state, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

3. No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained the age of 30 years and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that state for which he shall be chosen.

4. The vice-president of the United States shall be president of the senate, but shall have no vote unless they be equally divided.

5. The senate shall choose their other officers and also a president pro tempore in the absence of the vice-president or when he shall exercise the office of president of the United States.

6. The senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the president of the United States is tried the chief justice shall preside, and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present.

7. Judgment, in cases of impeachment, shall not extend further than to removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States, but the party convicted shall, nevertheless, be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment according to law.

Section IV. 1. The times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof, but the congress may at any time, by law, make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing senators.

2. The congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall, by law, appoint a different day.

Section V. 1. Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

2. Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

3. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may, in their judgment, require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall, at the desire of one-fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

4. Neither house, during the session of congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

Section VI. 1. The senators and representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the treasury of the United States. They shall, in all cases, except treason, felony and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses and in going to or returning from the same, and for any speech or debate in either house they shall not be questioned in any other place.

2. No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased, during such time, and no person holding any office under the United States shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

Section VII. 1. All bills for raising a revenue shall originate in the house of representatives, but the senate may propose or concur with amendments, as on other bills.

2. Every bill which shall have passed the house of representatives and the senate shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the president of the United States: if he approve, he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the president within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the congress, by their adjournment, prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

3. Every order, resolution or vote to which the concurrence of the senate and house of representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the president of the United States, and before the same shall take effect shall be approved by him, or, being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two-thirds of the senate and house of representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in case of a bill.

Section VIII. The congress shall have power—

1. To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States, but all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States.

2. To borrow money on the credit of the United States.

3. To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states and with the Indian tribes.

4. To establish a uniform rule of naturalization and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States.

6. To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States.

7. To establish postoffices and postroads.

8. To promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries.

9. To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme court. To define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas and offenses against the law of nations.

10. To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal and make rules concerning captures on land and water.

11. To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years.

12. To provide and maintain a navy.

13. To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

14. To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions.

15. To provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States, reserving to the states respectively the appointment of the officers and the authority of training the militia according to the discipline prescribed by congress.

16. To exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district (not exceeding ten miles square) as may, by cession of particular states and the acceptance of congress, become the seat of government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all places purchased, by the consent of the legislature of the state in which the same shall be, for the erection of forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards and all other needful buildings; and,

17. To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this constitution in the government of the United States or in any department or officer thereof.

Section IX. 1. The migration or importation of such persons as any of the states now existing shall think proper to admit shall not be prohibited by the congress prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be imposed on such importation, not exceeding $10 for each person.

2. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

3. No bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed.

4. No capitation or other direct tax shall be laid, unless in proportion to the census or enumeration hereinbefore directed to be taken.

5. No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any state. No preference shall be given, by any regulation of commerce or revenue, to the ports of one state over those of another; nor shall vessels bound to or from one state be obliged to enter, clear or pay duties in another.

6. No money shall be drawn from the treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time.

7. No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States, and no person holding any office of profit or trust under them shall, without the consent of congress, accept of any present, emolument, office or title of any kind whatever, from any king, prince or foreign state.

Section X. 1. No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

2. No state shall, without the consent of the congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws, and the net produce of all duties and imposts laid by any state on imports or exports shall be for the use of the treasury of the United States, and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of the congress. No state shall, without the consent of congress, lay any duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another state or with a foreign power or engage in war, unless actually invaded or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

ARTICLE II.

Section I. 1. The executive power shall be vested in a president of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and together with the vice-president, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

2. Each state shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which the state may be entitled in the congress, but no senator or representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector.

3. The electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for and of the number of votes for each, which list they shall sign and certify and transmit sealed to the seat of government of the United States, directed to the president of the senate. The president of the senate shall, in the presence of the senate and house of representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the president, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed, and if there be more than one who have such majority and have an equal number of votes, then the house of representatives shall immediately choose, by ballot, one of them for president; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said house shall, in like manner, choose the president. But in choosing the president the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. In every case after the choice of the president the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the vice-president. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes the senate shall choose from them, by ballot, the vice-president. [The foregoing provisions were changed by the 12th amendment.]

4. The congress may determine the time of choosing the electors and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

5. No person except a natural-born citizen or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this constitution shall be eligible to the office of president; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of 35 years and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

6. In case of the removal of the president from office or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice-president; and the congress may, by law, provide for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability both of the president and vice-president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed or a president shall be elected.

7. The president shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

8. Before he enters on the execution of his office he shall take the following oath or affirmation:

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States.

Section II. 1. The president shall be commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States and of the militia of the several states when called into the actual service of the United States. He may require the opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and he shall have the power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States except in cases of impeachment.

2. He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the senators present concur, and he shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme court and all other officers of the United States whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for and which shall be established by law. But the congress may, by law, vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they shall think proper in the president alone, in the courts of law or in the heads of departments.

3. The president shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the senate by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session.

Section III. He shall, from time to time, give to the congress information of the state of the union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses or either of them, and in case of disagreement between them, with respect to the time of adjournment, he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper. He shall receive ambassadors and other public ministers. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all officers of the United States.

Section IV. The president, vice-president and all civil officers of the United States shall be removed from office on impeachment for and conviction of treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

ARTICLE III.

Section I. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme court and in such inferior courts as the congress may, from time to time, ordain and establish. The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

Section II. 1. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this constitution, the laws of the United States and treaties made or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states; between a state and citizens of another state; between citizens of different states; between citizens of the same state, claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state or the citizens thereof and foreign states, citizens or subjects.

2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls and those in which a state shall be a party the Supreme court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned the Supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions and under such regulations as the congress shall make.

3. The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury, and such trials shall be held in the state where the said crimes shall have been committed, but when not committed within any state the trial shall be at such place or places as the congress may by law have directed.

Section III. 1. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or on confession in open court.

2. The congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

Section I. Full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved and the effect thereof.

Section II. 1. The citizens of each state shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several states.

A person charged in any state with treason, felony or other crime, who shall flee from justice and be found in another state, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the state from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the state having jurisdiction of the crime.

3. No person held to service or labor in one state under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

Section III. 1. New states may be admitted by the congress of this union, but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state, nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states or parts of states, without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned as well as of the congress.

2. The congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States, and nothing in this constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States or of any particular state.

Section IV. The United States shall guarantee to every state in this union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the legislature or of the executive (when the legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The congress, whenever two-thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of the several states, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of this constitution, when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the congress; provided, that no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article, and that no state, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the senate.

ARTICLE VI.

Section I. 1. All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this constitution shall be as valid against the United States under this constitution as under the confederation.

2. This constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made or which shall be made under authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land, and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding.

3. The senators and representatives before mentioned and the members of the several state legislatures and all executive and judicial officers, both of the United States and of the several states, shall be bound, by oath or affirmation, to support this constitution, but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the conventions of nine states shall be sufficient for the establishment of this constitution between the states so ratifying the same.

Done in convention, by the unanimous consent of the states present, the seventeenth day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the independence of the United States of America the twelfth.

Section 2. Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

XIV. Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the state wherein they reside. No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Section 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each state, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for president and vice-president of the United States, representatives in congress, the executive and judicial officers of a state or the members of the legislature thereof is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such state, being 21 years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens 21 years of age in such state.

Section 3. No person shall be a senator or representative in congress or elector of president and vice-president, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States or under any state who, having previously taken the oath as a member of congress or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any state legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any state, to support the constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But congress may, by a vote of two-thirds of each house, remove such disability.

Section 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any state shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave, but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

Section 5. The congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article.

CARNEGIE PEACE FUND.

Dec. 14, 1910, Andrew Carnegie transferred to a board of trustees $10,000,000 in 5 per cent first-mortgage bonds, the revenue of which will be used to "hasten the abolition of international war" and to establish lasting world peace. The formal transfer was made at a meeting in the rooms of the Carnegie Research foundation. The trustees organized by choosing as president United States Senator Elihu Root, permanent representative of the United States at The Hague tribunal. President Taft consented to be honorary president of the foundation.

The method by which the annual income of half a million dollars shall be expended is left by Mr. Carnegie entirely to the trustees. The foundation is to be perpetual, and when the establishment of universal peace is attained the donor provides that the revenue shall be devoted to the banishment of the "next most degrading evil or evils," the suppression of which would "most advance the progress, elevation and happiness of men."

Trustees of the fund are: United States Senator Elihu Root, former secretary of state and former secretary of war.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, New York, president of Columbia university.

Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Joseph H. Choate, lawyer, former ambassador to Great Britain.

Albert K. Smiley, Lake Mohonk, educator and humanitarian.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university.

James Brown Scott, solicitor of the state department.

John W. Foster, lawyer, former secretary of state.

Andrew J. Montague, lawyer, former governor of Virginia.

William M. Howard, lawyer and congressman, Lexington, Ga.

Judge Thomas Burke, Seattle, Wash.
James L. Slayden, congressman, San Antonio, Tex.

Andrew D. White, former ambassador to Germany.

Robert S. Brookings, lawyer, St. Louis, Mo.
Samuel Mather, banker and steel manufacturer, Cleveland, O.

J. G. Schmidlapp, railroad man, Cincinnati, O.
Arthur William Foster, regent of the University of California, San Francisco.

R. A. Franks, banker, Hoboken, N. J.
Charlesagne Tower, former ambassador to Germany and Russia.

Oscar Strans, ambassador to Turkey.

Austen G. Fox, lawyer, New York.

John L. Cadwallader, lawyer, New York.

John Sharp Williams, senator-elect from Mississippi.

C. L. Taylor of Pittsburg, chairman of the Carnegie hero-fund commission.

George W. Perkins of New York, financier and philanthropist.

The informal trust deed presented by Mr. Carnegie to the trustees reads in part as follows:

"Gentlemen: I have transferred to you as trustees of the Carnegie peace fund $10,000,000 5 per cent first-mortgage bonds, value $11,500,000, the revenue of which is to be administered by you to hasten the abolition of international war, the foulest blot upon our civilization. Although we no longer eat our fellow men or torture prisoners, or sack cities, killing their inhabitants, we still kill each other in war like barbarians. Only wild beasts are excusable for doing that in this twentieth century of the Christian era, for the crime of war is inherent, since it decides not in favor of the right but always of the strong. The nation is criminal which refuses arbitration and drives its adversary to a tribunal which knows nothing of righteous judgment."

GOVERNMENT OF ILLINOIS.

Legislative power is vested in a general assembly, consisting of a senate and house of representatives, both elected by the people. The state is divided into fifty-one senatorial districts, each of which elects a senator and three representatives. The general assembly makes laws and appropriates money for the government of the state, elects United States senators to represent the state and in general stands in the same relation to the state as congress does to all the states as a whole. The powers and duties of the chief executive officers are as follows:

Governor—The governor is vested with the chief executive power of the state. He is the commander in chief of the military and naval forces and may call out the militia to maintain the peace. He is required to inform the general assembly, by message, of the condition of affairs of the state and to recommend needed legislation. He may, by proclamation, call a special session of the assembly or adjourn it in case of disagreement between the two houses. He has the power to appoint certain officers and during a recess of the senate may fill vacancies or remove certain officers and may call special elections to fill vacancies in certain offices. He may make requisitions upon the governors of other states for the return of fugitives from justice or offer rewards for the arrest of offenders against the laws of the state. He exercises a general supervision over the penitentiaries and may grant reprieves, commutations and pardons and may restore the rights of citizenship to ex-convicts. He may approve acts of the legislature and exercise the veto power.

Lieutenant-Governor—This officer is ex-officio president of the senate and has the power to cast the deciding vote in case of a tie. In case of the death, conviction on impeachment, failure to qualify, resignation, absence from the state or other disability on the part of the governor, the lieutenant-governor succeeds to the office to the close of the term.

Secretary of State—The secretary of state is charged with the safekeeping of the original laws and resolutions of the general assembly; with all books, bills and documents deposited with him by either house, and with all bonds, records and papers filed in his office. He keeps a record of the official acts of the governor, furnishes certified copies of the same to the assembly on request and certified copies of any of the records of his office on the payment of the statutory fees. He countersigns and affixes the seal of the state to all proclamations and commissions issued by the governor; issues licenses for incorporations and certificates of organization to cities and villages and incorporated towns. He has charge of most of the buildings and grounds belonging to the state in Springfield, furnishes supplies for the general assembly and supervises the printing and distribution of all the public documents of the state. He calls the house of representatives to order at the beginning of each general assembly and presides over the same until the election of a speaker. He is the keeper of the great seal of the state and is the custodian and sealer of weights and measures.

Auditor—The auditor is required to keep all the accounts of the state; to audit the accounts of all officers or other persons authorized to receive moneys from the state treasury; to personally sign all warrants drawn on the treasury; to institute suits wherein the state is a plaintiff, and to make a biennial report of the business of his office to the governor. With the governor and treasurer he determines the state tax rate. He exercises a general supervision over state banks, building, loan and homestead associations.

State Treasurer—The state treasurer is custodian of the revenues and public moneys of the state. He must make monthly settlements with the auditor and a biennial report to the governor.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—The superintendent exercises a general supervision over all the public schools of the state. He is the general and legal adviser of the county superintendents and must report biennially to the governor the general condition of all the schools of the state, the amount raised by taxation for school purposes and the manner of its expenditure and the general condition of all the school funds. He may grant state certificates to teachers or cause them to be withheld and must visit charitable institutions which are educational in character.

Attorney-General—It is the duty of the attorney-general to represent the state in the Supreme court in all cases in which the state is interested; to act as counsel for all state officials; to be the legal adviser of the governor and other state officers in matters relating to their official duties, and, on request, to furnish them, as well as either branch of the general assembly, with written opinions upon constitutional or legal questions.

ILLINOIS PRIMARY-ELECTION LAWS.

Chronology of invalidated acts.

No. 1—Passed May 4, 1905; approved May 18; in force July 1; declared void April 5, 1906.

No. 2—Passed May 16, 1906; approved May 23; in force July 1; declared void Oct. 2, 1907.

No. 3—Passed Jan. 29, 1908; approved Feb. 21; in force July 1; declared void June 16, 1909.

The primary election law of 1905 was declared unconstitutional by the state Supreme court on the ground that it contained provisions delegating legislative functions to political organizations, required the payment of fees by candidates for office, set up a geographical qualification for candidates for the legislature and made out one set of requirements for one part of the state and another set for another part.

The primary election law of 1906 was declared unconstitutional for the following reasons: The act contained more than the title specified, the latter wholly failing to provide for a primary election for the purpose of selecting candidates for office; it lodged legislative power with purely voluntary party organizations; it conflicted with the bill of rights which provides that all elections shall be free and equal; it provided no means by which a person might register for the primary election, if for any reason he had failed to register at the last preceding general election, and it provided that a voter could vote for only one candidate for representative in the general assembly.

The primary election law of 1908 was also declared unconstitutional by the state Supreme court because it required voters to register in order to vote at a primary in sections where the registry act is in force, but provided no opportunity for a voter to register within the period of thirty days before the primary election, thus depriving constitutionally qualified voters of their right to vote at primaries. Further, the law was invalid because it abridged the constitutional rights of a voter by denying to him the right to vote for three candidates for state representative, or to cumulate and divide his vote upon a less number. The law authorized senatorial committees to determine the number of candidates to be nominated and restricted the voter at the primary to one vote for each of as many candidates as the senatorial committee decided should be nominated. The sections declared invalid on account of these defects were 44, relating to registration, and 11, relating to the nomination of candidates for state representative.

(For primary election laws passed by the legislature in 1910 see pages 47 to 51 of this issue of The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book.)

ILLINOIS EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY COMMISSION.

Under the law, approved March 4, 1910, creating an employers' liability commission, Gov. Deneen on March 15 appointed the following as members: Representing employees—Patrick Carr, Ladd; George Golden, Chicago; M. J. Boyle, Chicago; Daniel J. Gorman, Peoria; John Flora, Chicago; Edwin R. Wright, Chicago. Representing employers—P. A. Peterson, Rockford; Charles Plez, Chicago; E. T. Bent, Chicago; Ira G. Rawn, Chicago; Robert E. Conway, East St. Louis; Mason B. Starring, Chicago.

The duty of the commission was to investigate the problems of industrial accidents, and especially the present condition of the law of liability for injuries or death suffered in the course of industrial employment and the best method of providing for compensation. It was required to present its conclusion and recommendations to the governor by Sept. 15, 1910. The condition was made, however, that the commission should report only such recommendations as should be agreed upon by a majority of that part of the commission representing the employers and a majority of the part representing the employees.

The commission made the investigation required by the act, held a number of public meetings and drew up a bill "for an act to promote the general welfare of the people of this state by providing compensation for accidental injuries or death caused in the course of employment." On the final vote, however, the bill failed to receive the assent of a majority on each side and was therefore not formally submitted to the governor, though included in the commission's report. Some of the employers objected to the amount of compensation and the pension plan in cases of permanent and total disability. M. J. Boyle and John C. Flora, representing the employees, declined to sign any compensation act because in their opinion an act of that kind should be preceded by a modification of the laws known as "the fellow servant rule," "assumption of risk" and "contributory negligence," which they claimed unduly favored the employers.

While the commission failed in accomplishing the purpose for which it was created, it gathered a mass of statistics relating to industrial accidents in America and Europe. These were set forth in a printed report signed by Messrs. Plez, Jackson, Starring, Conway, Peterson and Bent and submitted to the governor. One table showed that in 620 cases of fatal accidents to employees in various parts of Illinois, 281 were settled out of court with an aggregate compensation of $32,451; 111 cases were pending in the courts and in 204 cases no recovery of any kind was made.

But this outline, convenient for certain purposes, scarcely hints at the situation which the commission found," says the report. "It gives no idea of the suffering and hardship which our investigations disclosed; it tells nothing of the long and tedious fights, of the inequitable verdicts, the delays and uncertainties of the law; it scarcely suggests the unequal character of the struggle between the claim agents and the families of the deceased breadwinners. Almost every individual case investigated reflected some aspect or other of this sort, driving home to the members of the commission the conviction that the present system is unjust, haphazard, inadequate and wasteful, the cause of enormous suffering, of much disrespect for law and of a badly distributed burden upon society."

ILLINOIS PAROLE LAW INVALID.

The Illinois Supreme court in a decision announced Feb. 16, 1910, held the parole law passed by the legislature in 1899 to be unconstitutional. Section 16 of article 4 of the constitution provides that "bills making appropriations for the pay of members and officers of the general assembly and for the salaries of the officers of the government shall contain no provision on any other subject." Section 11 of the act creating the parole system provided that "there shall be allowed to each member of the board of pardons the sum of $1,500 per year to compensate him for services performed under this act, said sum to be payable monthly on certificates of the board, approved by the governor and payable out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated." As members of the board of pardons are officers of the government, and as the appropriation for their salaries was placed in an act containing provisions on another subject, the conflict with the constitution was held to be fatal, making the whole act void.

GARNISHMENT LAW OF ILLINOIS.

Section 14 of the act of 1872 as amended in 1897 and 1901 declares: "The wages for services of a wage earner who is the head of a family and residing with the same, to the amount of fifteen ($15) dollars per week, shall be exempt from garnishment. All above the sum of fifteen ($15) dollars per week shall be liable to garnishment." Employers are obliged to pay wages amounting to $15 or less, notwithstanding the service of a writ of garnishment, providing the person to whom wages are due makes affidavit that he is the head of a family and is living with the same.

deliberation. Mme. Breshkovskaya, who was tried at the same time, admitted that she was a social revolutionist and was sentenced to perpetual exile, but without hard labor.

ATTEMPTED REVOLUTION IN MEXICO.

Nov. 20, 1910, was the date set for a general uprising of the opponents of President Diaz in Mexico, but the plot was discovered some days in advance of its execution and the government took vigorous action. The first serious clash took place Nov. 18, in the city of Puebla, where nearly 200 anti-revolutionists, as the rebels were called, were killed by the police and military. Rioting and bloodshed also occurred in Orizaba, Zacatecas, Chihuahua and other places. The revolutionists showed the greatest strength in the north, where they were led by Francisco I. Madero, who was a candidate for the presidency in opposition to Porfirio Diaz. Before the end of November the movement came to an end in utter failure.

To this 235 acres of land is being added by filling in Lake Michigan north of Diversey boulevard. This extension will contain a seventy-acre yacht harbor and will have bathing facilities.

The park contains a large floral department, also an extensive zoological garden containing about 1,200 animals. Boating and bathing facilities are furnished and the park lagoon—one mile in length—gives an admirable course for racing. The Academy of Sciences is located in the park at the foot of Center street. This building was erected in 1893 and contains about 250,000 specimens. It is noted for its collection of local natural history specimens and for its complete collection of mollusks.

The park has provided facilities for outdoor games during both the winter and summer seasons.

COOK COUNTY FOREST PRESERVE DISTRICT.

Under an act of the Illinois legislature, approved June 16, 1909, the following proposition was submitted to the voters of Cook county at the election of Nov. 8, 1910:

"For the adoption of an act to provide for the creation and management of forest preserve districts and repealing a certain act therein named and creating under said act a forest preserve district, the boundaries of which to coincide with and comprise the whole of the territory of Cook county, Illinois."

As will be seen by a reference to the election returns on another page, this proposition was approved by a majority of those voting on the question, and the Cook county forest preserve district was thus created. Under the law the affairs of the district are managed by a board consisting of a president and four commissioners, all appointed by the president of the board of county commissioners. The president of the board receives a salary of not to exceed $2,500 a year and the commissioners not to exceed $1,500 each. The term of office is four years, except in the case of the first appointees, two of whom are to serve but two years.

The board has the power to designate by ordinance streets or other highways to be used for pleasure driving and to improve and maintain the same; to acquire lands for laying out driveways and forest preserves; to raise money by general taxation for such purpose and to borrow money by the issuance of bonds. Such indebtedness is limited to 1 per cent of the taxable property in the district, including the existing indebtedness.

The board also has the power to acquire lands for the erection and maintenance thereon of public buildings for the use of the general public and assembly purposes of a general and not religious character; also to acquire and hold land for the purpose of protecting and preserving the flora and fauna and scenic beauties of the state; to protect and preserve such lands as nearly as may be in their natural condition for the education, pleasure and recreation of the public.

The accompanying map shows where it is proposed to locate some of the new park districts in Cook county, comprising what is usually called the projected "outer belt park system."

Commissioners—Lewis Rinaker, Rep., four years; Charles H. Wacker, Dem., two years; Gustavus J. Tatge, Dem., two years; Nelson A. Cool, Rep., four years; Samuel Insull, Rep., four years.

THE MOVEMENT FOR GOOD ROADS.

The following call for an international good roads congress to be held in Chicago in 1911 was issued in 1910:

From Sept. 16 to 21, 1901, there was held in the city of Buffalo an international good roads congress, the call for which was issued from the headquarters of the National Good Roads association at Chicago. Participation by delegates from foreign countries was invited and such invitation was transmitted by the department of state to the diplomatic officers of the United States throughout the world, and through them communicated to the ministers of foreign affairs with the request that it be given publicity for the information of organizations and individuals who might be interested.

On the tenth anniversary of this milestone in the good roads movement, there will be held in the city of Chicago on Sept. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23, 1911, during the first week of the International Municipal Congress and Exposition, an international good roads congress, to which are invited delegates from every city, state and nation.

The production of permanent public streets and roads is one of the most important problems of the century, affecting the material and social well being of all classes and conditions of people.

The marvelous development of the motor vehicle has brought about such changed conditions as to demand the best thought and experience of road experts.

When the agricultural production alone of the United States for the past eleven years totals $70,000,000,000, a sum to stagger the imagination, and it cost more to take this product from the farm to the railway station than from such station to the American and European markets, and when the saving in cost of moving this product of agriculture over good highways instead of bad, would have built a million miles of good roads, the incalculable waste of bad roads in this country is shown to be of such enormous proportions as to demand immediate reformation and the wisest and best statesmanship.

Great as is the loss to transportation, mercantile, industrial and farming interests, incomparably greater is the loss to women and children and social life, a matter as important as civilization itself. The truth of the declaration of Charles Sumner fifty years ago that "the two greatest forces for the advancement of civilization are the schoolmaster and good roads" is emphasized by the experience of the intervening years and points to the wisdom of a union of the educational, commercial, transportation and industrial interests of all nations in aggressive action for permanent roads and streets.

THE NATIONAL GOOD ROADS ASSOCIATION.

Arthur C. Jackson, President.

Anna M. Grady, Sec. and Treas.

In the confident belief that a general discussion of the road and street problem from every point of view by delegates from our own and foreign countries will prove in the highest degree helpful, we, the undersigned join in this call for an international good roads congress at Chicago Sept. 18 to 23, 1911.

The Oldest Banking House in Chicago

at cor. Clark and Randolph-sts. Fifty-six years ago in this city Mr. Elias Greenebaum, who still enjoys good health, father of the members of the banking firm of Greenebaum Sons, founded his Investment and Real Estate First Mortgage business. The growth and success of this firm read like the progress and solid development of the great City of Chicago, with which their name is so closely associated throughout the world. Henry Everett Greenebaum, Moses Ernst Greenebaum and James Eugene Greenebaum comprise the banking firm. Already the third generation of Greenebaum Sons, Bankers, have been carefully trained in this business, in fact have grown up in it and have inherited the same conservative and enterprising qualities which have distinguished this house for over half a century. We find here Mr. Walter J. Greenebaum, Manager of the Bond Department; Mr. John Greenebaum, Manager of First Mortgage Investments; both are sons of Mr. Henry Everett Greenebaum. Mr. M. Ernst Greenebaum, Jr., Manager of the Real Estate Department, and Mr. Edgar N. Greenebaum, in the Loan Division, both being sons of Mr. Moses Ernst Greenebaum. Forty clerks assist in the office and a General Banking and Investment Business is transacted. The investment and mortgage business is one of the chief activities of the Greenebaum Sons bank, controlling ample capital to underwrite large issues of safe investment securities. At the same time it maintains a department for loans on improved real estate and building loans on moderate sized residences, flats and business buildings.

The banking departments are similar to those in any well-equipped institution in a metropolitan city and transact a general banking business.

The foreign department is one of the oldest in the west. Well known in all parts of the world, Greenebaum Sons are agents and correspondents of banks and bankers in all five continents. Their letters of credit and drafts are honored in all parts of the civilized world and often serve as a valuable introduction to their holders in cities and towns abroad. They also maintain a foreign collection and legal department in charge of expert foreign attorneys acquainted with the laws and legal requirements of other nations regarding estates, inheritances, claims, collections, foreign securities, etc. Information cheerfully given.

The constant increase in the daily business of their foreign department necessitated recently a reorganization thereof. Mr. Fred Mayer, for many years with this bank, is now Manager of the Foreign Department and has risen to his present position by the merit-service system.

Some of the larger First Mortgage Real Estate Bond issues for the erection of new first-class buildings recently negotiated by Greenebaum Sons are the Kiper Commercial Building, the great Hearst Building, Alberta Block, Roslyn Apartments, Shire-Cliff Apartments, Knoedler Commercial Buildings, Myers Buildings, Sahlin Corset Mfg. Building, Mathewa Bldg., Steele-Weddeles Co.'s Fire Proof Wholesale Grocery Warehouse, Stein, Hirsch & Co.'s Warehouse and Factory, Drexel Square Bldgs.

These First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds were issued in units of $1,000 and $500, bearing 5½% to 6% interest, and were all quickly bought by the large number of investment clients who place their funds through Greenebaum Sons.

ANTISALOON CAMPAIGN IN CHICAGO.

Prohibitionists and others opposed to the liquor traffic made an effort to have placed upon the ballots at the election of April 5, 1910, in Chicago, the proposition, "Shall this city become antisaloon territory?" In accordance with the act of 1907 a petition for this purpose was circulated and 74,026 names having been secured the document was filed with the election commissioners Feb. 4. Objections were filed March 18 at the instance of the United Societies by twenty-one legal voters and taxpayers setting forth that more than 35,000 of the alleged signatures were illegal because they were not those of duly registered legal voters. March 25 the board of election commissioners announced that the objections were sustained. It held: 1. That no signature on the petition was valid if signed by any one who was not properly registered at the time he signed. Names of persons who had moved since the registration of the spring of 1909 were thus eliminated, although they had had no opportunity to reregister.

2. As a corollary to this ruling it was held that the petition was lacking in the law's requirements of 63,511 names. The shortage was given as 15,613, even if every doubtful name was counted for the petition. Out of the 74,026 names on the petition, only 44,278 were held to be unquestioned.

"In the opinion of the board 26,128 signatures are not those of duly registered legal voters, and consequently cannot be considered valid or counted under the law. Therefore, deducting said number from 74,026 leaves upon the petition 47,898 signatures, which is 15,613 less than 25 per cent of the legal voters, or the required number. This total of 15,613 gives the 'dry' petition the benefit of 3,620 doubtful signatures.

"The number of valid signatures upon the petition being less than the number required by law, this board is without jurisdiction to submit the question at the coming election, and the objection will be sustained."

The valuation since 1875 is the equalized valuation fixed by the state board of equalization. From 1867 to 1875 the valuation was made by the city for the city tax. From 1898 to 1908, inclusive, the assessed value was one-fifth of the actual value. In 1909 the rate was fixed at one-third. The amounts in the personal property column include the railroad valuation. The separate figures in 1910 were: Personal property, $208,607,727; railroads, $37,363,934.

TAXING BODIES IN CHICAGO.

1. STATE TAX—For state purposes. The governor, auditor and treasurer constitute the board which ascertains the rate per cent required to produce the amount of taxes levied by the general assembly. The "state school tax" is levied in the same manner.
2. COUNTY TAX—The county board levies the taxes for all county purposes.
3. CITY TAX—The city council, acting with the mayor, levies the taxes for all city purposes.
4. SCHOOL TAX—The city council and the mayor make a separate levy for this purpose.
5. LIBRARY TAX—The city council and the mayor make a separate levy for this purpose.
6. SANITARY DISTRICT—The tax is levied by the board of trustees.
7. SOUTH PARK SYSTEM—The south park commissioners levy for park purposes in the towns of South Chicago, Hyde Park and Lake.
8. WEST PARK SYSTEM—The west Chicago park commissioners levy for park purposes in the town of West Chicago.
9. LINCOLN PARK—The Lincoln park commissioners are not "corporate authorities," the Lincoln park act not having been adopted by popular vote. The levy for Lincoln park is made by the county treasurer, acting as ex officio supervisor.
10. RIDGE PARK—A small park district in Rogers Park, organized under the law providing for local park districts by popular vote. The board of five commissioners levies for the district.
11. THE NORTH SHORE PARK DISTRICT—Organized the same as Ridge Park.

By an act of the legislature approved May 11,

1901, and by the vote of the people at the spring election in 1902 the townships lying within the limits of Chicago were consolidated and the powers of the town boards transferred to the city council. This reduced the taxing boards in Chicago from eighteen to eleven as above.

HOUSE-NUMBER SYSTEM IN CHICAGO.

Sept. 1, 1909, a new house-number system went into effect in Chicago. By the terms of the ordinance passed June 22, 1908, no change was made in the old numbers in the district between the river, 12th street and the lake. Neither was any change made in the north and south streets on the south side. State and Madison streets were made base lines and all numbered streets and avenues were given the prefix north, south, east or west, according to their location with reference to these base lines. Named streets, such as Halsted street, Chicago avenue, etc., which either cross or are open on each side of either of the base lines, were given similar prefixes according to their location north, south, east or west of the base lines. Named streets open on only one side of either of the base lines were given no prefix. The basis of numbering, under the new ordinance, is every twenty feet of frontage and not every lot. To each one-eighth of a mile 100 numbers are assigned, or 800 to the mile. On north and south streets the new odd numbers are on the east side and the even numbers on the west side of the street; on east and west streets the odd numbers are on the south and the even numbers on the north side of the street.

STREETS, ALLEYS AND PAVEMENTS.

The combined length of the streets and alleys of Chicago is 4,315.55 miles. The street mileage is 2,880.66 and the alley mileage 1,434.89. Of the streets 1,674.65 miles are paved. The total of each kind of pavement in use Jan. 1, 1910, was:

CHICAGO HARBOR COMMISSION.

Jan. 6, 1908, Mayor Fred A. Busse sent a special message to the city council calling attention to the pressing need of giving careful and comprehensive consideration at the earliest possible date to the improvement of Chicago's harbor facilities and asking authority for the appointment of a commission to study the question. The authority was given on the same date and the following commission was appointed: John M. Ewen (chairman), Charles H. Conover, Frederic A. Delano, Isham Randolph, Charles H. Wacker and Aldermen Charles

M. Foell and Peter L. Hoffman. Ald. John P. Stewart was subsequently added to the committee. Prof. C. E. Merriam was made secretary and J. Paul Goode, George C. Sikes and George G. Tunell were appointed by the commission to make special investigations. The commission made its report to the mayor and aldermen in March, 1909. A summary prepared by the commission itself of its recommendations will be found in The Daily News Almanac and Year-Book for 1910, page 530.

CHICAGO CHARTER MOVEMENT.

What was known as the Chicago charter convention was organized in 1905, the first session being held Dec. 12, that year. Milton J. Foreman was president, Alexander H. Revell vice-president, M. L. McKinley secretary and Henry Barrett Chamberlin assistant secretary. The convention was made up of delegates chosen by or representing the mayor, city council, governor, assembly, board of education, sanitary trustees, county board, public library board and the Chicago park boards. Its purpose was to frame a comprehensive, simple and elastic charter for the city of Chicago to be submitted to the state legislature for consideration. The work was completed and the charter taken to Springfield in the early part of 1907, where it was introduced in each house of the legislature and referred to the appropriate committees.

Some of the main features of the charter were these: Consolidation in the municipal government of Chicago of the power vested in the board of education, township, park and other local governments within the city; submission of propositions to popular vote; aldermen to be elected once in four years; raising of adequate revenue by the issue of bonds and by other means; the power to own, maintain and operate all public utilities in the city, including intramural railroads, subways and tunnels, and telephone, telegraph, gas, electric lighting, heating, refrigerating and power plants; the parks to be under the management of a city department of parks; the public-school system to be a department of the city government and under the control of a board of education of fifteen members appointed by the mayor for terms of three years; the public library to be managed by a board of nine directors appointed by the mayor for terms of six years.

Several radical changes were made by the legislature, one of the most important being the substitution of the old primary system for the one proposed. Another was the redistricting of the city into fifty wards, one alderman to be elected from each. These and other changes aroused much opposition, but the charter was passed May 12, 1907. According to the terms of the act it was submitted to the voters of Chicago at a special election held Sept. 17, 1907, when it was defeated by a vote of 121,935 nays to 59,786 yeas.

Early in 1909 the charter convention resumed work and prepared eleven bills for submission to the legislature, in the hope that some at least might be enacted into law. These separate bills included the principal points in the charter defeated by the referendum vote of 1907.

The charter bills encountered opposition from the start, not only from the senators and assemblymen representing districts outside of Chicago, but also from some of the city members, and, while favorable action was taken in committee and also in each house on the consolidation measure and on one or two of the other propositions, no legislation was secured and the work of the convention again went for nothing.

The museum building upon the lake front, first occupied in 1893, has never been closed for a day. It is open to the public every week day from 9 to 5, Sundays from 1 to 5. Admission is free to members and their families at all times, and free to all upon Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and legal holidays. Upon other days the entrance fee is 25 cents.

All friends of art are invited to become members. Annual members pay a fee of $10 a year. Life members pay $100 and are thenceforth exempt from dues. Governing members pay $100 upon election and $25 a year thereafter. Upon the payment of $400 governing members become governing life members and are thenceforth exempt from dues. All members are entitled, with their families and visiting friends, to admission to all exhibitions, receptions, public lectures and entertainments given by the Art Institute and to the use of the Ryerson reference library upon art.

MUSEUM.

The Art museum now ranks among the first three or four in the country. It contains excellent examples of the old masters and of the modern painters. There is also a large and comprehensive collection of sculptures; this contains reproductions of the work of the greatest sculptors, ancient and modern. There is an extensive collection of architectural casts. The museum possesses an admirable collection of original drawings for illustration. There is also a collection of etchings and steel engravings. There is a constant succession of passing exhibitions of the best modern art, twenty or more in a year. All students enjoy the full use of the collections and the library. The advantage of having these great collections located in the same building cannot be overestimated. The number of visitors to the art galleries during the year ending June 1, 1910, was 546,775.

The school of instruction in the practice and theory of art includes departments of painting, sculpture, decorative designing, illustration, architecture and normal instruction. There are day and evening classes for beginners and for advanced pupils. Special classes on Saturdays. The instructors number about 80 and the pupils will average about 3,000 a year. The principle upon which the school is founded is to maintain in the highest efficiency the severe practice of academic drawing and painting, from life, from the antique and from objects, and around this practice, as a living stem, to group the various departments of art education.

The school is conducted upon the most modern methods. The classes are organized upon the French "atelier and concours" system. Constant communication and interchange are kept up with European art centers, and a ready hearing is given to all new methods and theories. Students may enter at any time. The tuition rates are as follows:

UNION STOCK YARDS, CHICAGO.

"The Live-Stock Market of the World."

The Chicago Union Stock Yards is the greatest meat market of any kind in the world. It consists of about 500 acres covered with pens, viaducts, buildings, railroad tracks, etc., the whole paved with brick and divided into blocks and streets like a city, and providing all necessary facilities for doing an enormous business in receiving, unloading, yarding, feeding, watering, buying, selling, weighing, delivering and shipping live animals. It is supplied by twenty-two states of the union. There were received and sold on this market last year 14,491,372 animals for the stupendous sum of $323,607,543.

Chicago's great meat-packing district, familiarly known as "Packingtoun," is located back of and adjoining the Union Stock Yards proper, and consists of a nearly equal territory covered with immense brick buildings and a maze of railway tracks, all devoted to the slaughter, refrigeration, manufacture and distribution in refrigerator cars of meat products and by-products for consumption throughout the world. There are also a number of independent packing plants located outside of "Packingtoun."

These two districts, one embracing the live-stock market and the other the meat-packing interests, while in a large measure interdependent, are controlled and operated under entirely separate management and ownerships. More than 45,000 men are employed in and about the Stock Yards and packing houses, and the daily volume of transactions reaches into the millions.

All stock reaching Chicago is sold, generally, on day of arrival. None is forwarded in first hands. All sales are for cash on day of sale, followed by immediate delivery of the property sold. A considerable portion of the daily receipts is sold for shipment alive, mainly to eastern slaughtering points and to the seaboard for export. Eastern buyers constantly compete with the large packers for the daily offerings, thus furnishing at all times abundant healthy competition among buyers. Over 100 established commission firms and corporations are engaged in selling live stock on the market regularly for nonresident shippers and producers.

Since 1900 there has been marketed and sold in Chicago a yearly average of over 16,000,000 animals, exceeding $300,000,000 in value, or about one-half the total combined receipts of the six principal live-stock markets of the United States which means that a daily average of over 1,000 carloads of live stock, of an average value exceeding $1,000 per carload, or an average of more than $1,000,000 worth of animals, are disposed of every business day of the year on the Chicago live-stock market.

FIGURES SHOW ENORMOUS BUSINESS.

The Chicago Union Stock Yards was the first great centralized live-stock market, and since its establishment in 1866 has handled the following number of animals:

FIELD MUSEUM OF NATURAL HISTORY.

President—Stanley Field.

Vice-Presidents—Martin A. Ryerson, Watson F. Blair.

Director of the Museum and Secretary—Frederick J. V. Skiff.

Treasurer—Byron L. Smith.

Auditor and Assistant Secretary—D. C. Davies.

The Field museum of natural history, established in 1894 at the close of the World's Columbian exposition of 1893, occupies the temporary building erected for fine arts in Jackson park, the exposition site. The founding of a scientific institution of this character in Chicago was made possible by the gift of $1,000,000 by Marshall Field, who on his death (Jan. 18, 1906) bequeathed the institution a further $800,000, $400,000 for the erection of a permanent building and $400,000 for endowment. In addition $500,000 has been donated by other individuals and there is an annual income from other sources than endowment of about $25,000. The citizens of Chicago have confirmed legislative provision for the levy of a tax for the maintenance of the museum when a new building shall have been erected, which it is estimated will eventually produce approximately $100,000 per annum.

The nucleus of the exhibition material was gathered by gift and purchase at the World's Columbian exposition. Most of this material, however, has since been rearranged, readapted or discarded. Several departments created at the organization have been abandoned, until, after the lapse of eleven years and the expenditure of over $2,000,000, the museum is now divided into four departments—namely, anthropology, botany, geology and zoology. Many expeditions for the purpose of obtaining study, exhibition and exchange material and data have been dispatched to all parts of North America and to different countries. The results of these expeditions, investigations and researches have been published by the museum from time to time, which publications have been distributed to kindred societies and institutions both at home and abroad. Two courses of free lectures are given annually. The museum has a working library of about 63,000 titles, an extensive exchange system, fully equipped departmental laboratories, a herbarium of 260,000 sheets, study collections in mammals and birds reaching many thousand specimens, a large two-story taxidermy section, a well-equipped printing shop, illustration studios and assaying and lapidary rooms. In North American ethnology, in the world's mineralogy, in economic botany the museum is particularly prominent, while its series of mounted mammals furnish examples of advanced museum methods. The present main building covers nine acres and is open to the public on all days except Christmas and Thanksgiving. An admission fee of 25 cents is charged except on Saturdays and Sundays, when admission is free to all. Students, scholars and teachers are admitted free at all times.

The museum is incorporated under state law and the administrative control rests in a board of trustees with president, secretary, etc. The executive of the museum is the director, under whom there are four head curators with divisional assistant curators, preparators, etc. The entire museum records, the accessions system, the historical files, publications and supplies are in charge of a recorder.

AMERICAN FENCE

Square Mesh, Hinged-Joints (patented) with Flexible Stays

A square mesh fence of weight, great strength and durability. Large wires in both the horizontals and the uprights, and the whole fabric woven together with the American hinged joint (patented), making the most substantial and flexible union mechanically possible. Both wires are positively locked and firmly held against side slip and yet are free to act like a hinge in yielding to pressure and returning quickly to place without bending or injuring the metal. Many years of the hardest usage in the field have demonstrated the value of the American forms of construction, justly entitling it to be called a resilient wall of steel solid and enduring.

ELLWOOD FENCE

Diamond Mesh, Elastic Cables

The steel in Ellwood fence is especially made for the purpose from carefully selected stock; it is hard, elastic, tough and springy. The line wires, composed of two or more wires twisted into cables, give each individual wire the shape of an elongated coiled spring. The fence is therefore sufficiently elastic to take care of expansion and contraction, and yet so rigid when properly stretched as to prevent sagging. The small and permanent mesh is made by weaving one continuous wire throughout the fabric. The mesh or stay wires are so interwoven that slipping is impossible. The triangular truss is the strongest form of construction known; for this reason, Ellwood fence will stand the hardest usage and still retain its shape.

ROYAL FENCE

Square Mesh, Continuous Stays, with Royal Loop

Is made of heavy, hard, stiff steel wire, the strongest and best possible to produce for fencing purposes. The stay or upright wires are continuous from top to bottom of the fence and secured to the horizontal wires by the Royal loop. Being wrapped around the horizontal wires entirely within the tension curves, the stays are rigidly held in place and side slipping prevented. The whole forms a fabric of the greatest strength and ample flexibility, the best of the continuous stay fences.

ANTHONY FENCE

Square Mesh, Rigid Stays, with Anthony Knot

The upright and horizontal wires are tied with the famous Anthony knot, the smallest fence knot made. Machinery of special design has been brought to such a degree of perfection that the most nicely balanced woven wire fabric is produced, each wire drawing with mathematical precision under equal tension and uniformly even with the others. This brings into play, under stress of action, all the wires within a considerable radius of the center of contact, affording to an extraordinary degree great resistance combined with flexibility.

CHICAGO'S BRIDGE SYSTEM.

The first ferry across the river was established in 1823, where the Lake street bridge now is. In 1833 a floating bridge of logs was in operation just north of the present Randolph street bridge. A foot bridge over the north branch was built in 1832 at Kinzie street. The first drawbridge over the main branch of the river was placed at Dearborn street in 1834. In 1854 a pivot bridge was built at Clark street. These and other bridges of that time were built by the persons most directly benefited by them. It was not until 1857 that a bridge was built entirely at the city's expense. This was the structure over the south branch at Madison street. It cost $30,000. Until 1872 the swing bridges were turned by hand, but in the year named steam power was installed on the Dearborn street structure and later on most of the other bridges in the downtown section were similarly equipped. In 1895 the Rush, Lake and Van Buren street bridges were operated by electric motors. The last named structure, which was opened for traffic in that year, was the first of the Scherzer rolling type. The Halsted street lift bridge, the first and only one of its kind, was opened in 1894 and was operated by steam. It cost the city $242,850.

There are at the present time in Chicago ninety-one bridges over the river, of which sixty-nine are maintained by the city and twenty-two by railroad companies. There are thirty-four viaducts of various kinds in the city.

CHICAGO SCHOOL CENSUS OF MAY 2, 1910.

Taken under the supervision of W. L. Bodine for the board of education.

ADULT POPULATION.

Owing to the fact that 1910 was the year of the decennial census of the United States taken by the government, the board of education did not take a count of the inhabitants 21 years of age and over. The supervisor of the school census, however, estimated the total population of the city at 2,100,000, exclusive of the large number of people living in the suburbs. He arrived at this result by making deductions for deaths and using a multiple of a trifling over 2% applied to the minor population of 1915 to include all the inhabitants, plus 1 percent of the total population of 1905 for possible skins.

Why Do Men Fail?

¶ THE SUPREME PROBLEM OF LIFE for you is, how to get money in sufficient quantity to make you independent before your hair turns gray and your eyes grow dim.

¶ The struggle for money is "the struggle for existence" and a man can scarcely hope to be victorious therein except in the days of his strength and prime.

¶ We are all fighting for money (because money means nearly all that's worth while) but few there be who attain it.

¶ Now, why should that be so? Why are there so many failures? The answer is simple: The majority are failures because they do not think right! They are in a state of discord rather than harmony with the natural Laws that govern moneymaking and the creation of wealth.

¶ Is that your case? Is your mind negative? If so you must seek immediate remedy. You must remove the blight of wrong thinking; and for that purpose we strongly recommend to your attention a splendid little book, entitled

"THE LAW OF FINANCIAL SUCCESS"

¶ It is as full of good things as an egg is full of nutriment. It is the essence of moneymaking boiled down for busy people.

¶ Send for it at once. It only costs ten cents and it will make a new man of you. It will teach you how to be a winner—how to escape the hell of poverty—the worst of all hells.

¶ We honestly declare it is worth no end of money to any man who is desirous of properly directing the forces within him for his own enrichment.

¶ If you have the strength and determination to be a winner, get this book. Get it at once. Follow our advice. Don't put off till to-morrow what you should do to-day. Fill in the coupon and the book is yours by the next mail, and it may be the making of you. If you don't like it your money will be returned; you run no risk. Special Paper Bound Edition of 16 chapters, 104 pages, only 10 cents. Over 150,000 copies sold. ¶ Don't miss the tide that leads to fortune.

SINCE November 1, 1906, a large proportion of the garbage of Chicago has been treated in a reduction plant, built at a cost of over $500,000, and operated by the Chicago Reduction Company.

The reduction plant is located at 39th and Iron streets, a distance of 4 1/4 miles to the southwest of the center of the city. It has a frontage of 380 feet on the Chicago River. A side track from the Chicago Junction Railway (Belt Line) enters its grounds. By laying a short distance of track it will become accessible also by the street car lines of the city. This furnishes transportation facilities by water, railway, street car or vehicle which are unsurpassed.

The grounds cover 3 1/2 acres, the buildings occupying about two-thirds of this space. The plant comprises the following:

A dock 120 ft. long by 80 ft. wide, about 25 ft. above the river level.

A receiving building, 70x80 ft., in plan two stories high.

3 drier buildings, 80x80 ft., two stories high.

A naphtha extraction building, 38x65 ft., four stories high.

A naphtha storage building, 25x30 ft., a sub-basement.

A milling building, 20x40 ft., four stories high.

A boiler house, 40x46 ft., two stories high.

An office, 20x20 ft., one story high, with a sub-basement.

The principal buildings are of modern and permanent construction, being built of brick and re-enforced concrete throughout, making them fireproof and sanitary. They are so designed as to furnish ample light by day, and are generously equipped with electric light for night labor. They form a complete series from start to finish of process, and are built with intermediate spaces so that each building may be duplicated and the capacity of the plant doubled, if required. The present capacity provides for 750 tons of garbage daily. The motive power is electricity, each apparatus being equipped with a separate electric motor.

THE CHICAGO CITY RAILWAY COMPANY

The Chicago City Railway Company is completing its fourth year of operation under the "traction-settlement" ordinance of February 11, 1907. During this period, the company not only has expended approximately $20,000,000 for reconstruction and betterments, but has set the pace for all traction companies in the country which are endeavoring to modernize their equipment and to bring their service up to the highest notch of engineering and operating skill.

The notable successes achieved by the Chicago City Railway Company, as the foremost representative of the "new school" of street railway operation, are due primarily to its progressive policies and to the energy and fidelity with which they have been enforced. These policies may be briefly summarized as follows:

- 1—To perfect every part of its plant and system so as to maintain cars on the street at the maximum of practical efficiency.
- 2—To co-ordinate its lines and to systematize its service in such manner as to meet not only the immediate requirements of its own patrons but also to serve the entire City of Chicago.
- 3—To co-operate in a practical way with the public in solving the complex traffic problems of the city, and in developing its own service with special reference to the safety, comfort and health of those who use its cars.

- 4—To develop along parallel lines the interests of patrons, public, municipality and holders of company securities. These interests become inimical only when they work at cross-purposes. None profits by poor, irregular or duplicated service, accidents, waste, bad management, wrangling or litigation. A steady, well-balanced service, arranged with reference to actual demands of the traffic and supported by all the parties in interest, means a satisfied patronage, increased revenues for city and company, and a street car system which will expand with the growth of the city.
- 5—To deal with its employes frankly, liberally and justly.

The Chicago City Railway Company operates, in addition to its own lines, the properties of the Calumet & South Chicago Railway Company and The Southern Street Railway Company, representing an aggregate mileage of about 400. City Railway lines cover mainly the South Division of the city of Chicago, while the Calumet system, which extends as far south and east as Hammond, Ind., serves important industrial centers, including South Chicago, Pullman, West Pullman, Whiting and South Deering. Upwards of $9,000,000 is being expended on rehabilitation and extension of these tributary properties. The "immediate rehabilitation" work of the Chicago City Railway Company, as by ordinance provided, was completed on April 15, 1910.

Street cars operated by the Chicago City Railway Company serve the most important industrial centers in the city. They also run to Washington and Jackson Parks, the "Midway," and to nearly all the fresh air resorts in the South Division. Calumet cars, operated on 75th and 79th streets, carry passengers to the only free open beaches in this part of the city. The stockyards and drainage canal are also places of interest most accessible by City Railway lines.

Special attention is called to the modern funeral car service of the Calumet & South Chicago Railway Company, which was installed in 1910. Funeral coaches, such as illustrated in these pages, may be chartered for the transportation of funeral parties from any point on or adjacent to the Calumet & South Chicago Railway, the Chicago City Railway, or the Hammond, Whiting and East Chicago Railway to and from the following cemeteries: Oakwoods, Mount Greenwood, Mount Olivet and Mount Hope. For reservations or information concerning rates and service, apply to Calumet & South Chicago Railway Company, Transportation Department, 9314 Drexel avenue, telephone Burnside 22; or, First National Bank Building, telephone Randolph 581.

For the convenience of patrons and public, the Chicago City Railway Company presents herewith tables indicating routes and terminals of cars operated by it, including a condensed time-table showing "owl-car" or night service.

Three Years' Record

OF THE

Chicago Railways Company

Operating on the North, West and Northwest Sides.

$30,000,000 expended for rehabilitation up to Nov. 1, 1910

CARS—One thousand new first-class Pay-as-You-Enter cars in operation. Three hundred and forty additional cars of this type under construction. Fifty all-steel cars in use on Van Buren street line.

TRACK—Two hundred and twenty-three miles of new track built, heavy modern grooved rails laid in concrete at a cost of $50,000 a mile. Seventeen miles of extensions built in new territory. Sixteen miles of track built for the Consolidated Traction Company, now a part of the Chicago Railways system, in addition to the mileage stated.

BUILDINGS—Fifteen new buildings, some of them costing from $200,000 to $300,000. New car stations have been erected at the Limits, on North Clark street; at Twenty-fifth and Leavitt streets; at Kedzie avenue and Van Buren street; in Lawndale; at Lincoln and Sheffield avenues, and at West North and 48th avenues. New substations furnishing electrical power have been built at 25th and Leavitt streets; Lill and Sheffield avenues; Grand and 40th avenues; Milwaukee avenue and Cleaver street, and Illinois street and LaSalle avenue. Extensive shop buildings and additions and other important structures have been erected.

ELECTRICAL DEPARTMENT has laid 746 miles of conduit, installed 219 miles of trolley wire and set back of the curb 230 miles of poles, in addition to a large amount of other work.

TUNNELS—The Van Buren street tunnel was opened for operation in October, and the operation of cars through it has greatly relieved congestion in the loop district. Cars will be running the first of the year through the new Washington street tunnel. Work on the LaSalle street tunnel is well advanced.

ACQUIRES SYSTEM OF CHICAGO CONSOLIDATED TRACTION COMPANY—On October 10, 1910, the Chicago Railways Company secured a franchise from the City of Chicago for 123 miles of Consolidated Traction Company's track within the city limits. This system will be rehabilitated with the same thoroughness as the lines of the Chicago Railways Company. The tracks will be rebuilt and new equipment provided. Work has started on the new track on Belmont and Milwaukee avenues and West Madison street. The rehabilitation will be continued vigorously this year.

CITIZENS OF CHICAGO:

We have expended $30,000,000 during the last three years for new cars, new track, new buildings and general equipment. We have complied with the "immediate rehabilitation" requirements of our traction system. Does it meet with your approval?

CHICAGO RAILWAYS COMPANY

The Chicago Railways Company, operating 443 miles on the north, west and northwest sides, feels that it has established a world-beating record during the three-year rehabilitation period terminating in February, 1911. It is a record to inspire pride and elation and satisfaction over work well done.

The Company has more than carried out the spirit and letter of its franchise contract with the city. It has rebuilt its system, and the people—some millions of them—are getting the benefit every hour of the day in improved transportation service.

It has expended vast sums of money, engaged many thousands of workmen; its officers and employes have devoted their fullest energies during the transformation of a system somewhat run down, somewhat dilapidated, and somewhat obsolete into an up-to-date traction system.

BIG VALUE FOR A NICKEL.

The resident of Chicago gets more value for a nickel in street-car transportation than in any other city in the land. He is getting through-route rides—twenty-miles long, if he desires—and universal-transfer privileges, with transportation in handsome, luxurious, roomy, well lighted, heated, ventilated street cars, costing six thousand dollars each, manned by the highest paid trainmen, running over the highest type of grooved rails, the track costing approximately $50,000 a mile.

Mr. Citizen of Chicago is being transported from the heart of the city in street cars that are superior in comfort to privately owned automobiles, to the uttermost parts of Chicago; from the clamor and confusion and hurly-burly of the congested business district to the frontiers of the city, embracing 190 square miles of territory, to the region of fresh air, sunshine, roomy yards and cozy houses and cheap real estate. The rate of fare is infinitesimal. It is the cheapest thing in Chicago.

It must be apparent that all of these urban transportation facilities (and nowhere has the standard of living advanced more than in street car accommodations) cost money—considerable money—and as has been stated, the Chicago Railways Company, in order to give the people of this city a perfect traction system, had expended up to the first of November the comfortable sum of $30,000,000

CARRIES 1,500,000 PASSENGERS DAILY.

The passengers of the Chicago Railways Company, something like 1,500,000 every day in the year, have seen the evidences of the rehabilitated system, and can tell you where the money has gone. They ride in the new cars, over the new track, and they can observe the great buildings erected for housing the vehicles and supplying the electric current that makes the wheels go round. They cannot fail to be impressed with the provisions made for their comfort at the "Limits station," where a large waiting room is situated, with tiled floor, white and green enameled brick trimmings, public toilet rooms and station seats. covered arcade enables passengers to transfer from one car line to another without regard to inclement weather.

The Chicago Railways Company now has in operation over 1,000 first-class new Pay-as-You-Enter street cars, and will, within the next three months, have a total of 1,340 of these comfortable modern vehicles, equipping every line upon its system. The cars of the Chicago Railways Company have been constructed by the Pullman company with the same care, as to details, that marks the sleeping cars of that concern. Not that passengers are supposed to do any sleeping in the street cars, even when straggling home in the early morning hours! But your native born and adopted residents of Chicago insist upon being comfortable and roar when they are not, and on this account the Chicago Railways Company's cars have been built with wide aisles and wide seats that will accommodate two corpulent persons sitting side by side, and with strong electric lights, so placed that passengers can read their newspapers without straining their eyes, and with wide windows so that the view is unobstructed; and with roomy front platforms for smokers; and with perfect motor equipment—four motors to the car—so there may be no annoying delays resulting from breakdowns—so that the journey in the street cars may be accomplished with as little delay as may be compatible with safety of operation.

VENTILATED STREET CARS.

The later street cars that the Chicago Railways Company is receiving are provided with a perfect ventilating system in which the stale air is pumped out by means of a fan operated by an electric motor, while a new supply of air enters through the car floor. In winter the air is warmed by passing over the electric heaters. So you see the new street cars are more scientifically ventilated than the average home. The new vehicles are all supplied with steel wheels which are practically noiseless in operation and do not become worn into that instrument of torture known as the flat wheel.

In addition to cars of the prepayment type, the company operates hundreds of other cars, so that during the rush hour the Chicago citizens come near realizing their ambition—to all get down to work in the morning and all go home in the evening at the same time. It is quite likely that in Continental Europe there are more seats available during the rush hours, but in Continental Europe one isn't in so much of a hurry. Furthermore, the people of Chicago wouldn't stand for European street cars on the back streets. They want 'em long and wide and imposing looking. Nothing else will do.

But something else besides street cars is needed in the operation of an up-to-date system. These new cars of the Chicago Railways Company weigh 53,000 pounds each—requiring some power to run them—and it was obvious that the old style of rail wouldn't sustain their weight very long, or successfully. Moreover, the traction ordinances required grooved rails of a specific type. So, all over the city, as soon as the traction ordinance had been accepted, the company began to tear up the old rails—in some places they were good enough to have survived for several years—and replace them with grooved rails of the girder type, 9½ inches deep, and weighing 129 pounds to the yard. After tearing out the old cable tracks, an arduous task in itself, hard on back and morals, the trackmen made deep excavations. Rolling the bed of the excavation thoroughly, the next step was to lay a foundation of crushed stone and then concrete, surrounding the chemically treated ties. This type of construction, with which Chicago people have become so familiar during the last three years, costs approximately $50,000 a mile, which includes the paving of the right of way. In many instances the track work cost even more when the company was obliged to pave the street for some distance outside the right of way, in order that the contour of the street might be preserved. In hundreds of places on the lines of the Chicago Railways Company there are street intersections where the track and pavement represent an outlay of $25,000 or more for each layout of special work. These new rails are welded together by electricity, and the joints at intersections where special work has been installed are of solid nickel steel.

At the close of 1910 the company had built 223 miles of new track, including seventeen miles of extensions. In addition sixteen miles of new track had been constructed for the Consolidated Traction Company.

Rehabilitation also necessitated the installation of many miles of trolley wire, the setting back of trolley poles on 250 miles of street, the laying of over 700 miles of single duct cable conduit and the installation of cable therein for the transmission of electric current and a large amount of other work done that wouldn't be of much interest except to a street railroad man or an electrician.

Originally, when the electric street cars succeeded the cable rope, which in its turn had replaced the horse cars, the electrical power was supplied by power houses of the company. The modern idea appears to be to purchase this power in large quantities from a central electric plant and transmit it over the railways' system through substations. The Chicago Railways Company has a number of these substations situated at convenient places on its lines. The exterior of the buildings presents an ornamental type of architecture, being constructed of vitrified brick. The electric current is delivered at the substations at high voltage and reduced by means of rotary converters to the voltage required for the operation of electric cars.

The building rehabilitation of the Chicago Railways Company necessitated the construction of a number of new car stations, shops and other structures, some of them representing an outlay of more than $300,000 each. All of the car stations are fireproof, built of vitrified brick and concrete, are an architectural credit to their respective neighborhoods, and are not only designed so that the street cars may be most conveniently handled, but the greatest pains have been taken for the comfort of the men.

During the last three years $2,554,636.47 has been paid to the City by the Chicago Railways Company, being 55 per cent of its net receipts.

WHAT MOVING PICTURES ARE GIVING TO THE WORLD

A Moral and Educational Tonic for the Young and Old Alike

THE great Selig Polyscope Co. of Chicago has gradually forged its way to the foremost position in the great struggle for supremacy in the moving picture field and stands to-day without a peer. Ten years ago we can remember Mr. W. N. Selig, the founder and president of the Selig Poly-scope Co., now the most extensive picture manufacturer in the world, struggling for a livelihood in a small room at 43 Peck Court. To-day his studios and factories cover many acres and beautifully gardenel grounds surround them, which makes possible the wonderful attainments accredited to the film wizard. The main plant and studio is in Chicago, extending from Irving Park Boulevard to Byron Street on the south, and from Western Avenue to Claremont on the east, with buildings containing more than 80,000 square feet of occupied floor space. Another large plant is in Los Angeles, California, also camera squads in South America, South Sea Islands, Europe and Africa. The extensive offices are at 45 Randolph Street, Chicago, occupying a floor space of 80x130.

Mr. Selig has recently opened a foreign market for the great Diamond S films, the distributing stations being in London, Paris, Berlin, Moscow, Johannesburg and Sydney. Chicago people are strong supporters of the moving picture shows. There are 600 moving picture theaters in Chicago and fifty vaudeville houses which exhibit them in their performances. An estimate of the daily attendance at the moving picture shows is difficult to obtain, but 150,000 is considered a minimum. $15,000 is considered the approximate sum expended daily in Chicago for this form of entertainment.

Ten prominent writers are in the employ of the Selig Polyscope Co. Their work requires a skill which it is asserted is superior to that employed in the writing of stories, because they have to depend to such a large extent on the details of movement and expression in their scenes rather than on conversational methods. When a historic scene is to be depicted they study the literature of the day and then depict accurately scenes that will give as nearly a faithful representation as possible.

The decision of the Supreme Court affirming the right of the mayor to censor the films and pictures exhibited in the cheaper as well as the more pretentious theaters cannot fail to gratify those of us who believe that the five-cent moving picture shows are possibilities for a great deal of good in the community. Of rapid growth, these novel places of amusement have undoubtedly filled a popular need. Otherwise their ubiquity and marvelous increase in variety and number is inexplicable. That they are a paying venture merely confirms the fact that there is a demand for just the kind of entertainment they provide. Nor is it difficult to understand wherein the peculiar attraction of these cinematographic displays lies. They do more than fill an idle hour. But did they even do only this they would have to be given credentials as purveyors of legitimate amusement. Hours unemployed are the devil's opportunity. A well-known proverb has taught us to know and to remember this.

They who have had dealings with the young need not to be reminded of the far-reaching applications of this observation. Delinquency among adolescents is in most cases directly traceable to idleness. Hours of relaxation are beset with perils. If not properly utilized they are apt to breed and to encourage vicious indulgence. Public playgrounds, furnishing facilities for athletic and other healthful and helpful games; social centers, providing meeting grounds for social intercourse on a high plane, and thus affording all the attractions of the dance halls without their deplorable and reprehensible accessories, are practical applications of the wisdom phased in the popular saw concerning Satan's delight in idle hands. The moving picture show with the immoral films eliminated is a valuable member of the company of modern devices to so direct the leisure hours of the young and old alike as to prevent their being wasted in frivolous and pernicious excitement of demoralizing entertainments.

Even now the discovery has been made and amply verified that the five and ten cent theater with its cinematographic plays is a most powerful rival of the saloon. The saloon has often been defended on the score that it is the poor man's club. There is a strong basis for the plea. But the experience of recent days in connection with the introduction of these picture theaters indicates that the best method of counteracting the attraction of the saloon as a place of recreation for the clubless is to provide amusements for them at a price which is within the reach of the ordinary patrons of the drinking resort.

Saloonkeepers have reported that their transient trade has fallen off in districts well supplied with these shows. This proves that the new departure should be encouraged. It has come to stay. Its potentiality for good is not to be doubted. Efforts should be made to lift their exhibits to highest planes of instruction. They have a hold on the general public. They fill a need in the economy of the community. In measure as they will reach out for better effects than mere spectacular and sensational reproductions of casual occurrences they will develop into agencies of great value in the domain of education and culture.

The educational value of travel is recognized. As the German song has it, they to whom God desires to show favor are permitted to see his wide world. Contact with the people and races of distant lands is the most efficient antidote to national pride and arrogance. It is the counterirritant to narrow prejudice. It cannot but open the eye to the truth that beauty and virtue are not the monopoly of one race or nation. Goodness and strength are at home in the habitations of our antipodes as they are in our cities and villages. What of difference in the habits and situation of other people a visit to their country brings into view can only lead to the better appreciation of the advantages offered by our own civilization, and thus be an incentive to patriotism, or it will arouse the desire to emulate the example of others when their mode of life and their methods of law are seen to be better than our own.

But travel is denied to most men. They are the minority who may roam through God's world. Modern inventiveness has therefore shown commendable activity in contriving devices for the purpose of enabling those deprived of the privilege of travel to drink in the beauties of far off zones and to become acquainted with their people. The travelogue is in very truth a personally conducted tour without the expense and the discomfort of the actual excursion. Yet even this substitute fails to reach the masses. The picture theater opens to them the opportunity which travel and the travelogue mean to offer the more favored. As such their advent is a glorious earnest for great achievements. If well selected their program cannot but wield a mighty influence making for wider information and deeper culture placed within the ready reach of all.

The value of the new theater as a supplement to the course in history and geography given in the public school cannot be overestimated. It has been the ambition of modern pedagogy to make instruction vital. Textbooks are poor apologies for vital and vitalizing knowledge. In all well appointed schools the screen and lantern have been welcomed as powerful helpers. Yet the school hours are few and the subjects many and varied. Even the lantern slide lacks the element of vitality which motion alone can supply.

For this reason the moving picture show promises to be a most valuable adjunct to the schools. Soon a new President will be inaugurated. Yesterday King George paid a visit to Emperor William. Soon our fleet will sail through the great Panama Canal on its voyage around the world. Sicily devastated by earthquake still calls for sympathy. These and many more happenings will fill the columns of the newspapers. Their descriptions convey information, but for all that they are deprived of the breath of life. The cinematograph has mastered the secret of power. It invites us to cheer the pageant or to shudder at the catastrophe as though we had been standing in the very street over which the procession passed or which the disaster overturned. It supplements the account in the newspaper. It vivifies it. It brings home the essential unity of all dwellers on earth. It brings history and geography within the very door of the house in which we live.

Such propinquity to all that happens on our planet, such intimacy with the great actors on the stage of time, the leaders of the nations, such acquaintance with the inhabitants of our earth and in the habiliments of life cannot but make for broader culture and tenderer sympathy. The picture show is indeed of good augury for the quickening of popular intelligence and—popular conscience. Both negatively by counteracting the allurements of lower amusements and positively by spreading knowledge and insight it is to be welcomed and encouraged as an institution doing good in its generation. With these great and glorious objects in view, the upbuilding of manhood and womanhood as a reward for a life's energy, the great redoubtable Selig stands as a beacon from whom radiates, in fountains of knowledge, the greatest educational factor ever given the world.
